JFK TO GREET HIM

Shepard To Get Homage, Honors In U.S. Capital

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's capital will roar a hero's welcome Monday to astronaut Alan B. Shepard Jr.—and it may well outdo anything yet heard in this city where celebrities are often seen and cheered.

Led by President Kennedy, the big names in government will do the handshaking and medal-pinning while ordinary folk will peer and cheer as the first American to invade space drives slowly along famed Pennsylvania Avenue.

BIG MOMENT

There is to be no formal parade but the big moment for the mass of Washingtonians will come when Shepard is driven slowly along Pennsylvania Avenue from the White House to the Capitol—reversing the route of the great presidential inaugural processions.

The plan is to take about 15 minutes to move the official party over the mile and a quarter from the executive mansion to the Capitol. The trip will start around 11:15 a.m., Eastern Daylight Time—and it's a cinch thousands of downtown workers will go to lunch early on Monday.

Apart from the office and store employes, it is certain that passage of the first American space traveler will be a powerful magnet and there's no telling how many of metropolitan Washington's two-million-plus inhabitants will be drawn to "the avenue."

But police are making preparations to handle throngs which may well come close to matching the hundreds of thousands who line this route for inaugural parades.

The revised schedule for the day calls for arrival of Shepard and his six fellow members of the Mercury astronaut team at

BATON ROUGE (AP) — The Louisiana Legislature opens a 30-day fiscal legislature at noon Monday, with some economy-bent members seeking tighter control over the way state school money is handed out.

New Center To Aid JFK With Crises

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The State Department Saturday disclosed that a round-the-clock command post has been set up to help President Kennedy deal faster with crises like those that erupted in Cuba and Laos.

It said a new "special operations" center will be manned on a 24-hour basis to sift minute-by-minute U. S. intelligence data and make sure that Kennedy's orders are being carried out.

HEADS CENTER

Theodore C. Achilles, former State Department counselor, was picked to head the nerve center. Kennedy's brother-in-law, 33-year-old Stephen E. Smith, was named as special assistant to Achilles.

It was the latest in a series of steps by the President to overhaul U. S. intelligence operations in the wake of the ill-fated Cuban invasion.

Kennedy has named former Army Chief of Staff Maxwell Taylor to conduct a study of paramilitary operations which include intelligence and guerrilla type activities.

Earlier this week Kennedy appointed James R. Killian, former science adviser to President Eisenhower, to head a reactivated intelligence review board.

The new unit in the State Department, formed about two weeks ago, will focus on the situations in Cuba and Communist-threatened South Viet Nam at first.

Officials said the permanent staff of the special operations center will include representatives of defense and state departments and the Central Intelligence Agency. It is possible, they said, that a representative of the U. S. Information Agency may be included.

The operation center, according to State Department press officer Robert McCloskey, "will gather on a 24 hour basis all intelligence and operational data available to the United States government regarding situations of urgent concern."

MISSILE LINGO

Spaceman's Flight Brings New Terms

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) —Two new terms—"A-okay" and "Freedom 7"—have become part of the American language as a result of the space flight of Alan B. Shepard Jr.

"A-okay" was the word which flashed around the world while Shepard was streaking through space Friday. That was the way a Project Mercury spokesman, John Powers, reported Shepard's condition and reactions to the press gathered at Cape Canaveral.

"Freedom 7" is the code name given Shepard by his fellow astronauts. Seven is the total number of U. S. astronauts. During flight, Shepard broadcast: "This is Freedom 7." The name was painted on the spacecraft and some newsmen gave the [illegible] the same name.

When Powers shouted "A-okay" over a loudspeaker, newsmen thought these were Shepard's actual words and so were widely reported. But a study of the tape recording of his voice during the flight showed Shepard said only "okay" several times.

Powers said "A-okay" means "all-okay" in missile lingo. It is a term long used by missilemen here, especially during countdowns, to show that a certain system of a rocket is functioning properly.

Nine Persons In Store Are Held At Bay

By SARAH LITTLE
Staff Writer

A pair of stocking-masked bandits brandishing pistols robbed Weingarten's Supermarket Saturday morning of between $9,300 and $9,800.

Monroe Police Chief James C. Kelly Jr. said the duo held store manager James Patterson, custodian Miss Carrie Ann Rogers, a bread salesman and six employees at bay during the 7 a.m. robbery.

Monroe police said yesterday evening that they were working on two "hot leads" in the case and hoped to clear it up quickly.

WAIT FOR EMPLOYEES

Investigating police said the bandits gained entrance to the supermarket located at 1900 Louisville Ave. earlier during the morning and made an unsuccessful attempt to open the safe. Unable to gain entrance to the vault, they awaited the arrival of employees who could open it.

The men were both described as blond and in their 30's.

Entrance to the building was gained by climbing up the air conditioning tower, cutting a hole in the roof and through the ceiling. The pair helped themselves to a couple of quarts of milk during their wait for employees and stole their stocking masks from the clothing department of the store, police said.

Patterson, the first to arrive, came in shortly before 7 a.m., police said, and breadman Fred Thompson entered the building with him.

Employees at the scene said Patterson began checking the Sheriff Bailey Grant said that William Noah Gates, Old Natchitoches Road, West Monroe, was forced with a straight knife held to his throat to drive to the road just off Highway 34 and robbed.

A Texan who is wanted for murder in Houston was arrested along with a 25-year-old Monroe woman and charged with armed robbery and auto theft. They were Ray C. Harley Childs, alias Jack Pierce Spray, and Barbara Fowler, 24, of 1507 South Eighth St., Monroe.

Childs was also charged with resisting arrest and both were placed in the Ouachita Parish jail. Sheriff's deputies arrested the pair only three and one-half hours after being notified of the robbery. They were taken into custody at a local motel.

According to reports, Gates met Childs and his woman companion at a Monroe tavern. He said Childs asked him to drive him to West Monroe on U. S. Highway 80 to his girl friend's house, CROSSETT, Ark. (Special) — Frank Beasley of Hamburg was dead on arrival at the Health Center here after having been struck down by a pickup truck at 8 p.m. last night.

The incident occurred at the intersection of Highway 81 and 82 on the northern edge of Hamburg, Ark. The truck was driven by George Norman Swan of Hamburg, Ark.

According to witnesses, Beasley was walking on the highway and walked into the lane of traffic.

The investigating officer said Swan was not going over 30 miles per hour and no charges were filed.

Youth's Body Is Recovered On Saturday

LAKE PROVIDENCE (Special) — The body of Bobby Fraser, 19, of Monticello, was recovered about 9:30 a.m. Saturday from Lake Providence where he drowned in a Friday night boating accident.

In the boat with him were Ralph Coleman, and James Dean. They had gone to "run a trot line" and the lake waves were high. Dean and Fraser went to the front of the boat causing the waves to swamp it.

Two other youths in the party, Jimmy King and Burt Copes, had gone to a nearby restaurant on the lakefront to eat when the incident occurred.

THROWN OUT

Two of the boys in the boat were thrown out into the water by the waves and the third, Coleman, stayed in it although the boat was filling. Finally he was thrown out as the boat turned sideways.

The three first agreed to hold onto the capsized boat but then Frasier started wanting to swim to the bank, Dean and Coleman said.

The two said they begged him not to swim until they could not hear him any more, as he continued to swim away.

After about 30-45 minutes of calling for help, Dean and Coleman said they were heard by the two who had gone to eat.

King and someone he didn't know went out to the youth in another boat and brought them in.

The sheriff's department and fire department here were immediately notified and they drag the lake for Fraser's body that night. Seven boats were dragging after daylight Saturday.

His body was discovered about 50 yards from the lake's shore about halfway in the lake [illegible]

JAIL EXTENSION

Bond Issue Vote Slated Tuesday

Property owners will vote Tuesday on a proposed $300,000 bond issue to finance an extension for the Ouachita parish jail.

If approved, the extension will be located just south of Monroe off the Berg Jones Lane in the Richwood Addition. It will occupy 10 acres presently owned by Mrs. Gertie Mitchell Green and J. B. Mitchell, both of West Monroe.

The property has been offered to the parish for the purpose of a jail extension for $850 an acre. Adjacent property was recently sold by another owner to a group planning a Negro subdivision for $900 an acre and within less than one mile the city of Monroe purchased a block of land at $1,000 per acre.

All members of the law enforcement agencies, including the parish sheriff department, court officials and parish police jury have voiced approval for the move.

Plans have been publicized for the construction on the land, pending approval by the property owners, but necessarily have been made fluid enough to fit into any changes which may occur.

As proposed in the call for the bond election, the plans call for construction of two large dormitories, each of which will house 60 white and Negro inmates. Only male prisoners will be kept in the extension, all of which will be for misdemeanors, such as drunk driving, petty theft, reckless driving or other offenses which do not incur prison terms.

The plan will also have separ

Second Manned Space Shot Set For Late June

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI) — The United States will aim for a date in late June to fire its second man into space, it was learned Saturday.

Informed sources pinpointed June 26-27 as the planned target date.

The astronaut most likely will be either John H. Glenn Jr. or Virgil I. Grissom of America's seven-man corps of Mercury "space pilots."

His mission will be generally the same as that of the nation's first spaceman, Mercury teammate Alan B. Shepard Jr.—to ride a Redstone capsule about 115 miles into space and 300 miles over the Atlantic Ocean.

His chores while [illegible] through five minutes of weightlessness in space may be a little different, however. Shepard's success gave scientists more confidence that man can perform useful tasks during this period.

Basically, though, the purpose will be the same—to gain a better knowledge of this always potentially fatal environment for the years of [illegible] manned conquest ahead.

Uses Fifth Amendment On Probers

Mrs. Lannie Linton of Homer, veteran registrar of Claiborne Parish, charged the legislation setting up the fact-finding group was passed in a "hate the South atmosphere" unparalleled since the Reconstruction era.

SETS PRECEDENT

A commission spokesman said it was the first time a witness under oath had invoked the Fifth Amendment in the nearly four-year life of the body.

"If you refuse to answer, it's useless to proceed," said commission chairman John Hannah, president of Michigan State University.

She was excused without further questioning.

The commission ended a probe into alleged discrimination against Negroes who attempted to register in several Louisiana parishes. The Louisiana investigation started more than two years ago.

Mrs. Linton filed a statement through her counsel, Dist. Atty. Fred L. Jackson of Homer. She said she had not been advised of the nature of the accusations against her, had not been told who her accusers were, and had not been faced by her accusers.

She claimed her constitutional rights were denied and that the commission asked her to submit "to the ordeal of public 'hearing' similar to the public trial of Cuban patriots now being conducted by the Communist Fidel Castro."

Commission Staff Director Berl I. Bernhard of Chevy Chase, Md., said latest registration figures showed 20 out of [illegible] nonwhites of voting age were registered in Claiborne Parish. This compares with a registration of 5,773 of 6,435 white residents over 21.

Toy Phone Blamed In Child's Death

Seven-month-old Rosemarie Robinson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Robinson of 12 North Carter St., Winnsboro, was the victim.

According to members of the family, the child had been playing on the floor of the Robinson home with a toy telephone, and it became stuck in her throat.

Mrs. Robinson attempted to remove the toy, but part of it broke off in the child's throat.

The obstacle was removed at Rogers Clinic in Winnsboro, and a tube was used to aid the baby's breathing.

The child was transferred to St. Francis Hospital in Monroe where death followed due to the effects of the ordeal, members of the family said.

The incident occurred early yesterday morning and the child died about 2:30 yesterday afternoon.

Funeral services will be held 2 p.m. Sunday at the Temple Baptist Church at Winnsboro with the Rev. Joe Mongle pastor officiating.

Youth's Body Is Recovered On Saturday

LAKE PROVIDENCE (Special) — The body of Bobby Frasier, 19, of Monticello, was recovered about 9:30 a.m. Saturday from Lake Providence where he drowned in a Friday night boating accident.

In the boat with him were Ralph Coleman, and James Dean. They had gone to "run a trot line" and the lake waves were high. Dean and Frasier went to the front of the boat, causing the waves to swamp it.

Two other youths in the party, Jimmy King and Burt Copes, had gone to a nearby restaurant on the lakefront to eat when the incident occurred.

THROWN OUT

Two of the boys in the boat were thrown out into the water by the waves and the third, Coleman, stayed in it although the boat was filling. Finally he was thrown out as the boat turned sideways.

The three first agreed to hold onto the capsized boat but then Frasier started wanting to swin to the bank, Dean and Coleman said.

The two said they begged him not to swim until they could not hear him any more, as he continued to swim away.

After about 30-45 minutes of calling for help, Dean and Coleman said they were heard by the two who had gone to eat.

King and someone he didn't know went out to the youth in another boat and brought them in.

The sheriff's department and fire department here were immediately notified and they drug the lake for Frasier's body all night. Seven boats were dragging after daylight Saturday.

His body was discovered about 50 yards from the lake's bank, about halfway up the lake two

Cloudy Skies, Showers Today

The hot and rather balmy Spring weather we've been enjoying for the past several weeks looks as though it's here to stay but chances are showers may fall today, the weatherman said.

Sunday's forecast calls for considerable cloudiness in Monroe and vicinity with isolated afternoon showers. Temperatures should hit a high of between 78 and 86.

Southern Mississippi can look for the same clouds and showers with temperatures to be in the 80's.

Yesterday's high in Monroe, according to Selman Field was 87 and the low was 75.

JAIL EXTENSION

Bond Issue Vote Slated Tuesday

Property owners will vote Tuesday on a proposed $300,000 bond issue to finance an extension for the Ouachita parish jail.

If approved, the extension will be located just south of Monroe off the Berg Jones Lane in the Richwood Addition. It will occupy 40 acres presently owned by Mrs. Gertie Mitchell Green and J. B. Mitchell, both of West Monroe.

The property has been offered to the parish for the purpose of a jail extension for $850 an acre. Adjacent property was recently sold by another owner to a group planning a Negro subdivision for $960 an acre and within less than one mile the city of Monroe purchased a block of land at $1,000 per acre.

All members of the law enforcement agencies, including the parish sheriff department, court officials and parish police jury have voiced approval for the move.

Plans have been publicized for the construction on the land, pending approval by the property owners, but necessarily have been made fluid enough to fit into any changes which may occur.

As proposed in the call for the bond election, the plans call for construction of two large dormitories, each of which will house 60 white and Negro inmates. Only male prisoners will be kept in the extension, all of which will be for misdemeanors, such as drunk driving, petty theft, reckless driving or other offenses which do not incur prison terms.

The plan will also have sepa-

Second Manned Space Shot Set For Late June

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI)—The United States will aim for a date in late June to fire its second man into space, it was learned Saturday.

Informed sources pinpointed June 26-27 as the planned target time.

The astronaut pilot likely will be either John H. Glenn Jr. or Virgil I. Grissom of America's seven-man corps of Mercury "space plebes."

His mission will be generally the same as that of the nation's first spaceman, Mercury teammate Alan B. Shepard Jr.—to ride a 1½-ton capsule about 115 miles into space and 300 miles over the Atlantic Ocean.

His chores while soaring through five minutes of weightlessness in space may be a little different, however. Shepard's success gave scientists more confidence that man can perform useful tasks during this period.

Basically, though, the purpose will be the same—to gain a better knowledge of this airless, cold, always potentially-lethal environment for the years of full-scale manned conquest ahead.

MISSILE LINGO

Spaceman's Flight Brings New Terms

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) —Two new terms—"A-okay" and "Freedom 7"—have become part of the American language as a result of the space flight of Alan B. Shepard Jr.

"A-okay" was the word which flashed around the world while Shepard was streaking through space Friday. That was the way a Project Mercury spokesman, John Powers, reported Shepard's condition and reactions to the press gathered at Cape Canaveral.

"Freedom 7" is the code name given Shepard by his fellow astronauts. Seven is the total number of U. S. astronauts. During flight, Shepard broadcast, "This is Freedom 7." The name was painted on the spacecraft and some newsmen gave the vehicle the same name.

When Powers shouted "A-okay" over a loudspeaker, newsmen thought these were Shepard's actual words and so were widely reported. But a study of the tape recording of his voice during the flight showed Shepard said only "okay" several times.

Powers said "A-okay" means "all-okay" in missile lingo. It is a term long used by missilemen here, especially during countdowns, to show that a certain system of a rocket is functioning properly.

LODGES IN THROAT

Toy Phone Blamed In Child's Death

Seven - month - old Rosemarie Robinson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Robinson of 12 North Carter St., Winnsboro, was the victim.

According to members of the family, the child had been playing on the floor of the Robinson home with a toy telephone, and it became stuck in her throat.

Mrs. Robinson attempted to remove the toy, but part of it broke off in the child's throat.

The obstacle was removed at Rogers Clinic in Winnsboro, and a tube was used to aid the baby's breathing.

The child was transferred to St. Francis Hospital in Monroe where death followed due to the effects of the ordeal, members of the family said.

The incident occurred early yesterday morning and the child died about 2:30 yesterday afternoon.

Funeral services will be held 2 p.m. Sunday at the Temple Baptist Church at Winnsboro with the Rev. Joe Mongle, pastor officiating.

Pallbearers will be James E. Franklin and Clyde Robinson.

Six In Flooded Area Drowned As Boat Sinks

ASHLAND, Ohio (AP) — Six persons drowned Saturday in muddy floodwaters and three others were rescued after the 16-foot outboard motor boat into which they were crowded stalled and sank.

The area had been flooded for several days, and residents used the boat to get in and out.

Most of the victims were standing in the boat and were pitched forward when the motor stalled, deputy sheriffs said. That caused the boat's prow to go under in 10-foot-deep water about 150 feet from shore.

Five bodies have been recovered.

At the Jeromesville fire station, seven miles northwest of the isolated farm area where the drownings occurred, the bodies of these victims were identified:

Sam Perry, 38, and his wife, Grace; Suzy Alleman, 21 and her brother, Larry, 20, children of Mrs. Perry by a previous marriage; and Frank Hudgins, 4.

Missing and presumed drowned was Pete Alleman, 21.

Tighter state action where the parishes themselves pay higher than the state standards for teachers and other personnel and still come back to ask the legislature to help make up shortages in operating fund.

registers at the front of the store, while Thompson started for the bread racks at the back. He walked headlong into the bandits who pointed their guns at him and asked where the manager was.

The salesman directed them to Patterson, who was ordered to open the safe but did not know the combination.

Patterson was then tied and placed, along with Thompson, into a courtesy booth at the front of the store where checks are cashed. Minutes later, Miss Rogers arrived and was forced to open the safe at gunpoint. The men then scooped the cash totaling between $9,300 and $9,800 out. They also dismantled all telephones in the building with the exception of one, which Patterson later used to notify police. Six more employees arrived during the robbery and were all herded into the courtesy booth with Patterson and Thompson and ordered to stay there or "we'll blow your heads off."

According to employees at the store, the pair at first seemed calm but later became nervous and removed their nylon stocking masks. Several employees got a good look at them, police said. They also wore gloves during the entire operation.

The pair then took Miss Roger's car keys and drove off in it to make their getaway from the building. Kelly said they evidently had another car stashed away in which to get out of town.

A local net was immediately thrown up by sheriff's department deputies, state police and West Monroe police.

JOYCE ANN PIRO

Group Names Officers At School Meet

Election of officers and initiation of three students were main items on the agenda of Northeast State's Epsilon Tau chapter of Phi Alpha Theta, national honorary history fraternity.

Joyce Ann Piro, junior sociology major from Clayton, was elected president for the 1961-62 school year. She succeeds Kent Tippett, senior history student from Bastrop. Serving with Miss Piro will be George Chain, vice president, a junior education major from Bastrop; Janet Aswell, Bastrop sophomore in education who will hold the post of secretary - treasurer; and Sheila Townley, Monroe sophomore in education, reporter - historian.

The first spring initiation to be held by the fraternity added to its membership Janet Aswell, Sheila Townley and Guy Cook, liberal arts student from West Monroe.

Members taking part in the ritualistic ceremony were Kent Tippett, George Cam, Carolyn Ross, Howard Russell, Geraldine Bryant and Joyce Piro. Faculty members participating were Dr. J. R. Brown, associate professor of history and Waddy Moore III, assistant professor of history.

Purpose of Phi Alpha Theta is to recognize outstanding interest and scholarship in the field of history and to promote the importance of this study in colleges and universities throughout the nation.

The college chapter is sponsored by Dr. Brown and Dr. William A. Walker Jr., associate professor of history.

Andrews Air Force Base in nearby Maryland at 9:45 a.m., after a jet flight from Grand Bahama Air Force Base.

There Shepard will be reunited with his wife and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alan B. Shepard Sr., of Derry, N. H. After brief ceremonies at the airport, the party will be lifted by helicopter the 14 miles to the south lawn of the White House.

There the President and the First Lady will welcome the group and Kennedy will pin on Shepard the Distinguished Service Medal of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration which sponsored the space flight.

Other medals are certain to come later — perhaps the Medal of Honor, although this usually is reserved for bravery in combat, or perhaps a special congressional medal.

After the ceremony on the lawn, Kennedy will have a private, 30-minute session with the astronauts while Mrs. Kennedy entertains Shepard's family at a coffee.

Then it will be on to the Capitol for an 11:30 a.m. reception in the old Supreme Court chamber. Official hosts here will be Sen. Mike Mansfield, the Democratic Senate leader from Montana; Rep. Sam Rayburn, veteran Democratic House speaker from Texas; Sen. Robert S. Kerr, D-Okla., chairman of the Senate Space Committee, and Rep. Overton Brooks, D-La., chairman of the House Space Committee.

Guests will include the full membership of Congress plus many other top-ranking figures.

Next will be the news conference at the State Department auditorium where Kennedy regularly meets the capital's newsmen. It seemed likely the pull of this conference — Shepard's first since his flight — will bring a crowd of reporters and photographers equal to the 400-plus who usually attend the Kennedy sessions.

Shepard did nothing to hurt his reportial "gate" when he refused while in isolation at Grand Bahama to release a statement to the press. He explained he preferred to await Monday's meeting with newsmen to disclose details of his history-making 15 minutes.

As of Saturday, all three TV networks and the four major radio networks planned straight-through live coverage, starting with the airport arrival.

Plans for the Shepards and the other astronauts after the news conference have not been disclosed.

Man Believed Drowned Turns Up In Jackson

JACKSON, Miss. (UPI) — Joseph W. Sellers, who was believed drowned, had a lot of explaining to do Friday night.

Sellers, a Jackson mechanic, told surprised authorities he had "been fishing" while they were dragging the Pearl River for his "body".

He was believed drowned after his car was found on a bridge with his work clothes lying on the rail early Friday.

However, Sellers couldn't explain how his car got on the bridge. He claimed he parked it west of the bridge.

He said he first learned of the search for him when he came home.

The three left the tavern and when they neared Highway 13 which connects with Highway 80, Childs, who was sitting in the back seat, reached around him, placed a knife to his throat and told him he would cut his jugular vein if he didn't do as told.

Gates was ordered to drive down Highway 13 and when they were approximately seven miles from Highway 80, Childs told him to pull off onto a side road. The Fowler woman was told to take Gates clothing, and his money.

He was ordered into the bushes at the side of the road and the pair drove off in his car with his clothing. Gates said he walked until he found a car pulled onto the shoulder of Highway 13 and men fixing a flat. They notified sheriff's deputies.

His car was found abandoned on a parking lot in West Monroe, and deputies arrested the pair at a Monroe motel.

The robbery occurred between 9 and 1 p.m. Friday.

Sheriff Grant said that Childs is wanted in Houston for the January 16, 1961 slaying of a man on a charge of murder without malice.

The Fowler woman also has a police record and is on parole, authorities said.

Death, Ruins Left In Path Of Tornado

POTEAU, Oka. (AP)— "The good Lord gives and the good Lord takes. Last night he was mostly taking," said Sam Sutton.

Sutton made the statement matter of factly to his neighbor, Ray Gibson, Saturday as they surveyed the ruins of the tiny community of Reichert, where four persons died when a tornado struck Friday night.

Nine others were killed at Howe, 17 miles to the northwest, when the same twister that hit Reichert struck there 20 minutes later.

One person was killed in nearby Arkansas as a twister struck near Dover. Eight were injured at Arkansas' Lake Hamilton.

Gibson's home, like three others in the eastern Oklahoma hamlet and 47 others in Howe, was leveled.

"Everything I have is gone—cows, chickens and horses," said Gibson. "Even the clothes on my back are borrowed. But I still got my wife and three kids and I guess that's enough to be grateful for."

Paul McDaniel, a parttime Baptist preacher, sat on a pile of water-soaked clothing in front of the rubble that was his house in Howe. His gray-haired wife stood near him and looked at the ruins. Their mongrel dog, Blackie, shied against her leg.

"God giveth and God taketh.. bless be the will of God," said McDaniel, still stunned by the events.

One square mile of the valley town of Howe was demolished by the swift storm, said Leflore County Red Cross chairman Marion Wise. Four business places were damaged or destroyed. The Baptist church was splintered and the Methodist and Assembly of God churches were heavily damaged.

The Rev. Ron Lewis, 24, and his nine-month-old daughter were inside the Baptist church—built by volunteer labor and which was to have been dedicated Sunday — when the twister hit.

"I had the baby in my arms," he related. "We crawled under a baby bed in the nursery. I could see her mouth move as if she were screaming, but I heard nothing except the roar outside. It was over in seconds."

National Guardsmen patrolled the Howe area where one of the structures to escape damage was the new high school. It was pressed into service as a disaster center. Many of the injured were brought to Poteau.

The tornado lasted only about ten seconds, said Charles Lewallen, 31, of Reichert. Four persons at a family reunion at Lewallen's home were killed.

They were Charles Brown; his daughter, Mrs. Wiley Lloyd; Preston Lloyd, Mrs. Lloyd's son; and Alvin Brown.

A report remained unverified that a small airplane was ripped apart by the twister near the Ouachita National Forest. Ground parties and a highway patrol plane conducted a search.

To the south, another tornado hit at the edge of Hugo, Okla., and several buildings were reportedly damaged. There were no known casualties.

The storm came on the first anniversary of a tornado that smashed into Wilburton, 40 miles to the west, killing 13 and injuring more than 100.

Aycock Warns Of Communism Menace To U.S.

BATON ROUGE (AP)—Lt. Gov. C. C. Aycock warned Saturday the menace of international communism is near and nothing will divide the nation "as will the explosive issue of another Little Rock or New Orleans."

Aycock, in a speech to the Louisiana State University Alumni Association here, said:

"The logic of a philosophy of government which disregards the constitutional rights of a majority of its citizens, for the manifest purpose of catering to the bloc vote of an already pampered minority, "escapes my understanding.

"What we do in Louisiana in the months ahead may well shape the future of this country for the next 100 years."

Aycock said he wasn't speaking for the Gov. Jimmie H. Davis administration.

The Tenth Amendment has been thrown out the window and that is "Why the Louisiana Legislature and the executive branch of your government has and will continue to protest against encroachment upon the sovereignty of this state," he said.

Death, Ruins Left In Path Of Tornado

POTEAU, Oka. (AP)— "The good Lord gives and the good Lord takes. Last night he was mostly taking," said Sam Sutton.

Sutton made the statement matter of factly to his neighbor, Ray Gibson, Saturday as they surveyed the ruins of the tiny community of Reichert, where four persons died when a tornado struck Friday night.

Nine others were killed at Howe, 17 miles to the northwest, when the same twister that hit Reichert struck there 20 minutes later.

One person was killed in nearby Arkansas as a twister struck near Dover. Eight were injured at Arkansas' Lake Hamilton.

Gibson's home, like three others in the eastern Oklahoma hamlet and 47 others in Howe, was leveled.

"Everything I have is gone—cows, chickens and horses," said Gibson. "Even the clothes on my back are borrowed. But I still got my wife and three kids and I guess that's enough to be grateful for."

Paul McDaniel, a parttime Baptist preacher, sat on a pile of water-soaked clothing in front of the rubble that was his house in Howe. His gray-haired wife stood near him and looked at the ruins. Their mongrel dog, Blackie, shied against her leg.

"God giveth and God taketh... bless be the will of God," said McDaniel, still stunned by the events.

One square mile of the valley town of Howe was demolished by the swift storm, 'said Leflore County Red Cross chairman Marion Wise. Four business places were damaged or destroyed. The Baptist church was splintered and the Methodist and Assembly of God churches were heavily damaged.

need for a penal farm and continued to do so until two years ago, when definite action was begun by the parish police jury.

On January 21, 1960 representatives of business and industry met to discuss plans for obtaining the farm. They met with District Attorney Albin P. Lassiter, Sheriff Bailey Grant and Jury President M. W. Montgomery.

The [illegible] Walter W. Kellogg, Monroe business and civic leader, was named chairman of a committee to study [illegible] a penal farm similar to others in other Louisiana parishes, [illegible] and some other solutions to the crowded conditions.

"The prisoners are human beings and we want to turn them back into a free society in as good condition as possible."

borne have since been put on the voting rolls.

Mrs. Linton, who has held office for 21 years, was unsmiling and nervous as she read from a scrap of paper that she refused to answer any questions on voting records on grounds she might incriminate herself.

Another woman registrar, Miss Catherine Ward of Madison Parish, told the commission she would not discriminate against a Negro who attempted to register.

The parish - in northeast Louisiana bordering the Mississippi River - has no registered Negro voters. Miss Ward, a graying spinster, estimated Negroes outnumber whites two-to-one in the parish.

She said that no Negroes had attempted to register since 1955 when she became registrar, succeeding her mother who held the office for 31 years.

"Can you say why?" asked Robert Storey of Dallas, the commission vice chairman.

"I can not. I don't know."

Asked what she would do if a Negro attempted to register, Miss Ward said:

"That's hypothetical. That would take care of itself when the time came. As far as I know I would not show discrimination.

"I can not predict what I might or might not do. It's a hypothetical question and frankly, I don't think it's fair."

She related that eight Negroes attempted to register in 1954 when her mother held office. They were turned down because they could not produce two qualified electors to vouch for them.

"In other words," Dr. Hannah asked, "no Negro will ever vote in Madison Parish until two white voters step up and vouch for them."

The commission also quizzed Caddo Parish Registrar [illegible] Charles Mitchell and Red River Parish Registrar Joseph Walter Crawford.

Mitchell said he did not require prospective voters to take a constitutional interpretation test — one of the requirements under state law.

"I don't want to be facetious," he said, "but it seems to me that the Constitution has become a rather controversial document . . . and I feel it more or less sets up a blockade to those who might otherwise qualify."

He said Louisiana statutes require a voter to be able to interpret the Constitution, but there is nothing compelling registrars to administer a test.

Dr. Robert Rankin of Durham, N. C., the third commissioner present at the two-day session, said a general report will be issued by the group later this summer.

JFK's LEGISLATION

Hardest Battles Are Still Ahead

WASHINGTON (AP)— President Kennedy's 1961 legislative program has begun to gather momentum on Capitol Hill but the toughest battles are yet to come.

With the session now four months along with perhaps another three months to go, Congress has completed action on eight of the 16 points Kennedy submitted to his party's legislative leaders shortly after he took office.

This is considered a good score. It always takes time, particularly in the first session of a new Congress, to move legislation through the long process of hearings, committee consideration, and finally floor action.

However, the most controversial of his 16 points remain to be acted on. Foremost in this category are federal aid to education and a health care program tied to the Social Security system.

In addition, the President has sent to the Capitol eight or 10 other major measures since the 16-point list was drawn up in February.

At least two of these supplementary measures, tax revision and omnibus farm legislation, are sure to cause lengthy disputes.

Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., said Saturday he is confident his branch will pass all, or practically all, of the President's program.

The two major bills signed into law by Kennedy so far, depressed areas aid and broadening of minimum wage, are included in the "Big Five" measures he stressed before he took office.

A third one of these, a proposed expansion of federal housing programs, has been cleared so far by the Senate Housing subcommittee. It seems certain to be passed generally in line with Kennedy's recommendations.

The other two of the five are the health care plan and fedetal aid to education.

A drive is on in the Senate to attach the health care proposal to a Social Security liberalization bill already passed by the House. Supporters of this plan say they have the votes to do it. However, it is uncertain whether House conferees would accept it.

Meanwhile, the House Ways and Means Committee announced Friday plans to hold hearings late in the session on the bitterly disputed health care legislation.

The labor committees in both branches have held extensive hearings on grade and high school aid legislation.

A Senate subcommittee may approve a school bill on Wednesday or Thursday; that branch is to act first on the floor. The Senate seems sure to pass it. The House outlook is murky.

Aside from school aid and health care, these are the six bills on the 16 points not yet passed:

Social Security liberalization, (passed the House but not Senate), medical education grants, federal aid for expansion of community health activities, Office of International Travel to encourage more tourists to visit the United States (passed the Senate but not by the House), federal aid for college education, and easing of restrictions on trade and aid with Communist satellites.

rate eating facilities for the white and Negro prisoners, but the food will be prepared in a single kitchen, located in the middle of three buildings. Also included in the center building will be the laundry facilities, conference rooms, office for the coroner or doctor, and offices for the officials in charge of the plant.

All of the buildings will be enclosed with a six-foot fence.

On the property adjoining the enclosure, a truck farm is planned, thus cutting down the costs of feeding prisoners in both the extension, main parish jail atop the court house and municipal jails in Monroe and West Monroe.

Tuesday's election is the culmination of more than three years of active work by the sheriff department, which has long seen the necessity for additional space for prisoners.

The News-Star—World in January of 1958 suggested the consideration of an extension, or a penal farm, as a means of alleviating the overcrowded conditions in the jail and providing an outlet of activity for those confined over a long period of time. During that year summaries were published of the problems and assets of other parish farms. Surveys of the conditions in the parish and municipal jails in Ouachita parish were made and the conditions told.

But for a much longer time than that, leaders have spoken of the growing need for additional jail space. With a single exception, the parish grand juries for the past fifteen years, since 1945 to be exact, have pointed out the need for a study of the jail conditions, with the idea of finding some recommendation for ending them. Several years ago the juries began noting specifically the need for a penal farm and continued to do so until two years ago, when definite action was begun by the parish police jury.

On January 21, 1959 representatives of business and industry met to discuss plans for obtaining the farm. They met with District Attorney Albin P. Lassiter, Sheriff Bailey Grant and Jury President M. W. Montgomery.

The following week Walter W. Kellogg, Monroe business and civic leader was named chairman of a committee to study recommendations on whether to set up a penal farm similar to others in other Louisiana parishes, or in find some other solutions to the crowded conditions.

At that time Kellogg told the group that "jail is a cheaper way to care for the prisoners, but if we want to rehabilitate them, a penal farm would be far better . . . the prisoners are human beings and we want to turn them back into a free society in as good condition as possible."

Proposals for locating the jail extension on Selman Field were ruled out when the police jury learned that the federal government would not relinquish its recapture clause for property to be used for jails or jail facilities.

U.S. Seeking To Contain Reds In Cuba

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Kennedy administration is expected to pursue in the future a new Cuba policy aimed at quarantining the Fidel Castro regime and strengthening Democratic governments in the rest of Latin America, it was learned Saturday.

This line of reasoning is emerging among top officials reviewing the failure of the Cuban invasion attempt and its impact on U. S. prestige.

High administration sources told United Press International that President Kennedy was "more convinced than ever" that the most positive policy would be to redouble support for Latin America's battle against poverty and illiteracy which create conditions that allow Castroism or Communism to develop.

The President was reported to be bolstering his "Alliance For Progress" plan for social development with several large - scale bilateral arrangements to help Brazil, Venezuela and Bolivia to overcome pressing financial difficulties.

He also has instructed the U.S. delegation to the Organization of American States (OAS) to ask for a high-level conference on July 15 to draft long-range economic and social development plans.

As for Cuba, plans are to ask a hemisphere foreign minister's meeting to establish a watch-dog committee to prevent the spread of Communism from the Caribbean Island to other areas.

In effect, it would establish a hemispheric quarantine to keep Premier Fidel Castro's agents from subverting Democratic governments.

"I can not. I don't know."

Asked what she would do if a Negro attempted to register, Miss Ward said:

"That's hypothetical. That would take care of itself when the time came. As far as I know I would not show discrimination.

"I can not predict what I might or might not do. It's a hypometical question and frankly, I don't think it's fair."

She related that eight Negroes attempted to register in 1954 when her mother held office. They were turned down because they could not produce two qualified electors to vouch for them.

"In other words," Dr. Hannah asked, "no Negro will ever vote in Madison Parish until two white voters step up and vouch for them."

"I don't know," Miss Ward replied, "the laws could change."

The commission also quizzed Caddo Parish Registrar U. Charles Mitchell and Red River Parish Registrar Joseph Walton Crawford.

Mitchell said he did not require prospective voters to take a constitutional interpretation test—one of the requirements under state law.

"I don't want to be facetious," he said, "but it seems to me that the Constitution has become a rather controversial document . . . and I feel it more or less sets up a blockade to those who might otherwise qualify."

He said Louisiana statutes require a voter to be able to interpret the Constitution, but there is nothing compelling registrars to administer a test.

Dr. Robert Rankin of Durham, N. C., the third commissioner present at the two-day session, said a general report will be issued by the group later this summer.

Soviet Warns U.S. Against Cuba Attack

MOSCOW (AP) — Premier Khrushchev Saturday threatened Soviet aid if Cuba is attacked. He assailed U.S. policy and called for the United States to deal with Cuba on a "live and let live" basis.

Khrushchev did not mention missile aid for Cuba but said in a speech to the Armenian Republic parliament in Yerevan:

"If the U.S. imperialists, contrary to common sense, should fling it into another undisguised venture against the Cuba republic, that would entail serious consequences, above all for the United States itself. The imperialists can no longer gat away with their ventures today."

The Soviet premier's speech, reported by Moscow Radio and the Tass press agency, was delivered at a ceremony celebrating the 40th anniversary of Soviet control in Armenia.

Khrushchev said the international situation recently had worsened and was aggravated "by the fact that aggressive forces in the United States were able to provoke an attack upon the Cuban Republic."

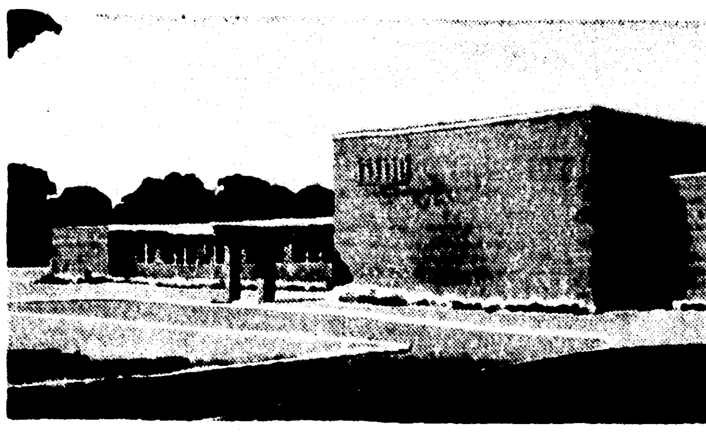
Khrushchev noted that the attack had been repulsed and added: "We should like to regard optimistically the further developments of events in this area of the globe. The people expect the U.S. government leaders to draw correct conclusions and learn the necessary lessons from what has happened."

Cuba had proposed negotiations, he said, to govern its relations with the United States on a basis of "live and let live." He said this would be to everyone's mutual advantage and without harm to anyone's prestige.

The Soviet premier said those who are anxious to see peace preserved in Laos must welcome the 14-nation conference scheduled to open Friday in Geneva.

He charged that the troubles in Laos followed American efforts to divert that Southeast Asia country from its neutrality status established by a Geneva agreement in 1954.

"Laos wants to use its energies for peaceful purposes," he said. "The Western powers should abstain from using Laos as an area for military intrigues."



THE NEW TEMPLE B'Nai Israel, 2400 Orell Place, which was dedicated Friday evening, will be open to the public today from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m.

TO SOUTH VIET NAM

U.S. Forces Poised For Quick Dispatch

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has sea, ground and air forces poised for quick dispatch to South Viet Nam if that country requests and President Kennedy decides on direct military action to help the Red-menaced nation.

When Kennedy was asked at a news conference Friday whether he is prepared to send troops to South Viet Nam if necessary, he replied that the matter was "still under consideration."

Secretary of State Dean Rusk, in another news conference Thursday, said the United States is considering help for South Viet Nam "across the entire spectrum." Rusk stepped around a question about use of ground troops.

Kennedy could use combinations of forces or a single service in military action.

Kept in readiness for quick deployment overseas is the Strategic Army Corps, composed of three divisions, two of them airborne. Anything from a combat group of about 6,000 men up to the full manpower of the three divisions and supporting elements of the Army's strategic force could be used. To move more than a combat unit of 6,000 men would require planes in addition to the approximate 300 now available and take longer.

If the need for ground forces became critical, the United States has the larger part of the 3rd Marine Division based on Okinawa—a few hours flying time or two or three days steaming time from Viet Nam. A Marine division normally has about 18,000 men.

But if the decision should be to help out Viet Nam's own ground troops by providing air support — attack planes with conventional explosive missiles and bombs — most of the power-packed Seventh Fleet presumably is within striking distance of the Southeast Asian coast now.

The Seventh Fleet — consisting of about 125 ships and 650 planes — is tailored for the task of supporting ground forces, among its other missions.

Farther back, but also in position to move from bases in Okinawa, the Philippines, Guam and Japan are jet light bombers and fighter-bombers of the U.S. Air Force.

The bulk and heaviest portion of the Seventh Fleet is presumed to be concentrated now within easy reach of Viet Nam and neighboring Laos, although other elements are on watch elsewhere along the Asian coast, from the area of Japan southward through the China Sea and South Atlantic.

The location of Viet Nam and Laos would make air support from aircraft carriers easy. Water off the Asian coast is deep enough for carriers to approach within a few minutes flying time for jets.

The monsoon season usually begins mid-May or early June in Southeast Asia and extends through August or September.

State Offers Evidence At Mattox Trial

COLUMBUS, Miss. (AP) — The state offered circumstantial evidence Saturday in efforts to prove Jon Mattox, 21-year-old collegian, strangled to death his socialite neighbor, Mrs. Gene Cain Tate, because she broke off an affair with him.

Mattox is on trial a second time on a charge of murder of the 31-year-old former local beauty queen and mother of four children, on Jan. 31, 1960.

The first trial, which resulted in conviction and life sentence, was overturned by the Mississippi Supreme Court on grounds of inadmissible evidence.

Mattox again pleaded innocent at the retrial, and the state again asked the death penalty in the event of conviction.

The defense did not make an opening statement, and has not presented its case. Cross-examination indicated [illegible] Mattox was elsewhere at the time of the slaying.

The prosecution called [illegible] Tate, husband of the dead woman, who told the state circuit court jury that his marriage had been strained by the undue attention of Mattox to his wife.

"I spent a lot of time traveling," Tate testified, "and I could not come home without him (Mattox) being there.

"I observed he watched my wife constantly. His eyes were fixed on her when I was with her."

Tate testified they had no marital difficulties until the summer and fall of 1959, and they continued until November.

"Then she was her old self again. She stayed that way until her death."

Northeast Art Show Opens On Campus Today

Northeast State's art show, which opens today in Biedenharn Hall, is open to the public without charge, Edward E. Schutz, sponsor of the Art Club on campus, announced.

The Art Club of Northeast Louisiana State College will have an informal opening tea of the departmental show from 3 to 5 p.m. honoring students of the Fine Arts Division who have submitted entries for the current year's display.

Exhibit hours are from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. during the week and from 8 a.m. to 12 noon on Saturday, according to Martha Kemp, president of the club.

Main objective of the show is to demonstrate to the public the type of work being done at Northeast and at the same time grant prospective student artists opportunity to participate in a general public exhibit.

The work accepted has been selected to appeal to an audience with diversified interests in art and technique and media. It represents quality which is comparable to the better student work being done in other college art departments, Schutz and Mrs. Gregor Goethals, both of the college art faculty, explained.

Included in the exhibit will be outstanding examples of art done in the areas of basic design, drawing, oil painting, tempera painting, watercolor, printmaking, commercial art, mosaics, ceramics, weaving, jewelry making and sculpture.

State Offers Evidence At Mattox Trial

COLUMBUS, Miss. (AP) — The state offered circumstantial evidence Saturday in efforts to prove Jon Mattox, 21-year-old collegian, strangled to death his socialite neighbor, Mrs. Gene Cain Tate, because she broke off an affair with him.

Mattox is on trial a second time on a charge of murder of the 31-year-old former local beauty queen and mother of four children, on Jan. 31, 1960.

The first trial, which resulted in conviction and life sentence, was overturned by the Mississippi Supreme Court on grounds of inadmissible evidence.

Mattox again pleaded innocent at the retrial, and the state again asked the death penalty in the event of conviction.

The defense did not make an opening statement, and has not presented its case. Cross-examination implied an alibi — that Mattox was elsewhere at the time of the slaying.

The prosecution called Erwin Tate, husband of the dead woman, who told the state circuit court jury that his marriage had been strained by the undue attention of Mattox to his wife.

"I spent a lot of time traveling," Tate testified, "and I could not come home without him (Mattox) being there.

"I observed he watched my wife constantly. His eyes were fixed on her when I was with her."

Tate testified they had no marital difficulties until the summer and fall of 1959, and they continued until November.

"Then she was her old self again. She stayed that way until her death."

Rain may also fall in Rockies, central Plains and southern Plateau region. It will be warmer in middle Atlantic states and upper Mississippi Valley. Northeast Art Show Opens On Campus Today

Northeast State's art show, which opens today in Biedenharn Hall, is open to the public without charge, Edward E. Schutz, sponsor of the Art Club on campus, announced.

The Art Club of Northeast Louisiana State College will have an informal opening tea of the departmental show from 3 to 5 p.m. honoring students of the Fine Arts Division who have submitted entries for the current year's display.

Exhibit hours are from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. during the week and from 8 a.m. to 12 noon on Saturday, according to Martha Kemp, president of the club.

Main objective of the show is to demonstrate to the public the type of work being done at Northeast and at the same time grant prospective student artists opportunity to participate in a general public exhibit.

The work accepted has been selected to appeal to an audience with diversified interests in art and technique and media. It represents quality which is comparable to the better student work being done in other college art departments, Schutz and Mrs. Gregor Goethals, both of the college art faculty, explained.

Included in the exhibit will be outstanding examples of art done in the areas of basic design, drawing, oil painting, tempera painting, watercolor, printmaking, commercial art, mosaics, ceramics, weaving, jewelry making and sculpture.

MAKES ESCAPE ON RAFT

Cuban Invasion Survivor Tells Of Attack By Planes

EDITOR'S NOTE—This is the third and last dispatch of a series written by Manuel Penabaz, who took part in the abortive Cuban invasion. It is based on notes from his diary. In previous dispatches, Penabaz described recruitment, training and the landing in Cuba. In the final dispatch, he tells of his escape from the Bahia de Cochinos (Pigs Bay) beachhead and the six-day ordeal on a raft at sea with four other soldiers.

By MANUEL PENABAZ
Written for UPI

MIAMI (UPI) —April 19, 1961, Bahia de Cochinos, Cuba—"Get up. Enemy planes overhead."

So began one of the most tragic and fateful days of my life. The voice was that of my companion and friend, Dr. Jose Enrique Dausa.

"We might have to shoot our way out of here. Enemy infantry are surrounding us."

The shock of being awakened so brutally left me shaking like a leaf. I remember telling myself I must keep calm, and even when I mastered myself, I was still shaking.

When we arrived at the high school we had taken over for our legal department, Oliva Eneido, executive officer of the invasion brigade, drove past in a jeep with his aide, Erik, and said: "Get in. We're going to post advance observers to direct the artillery fire. The enemy is only a few kilometers away."

The troops on the beach had small arms and rifles for close-in combat. There was no question now of breaking out of the beachhead.

Francisco Montiel, chief of the battalion emplaced at the advance lines pointed out the spot where he believed we should locate the advance observers. One of our tanks was camouflaged at a place midway between the sea and the jungle. We could scarcely make it out and knew [illegible] lent surprise for the advancing enemy.

Once we [illegible] there, we returned to the [illegible] the beach. About 300 [illegible] from two battalions [illegible] about a kilometer [illegible] of the beach. [illegible] in two or three kilometers to the north near Red Beach. [illegible] battalion and part of the [illegible] troop battalion [illegible] San Blas, about 12 [illegible] inland. The other battalion, Battalion Five, had disappeared somewhere beyond Red Beach.

Our situation on the beach was [illegible] the fact of the [illegible] began [illegible] exhausted. In headquarters [illegible] San Roman [illegible] the brigade [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] May 30 [illegible] set air [illegible] over the radio, in English.

"Don't [illegible] there soon. Keep [illegible]"

"You are a S.O.B."

Then San Roman [illegible] set up a defense perimeter around the [illegible].

"This is our last hope," he said. Artime was silent and gripped [illegible]

It was pitiful to [illegible] men who believed in freedom [illegible]

Around midday, the 21st [illegible] on the beach. The [illegible] shore but [illegible] beach. From that moment on, enemy artillery fire was constant.

Minutes after the bombardment started, two Castro sea furies and two jets and a B26 flew over, strafing and bombing. The Sea Furies and jets apparently were directing the artillery fire. Our air arm was destroyed and about 30 of our airmen dead.

Three of our tanks tumbled into the beach area, retreating from San Blas. Somehow all of our tanks managed to escape intact despite having faced the superior firepower of Castro's Stalin tanks.

Not far behind the tanks came our armored cars and foot soldiers. I heard that a retreat had been ordered without consultation with headquarters, producing panic and confusion among the troops.

The men who straggled onto the beach were disorganized and rebellious and threw their weapons on the ground, shouting "to the mountains."

I went up to San Roman and told him I thought it time for everyone to do what he could to save himself.

"We've got to get to the mountains," I said.

I covered the 200 meters to the beach. Mortar shells were falling about 100 meters from the spot. Our tanks still barked back against the enemy. I saw a group of men on the beach, trying to get a launch started but at the same time I saw a rubber raft, and I thought the rubber raft would be less likely to sink in heavy seas.

With me was an old friend from my own province, Rene Salvia.

"Let's take the raft," I said. "It's better."

Three other men came up and I told them to get in. All five of us piled in and started paddling out to sea with the three oars on the raft.

Glancing back, we saw the entire battalion fleeing in a panic—running wildly toward the sea and then, when the shells rained down on the beach, back toward the road, and then back toward the sea.

A launch with six men inside towed us until we were a safe distance from the shore. Fifty-caliber machinegun bullets splattered in the water around us as we pulled away from the beach.

Out of range, we looked back and saw hell on earth. Bombs fell one meter apart on the beach. Shells exploded everywhere. One [illegible] the ammunition dump and it was like an atomic bomb exploding. It was sickening. We cut loose from the launch and set [illegible].

[illegible] bitterness and anguish for the companions we left on the beach overwhelmed us. For the first time, I realized that we ca[illegible] alone.

At dawn the next day, we found [illegible] a reef. Since we had nothing to eat on the raft, I [illegible] for the [illegible] for clams or seagull[illegible]

Battered by the waves, we lost [illegible] for our raft and the [illegible] we had boarded, [illegible] to find some clams and stuffed our pockets [illegible] of water we had [illegible] our sustenance for the next five [illegible].

By midday through the second [illegible] began to torment [illegible] someone [illegible] felt there was [illegible].

Little by little, we spoke of our [illegible] spoke as [illegible] as possible to maintain our [illegible]. We still had our [illegible] and a bayonet. That second [illegible] only a few drops of [illegible] faces. We were [illegible]

[illegible] were entering the [illegible] a small island was diminishing. Now our hope was the Isle of Pines. Because of the war, navigation was suspended in that area, so that the possibility of sighting a fishing boat was almost non-existent. We decided to recite a rosary. Pepin Casal led us in prayer. At times, one would speak out: "God has abandoned us."

At dawn of the third day, a wave capsized the raft and I thought the end had come. But the instinct of self-preservation is strong and despite our weakness, all clung to the raft and with a supreme effort we righted it. Three times more in the days ahead we suffered this same misfortune — the last time when rescue was in sight.

By Monday, April 24, our water was gone and we were completely exhausted, and had abandoned all hope. We lay practically lifeless in the raft. Phlegm clogged our throats. The night before we had seen three boats but we were too weak to signal them, and cried like children.

At last, at 5 in the afternoon of Monday, April 24, with only hours of daylight remaining in what might have been the last day of our life, we saw over the horizon a white tower.

The ship was coming almost directly for us. Almost crazed with excitement, we had to contain ourselves not to exhaust our energies so we could signal to the ship when it came close enough.

After what seemed an eternity, the red prow of the ship loomed over us and we began to shout like crazy men but there was no one on the deck — a phantom ship. It had almost passed us when a head appeared on the bridge.

"Don't leave us, don't leave us," we shouted.

I have never felt such desperation. Nor will I ever forget that face. In Spanish, he shouted: "Wait boys, we're coming."

The ship stopped about 500 meters from us — the most beautiful ship in the world. God had sent it directly to us. In no other way could we have been saved.

Within half an hour, we were aboard the SS Louise, bound for Corpus Christi, Texas. The first thing we asked for was grapefruit juice.

Now, reunited with my family, I have time to meditate. We have been miraculously saved. But does our story end there? Can it end there while our homeland remains enslaved?

And if we go back again—and we must go back — will America once again stand by with folded arms? Will we be alone—again?

Once we finished there, we returned to the command post on the beach. About 400 troops from two battalions were strung along about a kilometer (⅝ mile) of the beach. Montiel's battalion was dug in two or three kilometers to the north near Red Beach. Another battalion and part of the paratroop battalion were in combat at San Blas, about 12 kilometers inland. The other battalion, Battalion Five, had disappeared somewhere beyond Red Beach.

Our situation on the beach was made even more desperate by the fact all the 50-caliber machinegun ammunition had been exhausted. In headquarters, Jose San Roman, Oliva, Ferrer (G-3 of the brigade), Morales (G-1), Andreu and Manuel Artime (highest civilian representative in the invasion (whose capture was disclosed May 3) were trying desperately to get air support. The reply came over the radio, in English:

"Don't worry. They will be there soon. Keep fighting."

"You are a S-O-B."

Then San Roman ordered us to set up a defense perimiter around the radio shack.

"This is our last hope," he said. Artime was silent and gripped firmly his M3.

It was pitiful to witness the impending death of our youth and men who believed in freedom in an apparently useless cause.

Around midday, 105 MM howitzer shells started raining down on the beach. The first rounds fell in the sea, about 100 meters off shore—but dangerously close to our ammunition dump on the beach. From that moment on, enemy artillery fire was constant.

Minutes after the bombardment started, two Castro sea furies and two jets and a B26 flew over, strafing and bombing. The Sea Furies and jets apparently were directing the artillery fire. Our air arm was destroyed and about 30 of our airmen dead.

Three of our tanks tumbled into the beach area, retreating from San Blas. Somehow all of our tanks managed to escape intact despite having faced the superior firepower of Castro's Stalin tanks.

Not far behind the tanks came our armored cars and foot soldiers. I heard that a retreat had been ordered without consultation with headquarters, producing panic and confusion among the troops.

The men who straggled onto the beach were disorganized and rebellious and threw their weapons on the ground, shouting "to the mountains."

I went up to San Roman and told him I thought it time for everyone to do what he could to save himself.

"We've got to get to the mountains," I said.

I covered the 200 meters to the beach. Mortar shells were falling about 100 meters from the spot. Our tanks still barked back against the enemy. I saw a group of men on the beach, trying to get a launch started but at the same time I saw a rubber raft, and I thought the rubber raft would be less likely to sink in heavy seas.

With me was an old friend from my own province, Rene Salvia.

"Let's take the raft," I said. "It's better."

Three other men came up and I told them to get in. All five of us piled in and started paddling out to sea with the three oars in the raft.

Glancing back, we saw the entire battalion fleeing in a panic—running wildly toward the sea and then, when the shells rained down on the beach, back toward the road, and then back toward the sea.

A launch with six men inside towed us until we were a safe distance from the shore. Fifty-caliber machinegun bullets splattered in the water around us as we pulled away from the beach.

Once out of range, we looked back and saw hell on earth. Bombs fell one meter apart on the beach. Shells exploded everywhere. One finally hit the ammunition dump and it was like an atomic bomb exploding. It was sickening. We cut loose from the launch and set out alone.

Sadness, bitterness and anguish for the companions we left on the beach overwhelmed us. For the first time, I realized that we Cubans are alone.

At dawn the next day, we found ourselves near a reef. Since we had nothing to eat on the raft, I proposed we strike for the reef to scavange for clams or seagull eggs.

Battered by the waves, we lost the motor for our raft and the little gasoline we had hoarded. But we managed to find some clams and stuffed our pockets after eating what we could there. That — plus the two canteens of water we had among us — was our sustenance for the next five long days.

By midday through the second days, the sun began to torment us. None could sleep but there was no hysteria.

Little by little, we spoke of our lives, but eventually spoke as little as possible to maintain our strength. We still had our weapons and a bayonet. That second night it clouded over and the sea kicked up but only a few drops of rain refreshed our faces. We were desperate.

By the look of the waves, I could tell we were entering the open sea and the possibility of finding a small island was diminishing. Now our hope was the Isle of Pines. Because of the war, navigation was suspended in that area, so that the possibility of sighting a fishing boat was almost non-existent. We decided to recite a rosary. Pepin Casal led us in prayer. At times, one would speak out: "God has abandoned us."

At dawn of the third day, a wave capsized the raft and I thought the end had come. But the instinct of self-preservation is strong and despite our weakness, all clung to the raft and with a supreme effort we righted it. Three times more in the days ahead we suffered this same misfortune — the last time when rescue was in sight.

By Monday, April 24, our water was gone and we were completely exhausted, and had abandoned all hope. We lay practically lifeless in the raft. Phlegm clogged our throats. The night before we had seen three boats but we were too weak to signal them, and cried like children.

At last, at 5 in the afternoon of Monday, April 24, with only hours of daylight remaining in what might have been the last day of our life, we saw over the horizon a white tower.

The ship was coming almost directly for us. Almost crazed with excitement, we had to contain ourselves not to exhaust our energies so we could signal to the ship when it came close enough.

After what seemed an eternity, the red prow of the ship loomed over us and we began to shout like crazy men but there was no one on the deck — a phantom ship. It had almost passed us when a head appeared on the bridge.

"Don't leave us, don't leave us," we shouted.

I have never felt such desperation. Nor will I ever forget that face. In Spanish, he shouted: "Wait boys, we're coming."

The ship stopped about 500 meters from us — the most beautiful ship in the world. God had sent it directly to us. In no other way could we have been saved.

Within half an hour, we were aboard the SS Louise, bound for Corpus Christi, Texas. The first thing we asked for was grapefruit juice.

Now, reunited with my family, I have time to meditate. We have been miraculously saved. But does our story end there? Can it end there while our homeland remains enslaved?

And if we go back again—and we must go back — will America once again stand by with folded arms? Will we be alone—again?

ROBERT KENNEDY SAYS

U.S. To Enforce Rights Statutes

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Robert F. Kennedy, making his first major address as attorney general, told a Georgia audience Saturday civil rights statutes would be vigorously enforced.

He spoke at the University of Georgia, where students rioted last January when two Negroes were admitted.

One of the Negroes, Charlayne Hunter, who is studying journalism at the school, covered the speech for the Atlanta Daily World, Negro newspaper.

Kennedy said the federal government would not threaten but would try to help bring about observance of civil rights statutes.

"We will not persecute, we will prosecute," he said.

"We will not make or interpret the laws. We shall enforce them vigorously without racial bias or political slant."

Kennedy appealed to all sections to breathe meaning and force into law. He said the South, perhaps more than any other section, has the opportunity, challenge and responsibility of demonstrating America at its full potential of liberty under law.

"We just can't afford another Little Rock or New Orleans," he said.

The attorney general spoke at a Law Day observance at the university. About 1,600 persons were present.

Gov. Ernest Vandiver and other state officials did not attend. Vandiver recently criticized Kennedy for [illegible] federal court action to reopen public schools in Prince Edward County, Va. [illegible] would be out of the state [illegible].

Vandiver used 100 or more state patrolmen here to maintain order during the January disturbance, but city officials quelled the rioting with tear gas and state troopers were not used.

"Here on this campus about half a year ago," Kennedy said, "you endured a difficult ordeal and when your moment of truth came, the voices crying 'force' were overridden by the voices pleading for reason.

[illegible] you, the students and faculty of the University of Georgia."

Kennedy said that civil rights is one of "three major areas of difficulty ... that sap our national strength, that weaken our people, that require our immediate attention."

He listed the other two as organized crime and illegal practices [illegible]. Organized crime, he said, has become big business. "It drains off millions of dollars of our national wealth, infecting [illegible] labor unions and even sports."

He called for a change in the basic attitude on the racket [illegible].

"Price fixing is merely a symbol of many other practices commonly accepted in business life," Kennedy said. "Where we have evidence of violation of laws by the 'respectable,' we will take action against the individuals involved as well as against their companies."

But civil rights, he said, is the area which affects [illegible] the most directly. He hit at hypocrisy in dealing with the problem, saying:

"Financial leaders from the East who deplore discrimination in the South belong to institutions where no Negroes or Jews are allowed and their children attend private schools where no Negro student is enrolled.

[illegible] Southern leaders and yet practice discrimination [illegible].

"We must be quite aware of the fact that [illegible] per cent of the countries in the United Nations are not white, that around the world in Africa, South America and Asia people whose skins are a different color than ours are on the move to gain their measure of freedom and liberty."

GOING HIS WAY

Republican Win In 1964 Nixon's Goal

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP)—Richard M. Nixon is touring the Middlewest, earnestly preaching this political gospel:

Don't pay any heed to the theory that a president is almost certain to get a second term—a Republican can win in 1964.

Nixon is here for a speech on farm policy, and other domestic issues will be reviewed in Detroit Tuesday and in Columbus Wednesday.

But no matter what he's talking about, Nixon usually slips in a few political pep pills for Republicans. A little better organization, a little more work, he says, and the White House can be won.

"I'm not throwing in the towel," he has said several times, "before the fight even starts."

In all this Nixon is careful to point out that he's not a candidate for (1) governor of California in 1962 or (2) president in 1964.

Yet anyone who hears him and watches him has to be convinced that he's not going to hole up in any Los Angeles law office.

But about as far as he will go now is to say that in January he will examine the potential candidates for governor—and re-examine his own position.

As for 1964? "No one cay say what the situation will be then."

Nixon gives this reason for not wanting to run for governor:

"I like the freedom to go around the country. If I run for governor, I'd have to concentrate on California."

Nixon barely lost the election to John F. Kennedy, and he is sure he knows why.

In Chicago Friday night he put it this way:

"There is no question in my mind that a majority of the voters actually would have supported us if we had had an organization equal to that of our opponents in the key states and in the big cities. Such an organization in the future will assure victory for our cause."

He had some unexpected harsh words to say about his fellow Republicans.

They get volunteers steamed up in presidential years—and then promptly forget them. Or, on his words:

criticized for being an exclusive club. It is time for us to destroy the grounds for this criticism once and for all.

"We've got to open our ranks for growth—or perish as a political party."

ERASE THE DARKENING SHADOWS . . .

. . . Hanging Over Their Future

There's a question mark hanging over the future of thousands of rural Louisiana families. Not only is the farmer getting less and less for his produce while his costs go ever upward, but his institutions and services are endangered as never before.

Take rural electric cooperatives, for example. They were organized by desperate rural families who couldn't get electricity any other way. Today, the state's 13 member-owned electric cooperatives provide 98% area coverage with competitive rates ... as compared to only 1.7% receiving electricity in 1937.

This appears rosy, but like many other facets of rural life, it is cloudy today. Some of the very same interests which would not serve rural Louisiana in the past have begun to feverishly build electric lines into areas pioneered by the co-ops. Wholesale power rates are constantly increasing and there's danger of a wholesale power shortage for continued rural progress and development by the cooperatives.

Now the point is:

If the independent, member-owned electric co-ops are forced to give up their more lucrative service areas to those who belatedly have visions of profits in rural Louisiana, what, then, will happen to the rates and service of the isolated communities, the back-forty folks, etc?

Possibly, the electric co-ops will have to generate their own power if wholesale power rates contiue to rise in leaps and bounds. Corrective legislation assuring the cooperatives of territorial integrity may become necessary.

Think about all this. Town and country progress is inseparable. Electric Cooperatives have contributed much to the economic vitality and progress of Louisiana—town and country. They offer much to the future.

It is still a basic and simple fact that ONLY NON-PROFIT electric cooperatives can serve ALL rural people at rates all can afford. Yes, the shadows must be erased for all times. Our rural people need your helping hand.

Hospital Enters 50th Year Here

The St. Francis Hospital, in the midst of celebrating National Hospital Week which begins today, is also entering its 5th year of service, hospital personnel pointed out.

Mayors of the Twin Cities officially proclaimed the week of May 7 through May 13 as National Hospital Week here in connection with the nationwide observance.

Monroe Mayor W. L. Howard and West Monroe Mayor J. Allen Norris saluted all local hospitals for their community service.

The Administrator of the St. Francis Hospital, Mother Finbar of the Franciscan Sisters of France, said that the graduate nurses of the St. Francis Hospital School of Nursing will be honored at a luncheon Wednesday noon in observance of the week. Thursday, the public is invited to tour the hospital between 9 a.m. and noon and from 2 to 5 p.m. the same day. The tours will be conducted and refreshments served visitors by the St. Francis Hospital Guild.

National Hospital week was first observed as National Hospital Day from 1921 to 1953 and since then has been observed as a week - long celebration during the week of Florence Nightingale's birthday which is May 12.

Monroe supports three hospitals — the St. Francis, the Wright Bendel Clinic and Conway Memorial — and West Monroe is in the process of constructing a new, modern 1 bed hospital.

The St. Francis hopsital, possibly one of the largest and most modern hospitals in this area, came into being in 1911 when six members of the Franciscan Sisters of Calais, France, came to the diocese to open a hospital at Pineville, La. But because of a change in plans, the sanitarium was built instead at Monroe and the first building was erected at a cost of $60,000.

Since that time, the hospital has expanded and grown to include a new modern, seven-story structure erected in 1955. Again this year, the hospital has grown until the facilities are being expanded.

The $3 million expansion will include a new power plant, X-ray emergency and out patient expansion, laboratory, pharmacy, admitting offices and 100 additional beds.

The hospital last year cared for a total of 15,640 adult and pediatric in patients, and approximately 2,000 babies were born here last year. Besides that, the hospotal includes a staff of 460 employees with about 75 or 80 doctors on the staff and paid out $1,400,000 in payrolls last year.

The hospital has a number of auxilliary groups that give training for young people such as the Junior Red Cross for youngsters between the ages of 12 and 16; the St. Francis Junior Guild, and the Hospital Guild.

It is a member of the American Hospital Association, the Catholic Hosiptal Association and the Louisiana Hospital Association and two years ago was accredited by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals.

In addition, the hospital supports as a training ground, a school of Lab Technologist and X-ray Technologists, and also practical nurses receiving training here and students from the Northeast School of Nursing.

Mother Finbar also said that one Sister of the original six who founded the St. Francis, Sister Angelica, is still serving with the hospital.

Wife To Enter Prison After Mate Released

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — So their 10-year-old daughter will have the care of one of her parents, Fred and Marie Haug will serve 18-month prison sentences one at a time, U. S. Dist. Judge Paul C. Weick ruled Saturday.

Mrs. Haug will serve her term first, and her husband will enter prison 10 days after her release, Judge Weick said in a memorandum filed with the clerk of U. S. District Court here. Both were fined $2,500.

Convicted on Jan. 29, 1958 of conspiring to violate the Taft-Hartley Act by filing false non-Communist affidavits, the Haugs could have drawn maximum sentences of five years and fines of $10,000.

The U. S. Supreme Court upheld the conviction, and the Haugs petitioned for a reduction in penalty. A number of prominent Clevelanders, including Dr. Benjamin Spock, child psychologist, and Dean Wittke of Western Reserve University Law School, supported this petition.

Mrs. Haug had been an officer of the United Electrical Workers Union here, and her husband was a former official of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Union.

Also sentenced to 18 months and fined $2,500 on a similar conviction was Hyman Lumer, a former college instructor.

"I am pleased to have these men with this knowledge and this equipment in service for added efficiency of the department," Grant said.

A plate with the first aid insignia has been put on all units of the sheriff department.

New Walgreen's Store To Open At Eastgate

A new modern, streamlined self-service Walgreen's Drug Store will open 8:30 a.m. Monday in the Eastgate Shopping Center on Louisville Avenue.

There will be thousands of items on display in 57 different departments in the store, Manager B. J. Gilmore Jr., said.

Officials said the store will feature the "freshest and most modern of drugs" in addition to a broad range of articles and services, and a grill and fountain with seating accomodations for 64 persons.

The grill will feature luncheons and complete dinners catering to the entire family.

Gilmore made this announcement in connection with its opening:

"Customers will find Walgreen's store designers have planned well to make shopping quick and easy. Automatic entry gates swing open when approached, handy basket carts are in easy reach, clearly identified departments are quick to find, and rapid checkout counters add the final touch of shopping convenience."

This is Walgreen's second drug store in Monroe. The first store is located downtown. Hours for the new store will be 8:30 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. daily, and 11 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. on Sunday. There will be no change in the schedule of the other store.

One Muscovite Gives Shepard Praise For Feat

Samson telephoned the United Press International bureau here Saturday, asked for Manager Henry Shapiro, and dictated this telegram:

"Mr. Shapiro, from the bottom of my heart I congratulate you personally and through your representation in Moscow the entire American people and government of the successful launching of the Redstone rocket with a man aboard.

"I sincerely believe in the good intentions of the lofty aims of American science and engineering."

Soviet citizens often call their local newspapers and radio stations to air their views on public events, but the Moscow plumber's call to an American news agency was highly unusual.

Solon Assails Special Mission Planes Practice

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A democratic congressman accused the Air Force Saturday of setting aside a fleet of 719 planes for high ranking brass and civilian big wigs. He said it was a "total and unnecessary waste."

Rep. Daniel J. Flood, disclosing the number of Air Force planes assigned to "administrative and special mission" flying, also charged that a large number of the flights were "in violation of the law and existing regulations."

The Pennsylvania House member, in an interview with United Press International, found one consolation. The special planes, he suggested, must spur the ambition of the younger officers.

"This situation in the Air Force," Flood said, "is the classic example of why generals want to be generals."

Flood said most of the 719 special mission planes were "unnecessary because most of these VIPS (very important persons) could just as well get to where they want to go on the commercial air lines or with the Military Air Transport Service."

Rusk Leaves For NATO Meet In Oslo

WASHINGTON (AP)— Secretary of State Dean Rusk set out for Europe Saturday to try to persuade the NATO allies to close their divided ranks and build up their lagging military power in Europe.

Before he returns to Washington, Rusk may also open negotiations with the Communist bloc, including Red China, on the future of Laos. He is ready to attend the first round of the 14-nation Lao conference at Geneva if a cease-fire can be sully secured.

But Rusk' first purpose in making his initial mission to Europe as President Kennedy's foreign policy chief is to attend a meeting of foreign ministers of the 15-nation North Atlantic Treaty Organization. The ministers will meet at Oslo, Norway, Monday through Wednesday.

Rusk took off from Andrews Air Force base Saturday morning with a party of eight.

Aides said Rusk will not seek any specific decisions from the Allies at Oslo. What he hopes to accomplish is to get the leaders of European countries thinking about an increase in the men and money they can commit to conventional military forces under NATO command.

Kennedy is reported willing to negotiate arrangements for a nuclear striking force for NATO but he wants first priority given to building up conventional forces.

NATO by its own decision of several years ago is supposed to have 30 divisions in Western Europe. It has about 21. Thus the manpower increase needed to bring it up to strength is about 30 per cent. The United States hopes the Europeans also will increase their air and sea units, modernize the weapons of their military forces and step up their training programs.

Rusk's basic argument to the Allies will be that the increasingly aggressive attitude of the Communist bloc powers, as shown in the Laos and Cuban crises, makes greater NATO solidarity essential.

Rusk knows it will take difficult, even painful decisions to reach the goals he preaches. The European governments would have to increase substantially the funds budgeted for armaments and some probably would have to resume drafting men if the military goals are to be met. But with the danger of a new Berlin crisis later this year, Rusk will argue that steps to build more strength are essential.

NATO is beset by troubles other than military ones. One agreement which Rusk would like to win is for consultation through NATO permanent council at Paris on all sorts of political issues. Rusk is said to feel they are not making good use of NATO for this purpose.

Serious differences exist between the United States and Britain on one hand and France on the other about the role of the great powers and the alliance. President Charles de Gaulle would like a more powerful voice for France.

More serious at immediate impact is that the Algerian crisis has tied up in North Africa half a million French troops. Otherwise these would make an important contribution to the defense of Western Europe's central front.

The body will lie in state at Kilpatrick Funeral Home in West Monroe until an hour prior to services.

Army in Oregon; one sister, Mrs. Billie Wallace, West Monroe; maternal grandmother, Mrs. Mary Crain Thompson, West Monroe; three step-brothers, G. L. Stennett Jr., Jimmy Stennett, and Elbert Stennett, all of West Monroe and two step-sisters, Mrs. Carrie Mae Street, Kinder, La.; Ethel Freeman, West Monroe.

Burial will be in Liberty Grove Cemetery.

New Cold War Agency Formed

WASHINGTON (AP) —The State Department disclosed Saturday the formation of a new cold-war operation center to keep a 24-hour watch on world crisis spots.

The new agency is headed by a veteran foreign-service officer and former ambassador, Theodore C. Achilles, 55, who will work directly under Secretary Dean Rusk.

Achilles and his staff, the Department said, are responsible for seeing that recommendations for dealing with crises "are made promptly to the secretary and through him to the president."

The group also is charged with the follow-through duty of making certain that the decisions reached by Rusk and President Kennedy "are promptly implemented."

Mrs. Shepard Awaiting Word

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP)— The housewife who nervously ticked off the minutes during her husband's historic ride through space waited patiently Saturday for official confirmation of impending reunion with the man she loves.

Although the White House said Mrs. Alan B. Shepard Jr. would be on hand when her husband reaches Washington Monday, Mrs. Shepard still hadn't received official notification at her home in Virginia Beach.

More Women Than Men In State, U.S.

WASHINGTON (Special) — Husband-hunting gals in Louisiana, where there are only 97.2 males for every 100 females, would do well to heed the advice Horace Greeley gave young men in bygone days and head west.

There, according to statistics of the Bureaau of the Census, based on the 1960 census of population, is where the odds are best matrimonially speaking.

American's women and girls outnumber the men and boys in all section sof the U.S. except the Mountain and Pacific states and the Dakotas, says the Bureau.

Nationally, the U.S. has 97.1 males per 100 females, thereby proving that statistically, at any rate a Louisiana girl or woman has a slightly better chance of latching onto a husband than her sisters over the nation. That, of course, does not take into account the honey-voiced charm of southern belles.

Women and girls are more numberous in seven of the nation's nine geograpic divisions. The ratio is 94.5 males to 100 females in the Middle Atlantic states. Conversely, the ratio is 101.2 males to 100 females in the Mountain states, for the other divisions, the ratios are be ween these two extremes.

Among states, the proportions vary from 93.4 males per 100 females in Massachusetts to 132.3 males per 100 females in Alaska. The greatest differences in proportion of the sexes is in the district of Columbia, with 88.3 miles to every 100 females.

Outside the west, women and girls lead in numbers in every state except North and South Dakota. In the two Dakotas, there are 101.5 and 102.4 males respec-tively to every 100 females.

WASHINGTON (AP)—The State Department disclosed Saturday the formation of a new cold-war operation center to keep a 24-hour watch on world crisis spots.

The new agency is headed by a veteran foreign - service officer and former ambassador, Theodore C. Achilles, 55, who will work directly under Secretary Dean Rusk.

Achilles and his staff, the Department said, are responsible for seeing that recommendations for dealing with crises "are made promptly to the secretary and through him to the president."

The group also is charged with the follow-through duty of making certain that the decisions reached by Rusk and President Kennedy "are promptly implemented."

THREE MEMBERS of the faculty of Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary School of Church Music, Fort Worth, Tex., examine an itinerary of the Southwestern Singers' tour which gets under way May 18. The 35-voice choir will appear in a concert at the College Place Baptist Church here, May 19. Mrs. Shepard Awaiting Word

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP)— The housewife who nervously ticked off the minutes during her husband's historic ride through space waited patiently Saturday for official confirmation of impending reunion with the man she loves.

Although the White House said Mrs. Alan B. Shepard Jr. would be on hand when her husband reaches Washington Monday, Mrs. Shepard still hadn't received official notification at her home in Virginia Beach.

More Women Than Men In State, U.S.

WASHINGTON (Special) — Husband-hunting gals in Louisiana, where there are only 97.2 males for every 100 females, would do well to heed the advice Horace Greeley gave young men in bygone days and head west.

There, according to statistics of the Bureaau of the Census, based on the 1960 census of population, is where the odds are best matrimonially speaking.

American's women and girls outnumber the men and boys in all section sof the U.S. except the Mountain and Pacific states and the Dakotas, says the Bureau.

Nationally, the U.S. has 97.1 males per 100 females, thereby proving that statistically, at any rate a Louisiana girl or woman has a slightly better chance of latching onto a husband than her sisters over the nation. That, of course, does not take into account the honey-voiced charm of southern belles.

Women and girls are more numberous in seven of the nation's nine geograpic divisions. The ratio is 94.5 males to 100 females in the Middle Atlantic states. Conversely, the ratio is 101.2 males to 100 females in the Mountain states, for the other divisions, the ratios are between these two extremes.

Among states, the proportions vary from 93.4 males per 100 females in Massachusetts to 132.3 males per 100 females in Alaska. The greatest differences in proportion of the sexes is in the district of Columbia, with 88.3 miles to every 100 females.

Outside the west, women and girls lead in numbers in every state except North and South Dakota. In the two Dakotas, there are 104.5 and 102.4 males respec--tively to every 100 females.

MANY PERSONS CREATE a mental picture of what they would consider an ideal retreat from the cares of the work-a-day world. The locale of this Shangrila spot, which is posted "off limits to worry," might be anywhere from the Twin Cities to distant points. Hess' Flight Recalled

Strange Mission

EDITORS'S NOTE — Twenty years ago news of one of the most incredible incidents of World War II burst upon the nations of the western alliance: A Nazi bigshot had ditched his fighter plane and parachuted into Scotland. Noland Norgaard, now chief of the Denver bureau of The Associated Press, was then a war correspondent in England. Here's his recapitulation of the famous flight of Rudolph Hess.

By NOLAND NORGAARD
Associated Press Staff Writer

May 10, 1941, was a Saturday night the people of Britain don't forget.

The Luftwaffe made its heaviest raid of World War II on London that night 20 years ago. From 550 bombers poured over 700 tons of high explosives, 86 tons of incendiaries.

Over 3,000 Londoners were killed or seriously injured; 2,200 fires wiped out or seriously damaged some 11,000 houses.

About 10:30 p.m., RAF fighter command headquarters was baffled by a lone Messershmitt 110 twin-engine fighter streaking over Scotland's east coast toward Glasgow.

Air Marshal Sir Solto Douglas was incredulous. He knew no Messerschmitt could fly to Scotland and return to its base without refueling.

WATCHING MOVIE

Prime Minister Winston Churchill was at Ditchley Park, Oxfordshire, for a quiet weekend. After dinner came word of the heavy attack on London. "There was nothing I could do about it," he has recorded, so he settled down, with his hosts and some intimates, plus the customary brandy and cigars, to watch a movie, "The Marx Brothers Go West."

Upon this setting burst perhaps the most bizarre, unbelievable incident of the war.

Over a private line room 10 Downing Street came a message: "Rudolf Hess has arrived in Scotland."

It was incredible, but true. Rudolf Hess—deputy to Adolf Hitler, long-time associated and personal friend of the Fuehrer, leader of the Nazi party, and No. 3 man in the entire Hitlerian hierarchy—had indeed flown alone from Germany to Scotland, and parachuted safely to earth when his Messerschmitt ran out of fuel.

He had come on a strange mission—to convince certain British leaders, and the British king, that they should make peace with Hitler. The terms: Germany to have a free hand in Europe but to leave the British Empire intact, except for the return of former German colonies.

BREAKS SILENCE

One of the leaders Hess sought to persuade, the Duke of Hamilton, recently broke a long silence on the affair and shed some light on Hess' peculiar errand.

He said the Nazi chieftain had obtained his name from a Dr. Albrect Haushofer, son of a retired German general, who had recommended him as an Englishman who would be able to make contact with the British government.

The duke also said Hess had written a letter to him months in advance of his flight, suggesting some Germans were anxious over Hitler's policies, but that the letter was intercepted by British intelligence. It was not delivered to the duke until after Hess' arrival.

On May 10 he took off from Augsburg, deep in southern Germany. With an extraordinary display of navigational skills, he flew 830 miles, then parachuted to earth only 11 miles from his intended destination, the country estate of the duke.

But his bold plan was doomed to failure. He was denied audiences with the king or with any major British officials. He was imprisoned for the remainder of the war. He left his British prison only to go on trial for his life at Nuernberg.

NO DETAILS

The public heard nothing of Hess' flight the day it occurred. But 48 hours later, loud electric gongs sounded through the corridors of the high tower building of the University of London, which housed Britain's Ministry of Information. Reporters rushing to the auditorium where important communiques were read knew something unusual was afoot, but were not prepared for the startling opening words:

"Rudolf Hess, the deputy fuehrer of Germany and party leader of the National Socialist party, has landed in Scotland."

The end of that communique saw one of the wildest scrambles in the ministry's wartime history. Newsmen dashed for telephones to wrestle with monumental frustration. The heavy weekend air-raid had smashed at least one telephone exchange. Gas explosions in underground conduits had severed cables. Unable to telephone our Fleet Street offices or transmit our stories direct to cable offices by teletype, we frantically phoned bulletins to every branch telegraph or cable office we could reach, praying they would be relayed quickly to the cableheads. Finally, some of them made it.

A prominent American radio commentator advanced four theories for Hess' flight: (1) he was demented, as the Berlin government was insisting; (2) he was on a peace mission for Hitler; (3) he sought British help for an anti-Hitler cabal; (4) he had fallen into Hitler's disfavor and had to escape. If the commentator had made one more guess—a peace mission without Hitler's knowledge or consent—he would have hit it.

Two weeks after Hess landed, a former Berlin correspondent and author conjectured that Hess' flight was "a last, desperate effort to achieve peace before Hitler inexorably fused the Nazi revolution with the Communist revolution for a final-Russo-German assault upon the Western world." Less than a month later, Hitler crossed him up by attacking Russia.

The guessing was to go on for a long time.

The European editor of a leading American weekly reported that Hess was a follower of Frank Buchman, founder of the so-called "Oxford Group," now known as the Moral Rearmament Movement. Hence, he wrote, Hess flew to Scotland "as a penitent seeking peace.

FACED TRIBUNAL

In 1946, Hess and 13 other top-flight Nazi leaders faced an international military tribunal in the first of the major war crimes trials at Nuernberg, the city in which he had strutted so often beside the Fuehrer at the great hysterical Nazi party rallies.

As befitted his preflight status as No. 3 Nazi of them all, Hess occupied the second seat in the front row of the prisoners' box, beside Goering.

The once trim, handsome Hess of prewar Nazi glory was gone. His eyes seemed sunk in cavernous depths under his beetling brows; his dark beard showed through his sunken cheeks. He wore dark glasses much of the time.

Day after day for 11 months, while his fellow prisoners closely watched the proceedings on which their lives hinged, Hess sat reading books, seemingly oblivious to the tales of shame and horror that came from the Nazis own records. He covered his eyes much of the time when the courtroom was darkened for the showing of movies of Nazi atrocities.

Only once did his calm quiet desert him. That was the occasion on which he startled the tribunal by leaping suddenly to his feet with a sudden volley of words. Courtroom interpreters, taken by surprise, gave varying translations of his almost incoherent speech. The accepted version was that he assured the tribunal his memory was at last at the service of the court. It was taken by some as an admission that he had been feigning amnesia up to that point.

DIFFICULTY

Allied prosecutors had extreme difficulty trying to link Hess with actual war crimes. Most of the mass murders and other Nazi atrocities occurred after he became a prisoner in a British cell.

But there was no questioning his role in the brutalities of the Nazi rise to power within Germany, or the fact that he had participated in beginning of the Hitlerian conquest of Europe. He was sentenced to life imprisonment.

Now 67, Hess is still in a German prison. Few have wasted tears on him or his fellow Nazis.

But Winston Churchill, whom none would accuse of being soft on Nazis, summed up his version of the Hess affair thus:

"Reflecting upon the whole of this story, I am glad not to be responsible for the way in which Hess has been and is being treated. Whatever may be the moral guilt of a German who stood near to Hitler, Hess had, in my view, atoned for this by his completely devoted and frantic deed of lunatic benevolence. He came to us of his own free will, and, though without authority, had something of the quality of an envoy. He was a medical and not a criminal case, and should be so regarded."

Captured On Canvas

Spirit Of The West

By MILES A. SMITH
Associated Press Arts Editor

In the days of the real Old West, men were men and women had sense enough to stay out of their way.

It's just possible the women folks didn't care for the aroma.

For Indian , cowboys, trappers, soldiers, scouts and prospectors were men "with the bark on," as one he-man observer of those days liked to put it. A man on a sweaty horse, chasing a dusty, musky old buffalo, was no glamor boy.

Those were the days of what usually is described as "blood and thunder," not to be confused with what the movies have chosen to portray in a spirit of thud and blunder, complete with girls in dainty crinoline.

RECORDED ERA

The he-man observer who recorded the era of bloody scalps and thundering hooves in the real West and Southwest was Frederic Remington.

He was born 100 years ago, come Oct. 1. He had practically no formal education in art, but before he died at the age of 48 his paintings, drawings and bronze sculptures had made him internationally famous — and wealthy to boot.

A centennial exhibition of his work is being held from May 1 to Sept. 15 at the Whitney Gallery of Western Art in Cody, Wyo. That is the town founded by his old friend and bronco buster, Buffalo Bill. It is near the east entrance of Yellowstone Park.

The thing to remember about Remington is that he was careful to draw and paint the real thing. When he drew a picture of a horse and rider, it was a certain horse with a certain twitch in its nostrils; and a certain man with the right kind of bucksin garment fastened the right way, and with a specific glint in his eye from peering through the dust toward a water hole.

CAPTURED AROMA

Remington captured the aroma. As the books would put it, he was a documentary artist distinguished for meticulous historical accuracy.

There was another artist of the same era whose life and works offer a close parallel with those of Remington. His name was Charles M. Russell, and he too was born in 1861, living until 1926. The Whitney Museum has many of his works also.

Russell was a real Montana cowboy, but Remington came from the East. Born at Canton, N. Y., the son of a newspaper publisher, he later lived in Ogdensburg, N. Y., and for a time was enrolled at Yale. He became a good heavyweight boxer and made the Yale football team of 1878 as a "rusher." The captain of the team was a fellow named Walter Camp.

Remington found that the path of love was not going too smoothly in the case of a young lady named Eva Caten. Moodily he took off for the West and made a long tour on horseback, doing a little gold prospecting on the side.

He had the sense to realize that the days of the red man and the picturesque scouts were numbered. He wanted to make pictures of everything before it was too late. Remington, with his natural talent for drawing, was as much a historian at heart as he was an artist.

Two years later his first picture was accepted by Harper's Weekly and the die was cast. In another two years he came back East, married Eva and started besieging editors with more Western scenes. Success came pretty fast. In 1888 his reputation was enhanced when he collaborated on a book with another Western fan Theodore Roosevelt

BRIC-A-BRAC

In 1890 he settled at New Rochelle, N. Y., in a studio filled with authentic Western bric-a-brac and stacks of paintings and sketches, but he returned frequently to the West. When he turned to sculpture in 1895 his first bronze, "The Bronco Buster," was a notable success.

He covered the Spanish-American War with pencil and sketchbook. In 1900 he published "A Bunch of Buckskins," a portfolio of lithographs in full color. They have become collector's items. Each picture showed a single figure, mounted on a typical horse.

By 1905 one of New York's most famous art galleries began giving exhibitions of his work and two years later the Metropolitan Museum acquired four of his bronzes. When he died in 1909 he was a success, artistically and financially.

The contents of his famous studio—practically a museum in itself—were installed about two years ago in a wing at the Whitney Museum. In that collection are 110 original oil sketches, cowboy and Indian costumes, weapons, masks and pottery.

Royal Pair Weather Stormy Year

(EDITOR'S NOTE: May 6 is Princess Margaret's and Antony Armstrong-Jones' first wedding anniversary. How have they made out in their first year of married life? The answer is given in the following dispatch by Margaret Saville, a writer on British royal family matters for more than 30 years, and palace correspondent for United Press International.)

By MARGARET SAVILLE

LONDON (UPI)—Seldom in history have two young people started married life under more handicaps than did Princess Margaret and the unsuspected beau chucked out the Chelsea, London's Bohemia.

But the girl once known as the "laughing princess" and free-lance photographer Antony Armstrong-Jones give every appearance of having weathered their first-year problems and to be settling down as a happily married couple.

Their problems were enormous and some of them, obviously still exist. Consider:

—Never before in British history had a king's daughter married a commoner making his own living.

—Rarely in history, if ever, has a nation been as stunned by a princess' choice for husband. Stunned, and not entirely approving.

—Rigid royal protocol bound—and still binds—them both in inescapable red tape that hampers and directs their every public move.

FIERCE PUBLICITY

—Fierce world publicity bathed them, and still does, challenging and questioning their every public action and every public word.

—Both entered entirely new worlds: The princess forced to adjust to a compromise between being a princess fourth in line to the throne, and being a wife; Armstrong-Jones forced to give up virtually all his former associations, his job, and to conform to every demand of the royal household. And to accept a scale and manner of living paid for by his wife.

These would be formidable obstacles for any newlyweds. Yet all evidence is that Margaret and Tony are making it work.

The adjustments, the give-and-take, have involved small as well as major differences. For instance when Margaret and Tony returned last June from their six weeks' West Indies cruise aboard the royal yacht Britannia, waiting to greet Margaret rapturously were her two pet Sealyham terriers, Johnny and Pippin.

But they didn't take to Tony, nor he to them. At his own flat on Pimlico Road in Chelsea he had had a big black cat. Margaret settled that one by shipping off Johnny and Pippin to the royal lodge at Windsor where they became part of the queen mother's kennel. She kept only one quiet dog at home in Kensington Palace where the Joneses set up housekeeping. That was Roly Poly a plump King Charles spaniel.

BY CONCESSON

On his part Armstrong-Jones made a big personal concession for him, among many others, by giving up the corduroy trousers and casual, gay sweaters he wore in his Pimlico road days, and appears publicly impeccably clad in conservative suits. He still hasn't taken to wearing a bowler; usually he is hatless. He now is "casual" only in the privacy of home.

Those are some of the small adjustments each has had to make. They also have much in common. They love the theater, both like flowers and keep them always around the house in great profusion. They share an interest in the arts generally, and Margaret takes a great interest in the photography which Armstrong-Jones still pursues, but now as a hobby. They both like to cook and frequently do when they are alone, and have similar tastes in food. Neither one is particularly an outdoors person. They are equally fond of parties and gay gatherings. They give a number of small dinners and share an enthusiasm for this sort of entertaining.

Armstrong-Jones without question is fretting in his lack of professional direction, in the career sense. But he has thrown himself enthusiastically into his non-paying post with the Council of Industrial Design. The first fruits of that connection were disclosed recently when the Regents Park zoo unveiled a modernistic aviarty he had designed. And Tony also has thrown himself enthusiastically into do-it-yourself programs around the house.

OTHER PROBLEMS

Omitting the obvious problems these two young people must face together, what of those other problems that all newlyweds face, such as money, in-laws former friends, and housing? Here, too, the princess and the commoner seem to be working things out.

Money: When Armstrong-Jones walked down the aisle at Westminster Abbey a year ago to become "Mr. Princess," he had been earning about 5,000 pounds ($14,000) a year and was headed for ever-increasing earnings. He was not known to have any other income. He started his photograpy business with a 100 pound ($280) loan from his father. Princess Margaret's state allowance was increased from 6,000 pounds a year to 15,000 ($16,800 to $242,000). In addition she has a considerable private income, the exact extent unknown, inherited from her grandmother, the late Queen Mary. That Princess Margaret would have to be the primary source of the family pocketbook must have been something she and Tony discussed, and worked out satisfactorily between them, before they married.

May 10, 1941, was a Saturday night the people of Britain don't forget.

The Luftwaffe made its heaviest raid of World War II on London that night 20 years ago. From 550 bombers poured over 700 tons of high explosives, 86 tons of incendiaries.

Over 3,000 Londoners were killed or seriously injured; 2,200 fires wiped out or seriously damaged some 11,000 houses.

About 10:30 p.m., RAF fighter command headquarters was baffled by a lone Messershmitt 110 twin-engine fighter streaking over Scotland's east coast toward Glasgow.

Air Marshal Sir Solto Douglas was incredulous. He knew no Messerschmitt could fly to Scotland and return to its base without refueling.

WATCHING MOVIE

Prime Minister Winston Churchill was at Ditchley Park, Oxfordshire, for a quiet weekend. After dinner came word of the heavy attack on London. "There was nothing I could do about it," he has recorded, so he settled down, with his hosts and some intimates, plus the customary brandy and cigars, to watch a movie, "The Marx Brothers Go West."

Upon this setting burst perhaps the most bizarre, unbelievable incident of the war.

Over a private line room 10 Downing Street came a message: "Rudolf Hess has arrived in Scotland."

It was incredible, but true. Rudolf Hess—deputy to Adolf Hitler, long-time associated and personal friend of the Fuehrer, leader of the Nazi party, and No. 3 man in the entire Hitlerian hierarchy—had indeed flown alone from Germany to Scotland, and parachuted safely to earth when his Messerschmitt ran out of fuel.

He had come on a strange mission—to convince certain British leaders, and the British king, that they should make peace with Hitler. The terms: Germany to have a free hand in Europe but to leave the British Empire intact, except for the return of former German colonies.

BREAKS SILENCE

One of the leaders Hess sought to persuade, the Duke of Hamilton, recently broke a long silence on the affair and shed some light on Hess' peculiar errand.

He said the Nazi chieftain had obtained his name from a Dr. Albrect Haushofer, son of a retired German general, who had recommended him as an Englishman who would be able to make contact with the British government.

The duke also said Hess had written a letter to him months in advance of his flight, suggesting some Germans were anxious over Hitler's policies, but that the letter was intercepted by British intelligence. It was not delivered to the duke until after Hess' arrival.

On May 10 he took off from Augsburg, deep in southern Germany. With an extraordinary display of navigational skills, he flew 830 miles, then parachuted to earth only 11 miles from his intended destination, the country estate of the duke.

But his bold plan was doomed to failure. He was denied audiences with the king or with any major British officials. He was imprisoned for the remainder of the war. He left his British prison only to go on trial for his life at Nuernberg.

NO DETAILS

The public heard nothing of Hess' flight the day it occurred. But 48 hours later, loud electric gongs sounded through the corridors of the high tower building of the University of London, which housed Britain's Ministry of Information. Reporters rushing to the auditorium where important communiques were read knew something unusual was afoot, but were not prepared for the startling opening words:

"Rudolf Hess, the deputy fuehrer of Germany and party leader of the National Socialist party, has landed in Scotland."

The end of that communique saw one of the wildest scrambles in the ministry's wartime history. Newsmen dashed for telephones to wrestle with monumental frustration. The heavy weekend air-raid had smashed at least one telephone exchange. Gas explosions in underground conduits had severed cables. Unable to telephone our Fleet Street offices or transmit our stories direct to cable offices by teletype, we frantically phoned bulletins to every branch telegraph or cable office we could reach, praying they would be relayed quickly to the cableheads. Finally, some of them made it.

A prominent American radio commentator advanced four theories for Hess' flight: (1) he was demented, as the Berlin government was insisting; (2) he was on a peace mission for Hitler; (3) he sought British help for an anti-Hitler cabal; (4) he had fallen into Hitler's disfavor and had to escape. If the commentator had made one more guess—a peace mission without Hitler's knowledge or consent—he would have hit it.

Two weeks after Hess landed, a former Berlin correspondent and author conjectured that Hess' flight was "a last, desperate effort to achieve peace before Hitler inexorably fused the Nazi revolution with the Communist revolution for a final-Russo-German assault upon the Western world." Less than a month later, Hitler crossed him up by attacking Russia.

The guessing was to go on for a long time.

The European editor of a leading American weekly reported that Hess was a follower of Frank Buchman, founder of the so-called "Oxford Group," now known as the Moral Rearmament Movement. Hence, he wrote, Hess flew to Scotland "as a penitent seeking peace.

FACED TRIBUNAL

In 1946, Hess and 13 other top-flight Nazi leaders faced an international military tribunal in the first of the major war crimes trials at Nuernberg, the city in which he had strutted so often beside the Fuehrer at the great hysterical Nazi party rallies.

As befitted his preflight status as No. 3 Nazi of them all, Hess occupied the second seat in the front row of the prisoners' box, beside Goering.

The once trim, handsome Hess of prewar Nazi glory was gone. His eyes seemed sunk in cavernous depths under his beetling brows; his dark beard showed through his sunken cheeks. He wore dark glasses much of the time.

Day after day for 11 months, while his fellow prisoners closely watched the proceedings on which their lives hinged, Hess sat reading books, seemingly oblivious to the tales of shame and horror that came from the Nazis own records. He covered his eyes much of the time when the courtroom was darkened for the showing of movies of Nazi atrocities.

Only once did his calm quiet desert him. That was the occasion on which he startled the tribunal by leaping suddenly to his feet with a sudden volley of words. Courtroom interpreters, taken by surprise, gave varying translations of his almost incoherent speech. The accepted version was that he assured the tribunal his memory was at last at the service of the court. It was taken by some as an admission that he had been feigning amnesia up to that point.

DIFFICULTY

Allied prosecutors had extreme difficulty trying to link Hess with actual war crimes. Most of the mass murders and other Nazi atrocities occurred after he became a prisoner in a British cell.

But there was no questioning his role in the brutalities of the Nazi rise to power within Germany, or the fact that he had participated in beginning of the Hitlerian conquest of Europe. He was sentenced to life imprisonment.

Now 67, Hess is still in a German prison. Few have wasted tears on him or his fellow Nazis.

But Winston Churchill, whom none would accuse of being soft on Nazis, summed up his version of the Hess affair thus:

"Reflecting upon the whole of this story, I am glad not to be responsible for the way in which Hess has been and is being treated. Whatever may be the moral guilt of a German who stood near to Hitler, Hess had, in my view, atoned for this by his completely devoted and frantic deed of lunatic benevolence. He came to us of his own free will, and, though without authority, had something of the quality of an envoy. He was a medical and not a criminal case, and should be so regarded."

Spirit Of The West

By MILES A. SMITH

Associated Press Arts Editor

In the days of the real Old West, men were men and women had sense enough to stay out of their way.

For Indian , cowboys, trappers, soldiers, scouts and prospectors were men "with the bark on," as one he-man observer of those days liked to put it. A man on a sweaty horse, chasing a dusty, musky old buffalo, was no glamor boy.

Those were the days of what usually is described as "blood and thunder," not to be confused with what the movies have chosen to portray in a spirit of thud and blunder, complete with girls in dainty crinoline.

RECORDED ERA

The he-man observer who recorded the era of bloody scalps and thundering hooves in the real West and Southwest was Frederic Remington.

He was born 100 years ago, come Oct. 1. He had practically no formal education in art, but before he died at the age of 48 his paintings, drawings and bronze sculptures had made him internationally famous — and wealthy to boot.

A centennial exhibition of his work is being held from May 1 to Sept. 15 at the Whitney Gallery of Western Art in Cody, Wyo. That is the town founded by his old friend and bronco buster, Buffalo Bill. It is near the east entrance of Yellowstone Park.

The thing to remember about Remington is that he was careful to draw and paint the real thing. When he drew a picture of a horse and rider, it was a certain horse with a certain twitch in its nostrils; and a certain man with the right kind of bucksin garment fastened the right way, and with a specific glint in his eye from peering through the dust toward a water hole.

CAPTURED AROMA

Remington captured the aroma. As the books would put it, he was a documentary artist distinguished for meticulous historical accuracy.

There was another artist of the same era whose life and works offer a close parallel with those of Remington. His name was Charles M. Russell, and he too was born in 1861, living until 1926. The Whitney Museum has many of his works also.

Russell was a real Montana cowboy, but Remington came from the East. Born at Canton, N. Y., the son of a newspaper publisher, he later lived in Ogdensburg, N. Y., and for a time was enrolled at Yale. He became a good heavyweight boxer and made the Yale football team of 1878 as a "rusher." The captain of the team was a fellow named Walter Camp.

Remington found that the path of love was not going too smoothly in the case of a young lady named Eva Caten. Moodily he took off for the West and made a long tour on horseback, doing a little gold prospecting on the side.

He had the sense to realize that the days of the red man and the picturesque scouts were numbered. He wanted to make pictures of everything before it was too late. Remington, with his natural talent for drawing, was as much a historian at heart as he was an artist.

Two years later his first picture was accepted by Harper's Weekly and the die was cast. In another two years he came back East, married Eva and started besieging editors with more Western scenes. Success came pretty fast. In 1888 his reputation was enhanced when he collaborated on a book with another Western fan—Theodore Roosevelt.

BRIC-A-BRAC

In 1890 he settled at New Rochelle, N. Y., in a studio filled with authentic Western bric-a-brac and stacks of paintings and sketches, but he returned frequently to the West. When he turned to sculpture in 1895 his first bronze, "The Bronco Buster," was a notable success.

He covered the Spanish-American War with pencil and sketchbook. In 1900 he published "A Bunch of Buckskins," a portfolio of lithographs in full color. They have become collector's items. Each picture showed a single figure, mounted on a typical horse.

By 1905 one of New York's most famous art galleries began giving exhibitions of his work and two years later the Metropolitan Museum acquired four of his bronzes. When he died in 1909 he was a success, artistically and financially.

The contents of his famous studio—practically a museum in itself—were installed about two years ago in a wing at the Whitney Museum. In that collection are 110 original oil sketches, cowboy and Indian costumes, weapons, masks and pottery.

Prying Schools Open

Utter disregard for the rights of states and for the wishes of the American people is being demonstrated by Attorney General Robert Kennedy, brother of President Kennedy. The attorney general attacks every problem of forced compliance with federal regulation in a ruthless manner.

That the attorney general would do so was to be expected. Not only is that the way he attacks any problem but, since he is the brother of the president, he thinks he will be given an entirely free hand. One not related to the president would have no such expectation.

Senator Byrd, D., Va., one of this country's most forthright conservatives and advocates of true democracy and freedom of the people, has pointed out the grave danger in the government's attempt to pry open the public schools in Prince Edward county, Virginia, after they were closed because of integration attempts. He said this action was only a token example of what would happen if congress passed a federal aid-to-education bill.

In a speech prepared for senate delivery, Senator Byrd said an injunction filed by the attorney general which would prevent Virginia from supporting its schools as long as those in Prince Edward county are closed was "fantastic and completely unrealistic."

"If non-elected federal officials will go to the extremes they are applying in Virginia now," he said, "who can imagine the ruthlessness of the federal bureaucrats with the power of the federal purse to force combination over their schools.

Senator Byrd said the aid-to-education bill was "offensive" because of federal control over public schools and because of excessive spending.

We know that a dictator-type man with authority never worries about whether anything is legal. The late governor and Senator Huey P. Long of Louisiana was quoted as saying that, "If what we want to do is against the law we'll change the law."

The present federal administration apparently sometimes does not even bother to change the law. It acts on the assumption that our radical and integrationist supreme court will declare legal anything it wants to do without any change in the law. This is a logical assumption, since the court has set itself up as the lawmaking body of the land, as witness the declaration that its infamous "black Monday" integration decision of 1954 was the law of the land.

One illustration of the fact that the administration does not bother too much with the law was given by Sylvia Porter, financial columnist.

Miss Porter said that the Eisenhower administration was hampered by the fact that it was never able to get congress to raise the interest rate ceiling on government bonds. The Kennedy administration did not get congress to raise the ceiling but simply ignored the regulation and raised the interest rate, the columnist pointed out.

Anyone who ever doubted that the federal government wants to control the schools can scarcely doubt any longer. Direct attempts at federal usurpation of the rights of local governments to control their schools are in evidence on every hand, but the Virginia situation is one of the most flagrant.

Dropping NRA Hangovers

Quite a number of states are getting rid of the NRA hangovers from which they have been suffering ever since the first administration of the late Franklin D. Roosevelt. We refer to so-called fair trade or price - fixing laws. The latest to join the growing list of states which have knocked out such laws is Oklahoma.

The Oklahoma state supreme court has declared the state's fair trade law unconstitutional.

It will be recalled that under the NRA, one of the many initialed organizations of the Roosevelt administration, merchants were prohibited from selling below a fixed price. This law later was held unconstitutional by the United States supreme court, much to the relief of President Roosevelt, because he found the problems involved in it were too numerous, but its enactment resulted in similar action by a good many states, and several forms of price-fixing became accepted practice. This was true despite the fact that anti-trust laws were still in force and some firms were being prosecuted for fixing prices and others for not fixing them.

The Oklahoma law, recently declared invalid, contained the non-signer feature, which binds all retailers in the state to sell a trade-marked article at the price set by the manufacturer when one retailer in the state signs an agreement with the manufacturer to do so.

Manufacturers have always had and probably always will have the option of not selling to those who sell below the marked price and price - fixing laws not only were unnecessary but contrary to the American policy of competitive trade.

This non-signer feature violates the right of contract, which involves the right not to make a contract as well as the right to make one.

The whole so-called fair trade idea is a violation of the spirit of the anti-trust laws upon which the administration in Washington is currently placing so much emphasis.

Recently officials of 29 electrical equipment manufacturers were convicted of agreement to fix prices. Some of these officials went to jail and the companies are faced with suits for damages running into high figures. The administration has announced it will conduct unremitting war against the practice of submitting identical bids on materials and equipment purchased by the government.

There is little difference in principle between a group of manufacturers getting together to set prices and a single manufacturer doing the same thing with a group of retailers, or by binding all retailers by making an agreement with only one.

Price-fixing is price-fixing, no matter how it is arrived at. If it is not permissible for one group of businessmen to do it, why should it be possible for another?

This applies also to the federal government. Why should it have the privilege of fixing farm prices or any other prices?

ALLEN-SCOTT REPORT

John Birch Society Probe

Interest Is Strong In Congress For Investigation But Question Is Who Is Willing To Bell Cat

To be or not to be is the question — that both Democratic and Republican leaders of Congress are uneasily pondering about investigating the widely controversial John Birch Society.

There is considerable backstage bipartisan sentiment in the Senate and House for such a probe. The thorny problem is who is to make it and how.

As one nationally - known lawmaker remarked drily, "This is one cat a lot of us would like to bell. We feel this is an organization that should be thoroughly aired, particularly how it's financed and operates. But we still haven't decided how that belling is to be done, and right now I wouldn't bet we'll come up with an answer.

"To put it bluntly, this is a dilemma that is loaded to the gunwales with political dynamite."

Two major reasons for this wary indecision are:

(1) The demonstrated highly volatile nature of Birch Society zealots. Members of Congress who have spoken out against the organization are deluged with critical mail, some of it vituperative and threatening. Other legislators, who have said nothing, are being bombarded with demands they defend the society.

Senator Gale McGee (D., Wyo.) is an instance of this. The former political science professor is so concerned about Birch Society strength in his state that he flew out there especially for a first-hand study to determine its extent.

Other senators are doing the same thing, particularly those up for election next year.

(2) The committees which already have authority to conduct such an investigation — the Senate Internal Security Committee and the House Un - American Activities Committee — have at least one member each who belongs to the Birch Society. Other committeemen are openly friendly to the organization.

A move to set up a special probing committee is likely to be hotly opposed by these two groups.

However, that proposal is still under discussion and more may be heard of it. At one bipartisan strategy meeting the unsual suggestion was tossed out that a joint special Senate - House committee be created for this investigation.

SIGNIFICANT SPEECH — Vice President Lyndon Johnson has agreed to be honor speaker at the June 10 graduation exercises of Howard University, leading Negro educational center in the capital that is attended by many foreign students, particularly from Africa and Asia. Johnson was the university's first choice, and he accepted the invitation without hesitation . . . The Texan, who began his government service in 1931 as a congressional secretary, has been singled out by President Kennedy for special praise as a "brilliant example of a successful government career worker." In a message to the Civil Service, the president cited Johnson as "my top career executive" . . . Representative Thaddeus Machrowicz (D., Mich.), member of the powerful House Ways and Means Committee, is slated for one of the threescore federal judgeships created by Congress. Other members of the Senate and House also have their eye on these lifetime prizes. The backstage scramble for them is already on.

ON THE GRIDDLE — Segregation in labor unions is slated for airing by a House subcommittee headed by Representative James Roosevelt (D., Calif.). Particular target of the probe is building trades unions that bar Negroes. Chief instigator of this investigation is Representative Adam Clayton Powell (D., N.Y.), chairman of the Labor Committee, who is setting up the subcommittee and naming Roosevelt for that purpose . . . Reclamation Commissioner Floyd Dominy, holdover from the Eisenhower administration, is the target of mounting congressional complaints to the White House. Dominy, who stands high in the good graces of Senator Carl Hayden (D., Ariz.), 83-year-old chairman of the potent Appropriations Committee, is charged with privately opposing administration power and other projects. Aides of the president are being told that "unless Dominy is replaced, there will be an explosion which will rip the lid off the Interior Department."

JOB HUNTERS — Postmaster General Edward Day expects to have 10,000 new jobs by July 1. The Californian has told the president these new jobs will be made possible by savings resulting from reducing the overtime of regular postal employes and cutting the work week of substitutes . . . The Republican National Committee is trying to find jobs for a considerable number of former officials of the Eisenhower administration. The committee has sent out several thousand letters to businessmen and trade and other organizations advising them that experienced Washington lawyers, executives and representatives are available among these jobless Eisenhower officials. Republican leaders are eager to keep as many of them as possible in the capital for future political activities . . . More than 700 new jobs will be created under the National Aeronautics and Space Administration if its increased budget is approved by Congress — which is very likely.

ON WAY OUT — Ralph J. Cordiner, head of General Electric, will "retire" by fall — despite his recent re - electon by an overwhelming vote. That's the inside word from GE sources to Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) who is investigating the electrical industry's price - fixing operations. He has been told the GE board did not want to oust Cordiner while under fire, but that he will be replaced in a few months . . . Senator Hubert Humphrey (D., Minn.) has personal assurances from President Kennedy that $100 million of the $500 million voted by Congress for economic aid to Latin America will be earmarked for the development of farmer and consumer co-operatives there. Humphrey strongly favors such a program, and has been working on details with Agriculture and State Department officials . . . Governor Rockefeller expects that at least one of the three large farms he and his brothers own in Venezuela will be taken over by the government. The government there is under powerful public pressure to nationalize foreign land and other holdings, and the Rockefeller farms, among the best developed in Venezuela, are high on the list to be taken over.

Heart Goes Fast

Woman Who Worries About 'Ticker' May Be Only Imagining

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: For the past 10 years I have been plagued with a fast - beating heart. I hear it pounding and gushing in my head almost continually. Some nights it keeps me awaake.

I've had cardiograms and heart examinations and was told there is nothing organically wrong.

I am a person who worries a lot. I am single and live with my elderly parents. I am happy in my work. Is there any help for me? — Miss J. D., Buffalo, N.Y.

Answer: I suggest you send for my leaflet "Maybe Your Heart Trouble's Imaginary." Also try to get a copy of my book, "You Can Increase Your Heart Power." In it, you will find many pages devoted to palpitation, rapid heart beats and other irregularities. You will learn that many people with symptoms of heart disease still have normal hearts.

Your doctor has examined you carefully and has tried to convince you that your heart is normal. I know it's hard to believe when your pulse begins pounding, but the sooner you do, the better.

DIET PROBLEM IN ACNE

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: My 14-year-old boy has acne. Only a few pimples now and then, but because of his fears, he has become a diet fanatic. Naturally, he has been using various medications, soaps and granules — umteen times a day!

This is not so bad, but when it comes to eating, he's driving us insane! He refuses to eat almost anything, for fear the foods will increase his acne. Of course, we agree he should stay away from chocolate, nuts, excess sugars and fats. But now there is hardly anything that he will eat. He is actually starving himself! — Mrs. X, California.

Answer: I doubt that there is anything I can say which will convert your youngster into one with a normal, healthy appetite. That will come sometime later: but only by his own volition.

It seems to me that you had better stop trying the frontal attacks. Attack on the flanks. The best way to do that with a teenager is not to keep telling him "what's good for him." That's often the surest way to get his back up. Resolve not to mention diet. He won't starve. Within a few weeks he may be asking for his once - favorite dishes.

Dr. Steincrohn welcomes all letters, but because of the great number received, he cannot answer each one personally. However, all questions are ultimately incorporated into the column.

Dr. Steincrohn's leaflet, "When to Suspect Your Gall Bladder," will be mailed to you on receipt of a stamped, self - addressed envelope and 10 cents in coin for handling charges. Address your request to Dr. Steincrohn, c-o this newspaper.

Seeks Aid

Monroe, Louisiana

To the Editor:

Please investigate the following statements for truth and facts as given below, and print if found to be true and correct.

I am a white male, 38 years of age, married, father of four children, and life long resident of Monroe, Louisiana. I have been physically handicapped since the age of two months but was able to earn my own living until 1959. That year I lost all my central vision due to a near nervous breakdown. I am now a burden to the taxpayer, but I have tried to get help so I could help myself as well as others who are handicapped.

On or about December 18, 1960, I applied to the Bureau for the Blind and Sight Conservation for assistance in setting up a Telephone Answering Service, whereby I could earn my own living and not have to be a tax burden from the State Welfare Department. On January 1, 1961, I received a letter signed by Mr. William H. Patterson, rehabilitation counselor for the blind, advising that Mr. Jimmie T. Short would be in Monroe, Louisiana, in the month of February. I contacted Mr. Patterson on February 5, 1961, and he advised me by telephone that Mr. Short would be in Monroe, Louisiana, on February 14, 1961. After waiting until February 28, 1961, I wrote the governor requesting that he check into this matter. On March 7, 1961, I received a letter from the governor expressing his interest in the case and that I would hear from the department in the near future. On March 28, 1961, Mr. Short finally arrived at my home. On April 11, 1961, Mr. Short advised me by letter that the Bureau for the Blind and Sight Conservation was unable to help me establish this business due to the fact that there were two similar businesses operating in Monroe at the present time, and therefore, felt it was not profitable. Mr. Short is an agriculture counselor with the department, so we felt we should be given consideration by someone having business experience. On April 12, 1961, we wrote Mrs. Mary Evelyn Parker, Commissioner of Welfare, also Senator Jamar Adcock wrote Mrs. Parker, requesting that someone else besides Mr. Short be sent to Monroe to investigate this matter. Representative Lawrence Gibbs also wrote Governor Jimmie H. Davis requesting that the proper parties investigate. However, on April 26, 1961, Mr. Jimmie T. Short was sent back to investigate and after having me check on equipment and then talking to me as if I was crazy, advised that the department would help in a very small way. Also, he was advised that there would be another legally blind person which could benefit, namely Sherman A. Parker, Route 1, Box 10, Gibsland, Louisiana. All these facts were set forth in the letter to Mrs. Parker. We request that this be checked and printed and that the taxpayers put themselves in our shoes, because this could happen to them. Also, advise their senators and representatives to hold an open investigation and give a fair report to the taxpayers. I am hoping to hear from you soon on this matter.

Sincerely yours,
LEROY WALLACE

Ellender Comment

Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

In reference to your article, page one of last Wednesday, 26 April, where Senator Ellender told air force officials that Communist infiltration of Cuba is red "retaliation" for the United States bases surrounding Russia, he mentions, "We've been doing that to Russia for seven or eight years, haven't we?" The officials evidently did not reply.

The senator's reference to "seven or eight years" seems to imply that all that has been done to Russia has been the work of the Eisenhower administration. To this writer that is one of the greatest compliments for that administration. I had not given credit it for such bravery, and must recount somewhat.

This sounds just like Washington politics, and as such, it is time that some one opened the eyes of the senator.

To begin, America has a much worse Dunkirk than England had — ours began in 1933, under the reign of the man whose greatest ambition seemed to be, "to have God move over." It began when we recognized the Red regime. It has continued from that time, through World War II, through Potsdam, Yalta, Teheran, and even to the allowing the Red army to move into Berlin first. It continued under the reign of the "yapper" who played "Missouri Waltz" for Stalin, even calling him "Good old Joe." It grew when this same person fired the one man who was capable of winning that Korean "police Action" thus keeping us from winning that dirty deal. It went on through the last administration, when Ike grew white and admitted our part in the U2 incident, a thing which seemed more like showing the "white feather" than anything else.

As long as these senators and congressmen can get by with talking, while upping their salary, travelling over the world, some of it at taxpayer's expense, and maintaining a large retinue of helpers, and remain in office indefinitely, just that long will this country be in danger.

Only when the people awaken to what is going on, get out of this lethargy, shake off our feeling of false "security" and get down and fight, can we ever expect to survive!!!

There is still a chance, if all Americans, regardless of political affiliation, will, not only "Stand up to be counted," but bend their backs to "Do something about it" and we can once more, for the first time in years, have at least one thing to be proud of.

Refers To Bible

Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

Please allow me to express my views on a few things. Let me quote a few verses of the Holy Bible. "And the Lord direct your hearts into the love of God, and into the patient waiting for Christ. Now we command you, brethren, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye withdraw yourselves from every brother that walketh disorderly, and not after the tradition which he received of us." (II Thessaloanians 3:5-6). "And if any man obey not our word by this epistle, note that man, and have no company with him, that he may be ashamed." (II Thess. 3:14).

"Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils." (I Timothy 4:1).

Now how can a person submit to integration, or the doctrine of integration, and still obey the Holy Scripture? Look up the reference in the Bible and read it.

A news article in one of the top newspapers in this state said that the president's brother, Robert Kennedy, has told numerous groups and individuals recently he believed that great strides could be made in ending voter discrimination and school segregation under existing (federal) laws. The article went on to say that he (Attorney General Robert Kennedy) will continue to exert vigorous behind-the-scenes influence as he has been doing in the current Louisiana school situation to end racial discrimination in public schools.

You cannot force people to be good. If you could I would say without hesitating let's make Robert Kennedy be good. In the light of the Holy Bible, we must practice segregation and resist forced integration. If we are to retain the right to withdraw from him who has departed from the Christian faith, then what course do we take?!!

Sincerely yours,
ROBERT BUSBICE

AFRICA FOR AFRICAN — State Department which was divided over hurried decision of the United States in siding in United Nations with critics of Portugal's handling of her African Territory of Angola are also divided on wisdom of our entire "Africa for Africans" policy. Dissidents think this country is borrowing trouble, that Afro-Asian group and its Communist backers are going to insist on a steady increase of "anti-colonialism" dosages from United States at the expense of our European allies — Britain, France, Belgium, Holland, Spain and Portugal. Prying Schools Open

Utter disregard for the rights of states and for the wishes of the American people is being demonstrated by Attorney General Robert Kennedy, brother of President Kennedy. The attorney general attacks every problem of forced compliance with federal regulation in a ruthless manner.

That the attorney general would do so was to be expected. Not only is that the way he attacks any problem but, since he is the brother of the president, he thinks he will be given an entirely free hand. One not related to the president would have no such expectation.

Senator Byrd, D., Va., one of this country's most forthright conservatives and advocates of true democracy and freedom of the people, has pointed out the grave danger in the government's attempt to pry open the public schools in Prince Edward county, Virginia, after they were closed because of integration attempts. He said this action was only a token example of what would happen if congress passed a federal aid-to-education bill.

In a speech prepared for senate delivery, Senator Byrd said an injunction filed by the attorney general which would prevent Virginia from supporting its schools as long as those in Prince Edward county are closed was "fantastic and completely unrealistic."

"If non-elected federal officials will go to the extremes they are applying in Virginia now," he said, "who can imagine the ruthlessness of the federal bureaucrats with the power of the federal purse to force combination over their schools.

Senator Byrd said the aid-to-education bill was "offensive" because of federal control over public schools and because of excessive spending.

We know that a dictator-type man with authority never worries about whether anything is legal. The late governor and Senator Huey P. Long of Louisiana was quoted as saying that, "If what we want to do is against the law we'll change the law."

The present federal administration apparently sometimes does not even bother to change the law. It acts on the assumption that our radical and integrationist supreme court will declare legal anything it wants to do without any change in the law. This is a logical assumption, since the court has set itself up as the lawmaking body of the land, as witness the declaration that its infamous "black Monday" integration decision of 1954 was the law of the land.

One illustration of the fact that the administration does not bother too much with the law was given by Sylvia Porter, financial columnist.

Miss Porter said that the Eisenhower administration was hampered by the fact that it was never able to get congress to raise the interest rate ceiling on government bonds. The Kennedy administration did not get congress to raise the ceiling but simply ignored the regulation and raised the interest rate, the columnist pointed out.

Anyone who ever doubted that the federal government wants to control the schools can scarcely doubt any longer. Direct attempts at federal usurpation of the rights of local governments to control their schools are in evidence on every hand, but the Virginia situation is one of the most flagrant.

Dropping NRA Hangovers

Quite a number of states are getting rid of the NRA hangovers from which they have been suffering ever since the first administration of the late Franklin D. Roosevelt. We refer to so-called fair trade or price - fixing laws. The latest to join the growing list of states which have knocked out such laws is Oklahoma.

The Oklahoma state supreme court has declared the state's fair trade law unconstitutional.

It will be recalled that under the NRA, one of the many initialed organizations of the Roosevelt administration, merchants were prohibited from selling below a fixed price. This law later was held unconstitutional by the United States supreme court, much to the relief of President Roosevelt, because he found the problems involved in it were too numerous, but its enactment resulted in similar action by a good many states, and several forms of price-fixing became accepted practice. This was true despite the fact that anti-trust laws were still in force and some firms were being prosecuted for fixing prices and others for not fixing them.

The Oklahoma law, recently declared invalid, contained the non-signer feature, which binds all retailers in the state to sell a trademarked article at the price set by the manufacturer when one retailer in the state signs an agreement with the manufacturer to do so.

Manufacturers have always had and probably always will have the option of not selling to those who sell below the marked price and price - fixing laws not only were unnecessary but contrary to the American policy of competitive trade.

This non-signer feature violates the right of contract, which involves the right not to make a contract as well as the right to make one.

The whole so-called fair trade idea is a violation of the spirit of the anti-trust laws upon which the administration in Washington is currently placing so much emphasis.

Recently officials of 29 electrical equipment manufacturers were convicted of agreement to fix prices. Some of these officials went to jail and the companies are faced with suits for damages running into high figures. The administration has announced it will conduct unremitting war against the practice of submitting identical bids on materials and equipment purchased by the government.

There is little difference in principle between a group of manufacturers getting together to set prices and a single manufacturer doing the same thing with a group of retailers, or by binding all retailers by making an agreement with only one.

Price-fixing is price-fixing, no matter how it is arrived at. If it is not permissible for one group of businessmen to do it, why should it be possible for another?

This applies also to the federal government. Why should it have the privilege of fixing farm prices or any other prices?

ALLEN-SCOTT REPORT

John Birch Society Probe

Interest Is Strong In Congress For Investigation But Question Is Who Is Willing To Bell Cat

To be or not to be is the question — that both Democratic and Republican leaders of Congress are uneasily pondering about investigating the widely controversial John Birch Society.

There is considerable backstage bipartisan sentiment in the Senate and House for such a probe. The thorny problem is who is to make it and how.

As one nationally - known lawmaker remarked drily, "This is one cat a lot of us would like to bell. We feel this is an organization that should be thoroughly aired, particularly how it's financed and operates. But we still haven't decided how that belling is to be done, and right now I wouldn't bet we'll come up with an answer.

"To put it bluntly, this is a dilemma that is loaded to the gunwales with political dynamite."

Two major reasons for this wary indecision are:

(1) The demonstrated highly volatile nature of Birch Society zealots. Members of Congress who have spoken out against the organization are deluged with critical mail, some of it vituperative and threatening. Other legislators, who have said nothing, are being bombarbed with demands they defend the society.

Senator Gale McGee (D., Wyo.) is an instance of this. The former political science professor is so concerned about Birch Society strength in his state that he flew out there especially for a first-hand study to determine its extent.

Other senators are doing the same thing, particularly those up for election next year.

(2) The committees which already have authority to conduct such an investigation — the Senate Internal Security Committee and the House Un - American Activities Committee — have at least one member each who belongs to the Birch Society. Other committeemen are openly friendly to the organization.

A move to set up a special probing committee is likely to be hotly opposed by these two groups.

However, that proposal is still under discussion and more may be heard of it. At one bipartisan strategy meeting the unusual suggestion was tossed out that a joint special Senate - House committee be created for this investigation.

SIGNIFICANT SPEECH —Vice President Lyndon Johnson has agreed to be honor speaker at the June 19 graduation exercises of Howard University, leading Negro educational center in the capital that is attended by many foreign students, particularly from Africa and Asia. Johnson was the university's first choice, and he accepted the invitation without hesitation . . . The Texan, who began his government service in 1931 as a congressional secretary, has been singled out by President Kennedy for special praise as a "brilliant example of a successful government career worker." In a message to the Civil Service, the president cited Johnson as "my top career executive" . . . Representative Thaddeus Machrowicz (D., Mich.), member of the powerful House Ways and Means Committee, is slated for one of the threescore federal judgeships created by Congress. Other members of the Senate and House also have their eye on these lifetime prizes. The backstage scramble for them is already on.

ON THE GRIDDLE — Segregation in labor unions is slated for airing by a House subcommittee headed by Representative James Roosevelt (D., Calif.). Particular target of the probe is building trades unions that bar Negroes. Chief instigator of this investigation is Repesentative Adam Clayton Powell (D., N.Y.), chairman of the Labor Committee, who is setting up the subcommittee and naming Roosevelt for that purpose . . . Reclamation Commissioner Floyd Dominy, holdover from the Eisenhower administration, is the target of mounting congressional complaints to the White House. Dominy, who stands high in the good graces of Senator Carl Hayden (D., Ariz.), 3-year-old chairman of the potent Appropriations Committee, is charged with privately opposing administration power and other projects. Aides of the president are being told that "unless Dominy is replaced, there will be an explosion which will rip the lid off the Interior Department."

JOB HUNTERS — Postmaster General Edward Day expects to have 10,000 new jobs by July 1. The Californian has told the president these new jobs will be made possible by savings resulting from reducing the overtime of regular postal employes and cutting the work week of substitutes . . . The Republican National Committee is trying to find jobs for a considerable number of former officials of the Eisenhower administration. The committee has sent out several thousand letters to businessmen and trade and other organizations advising them that experienced Washington lawyers, executives and representatives are available among these jobless Eisenhower officials. Republican leaders are eager to keep as many of them as possible in the capital for future political activities . . . More than 700 new jobs will be created under the National Aeronautics and Space Administration if its increased budget is approved by Congress — which is very likely.

ON WAY OUT — Ralph J. Cordiner, head of General Electric, will "retire" by fall — despite his recent re - electon by an overwhelming vote. That's the inside word from GE sources to Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) who is investigating the electrical industry's price - fixing operations. He has been told the GE board did not want to oust Cordiner while under fire, but that he will be replaced in a few months . . . Senator Hubert Humphrey (D., Minn.) has personal assurances from President Kennedy that $100 million of the $600 million voted by Congress for economic aid to Latin America will be earmarked for the development of farmer and consumer co-operatives there. Humphrey strongly favors such a program, and has been working on details with Agriculture and State Department officials . . . Governor Rockefeller expects that at least one of the three large farms he and his brothers own in Venezuela will be taken over by the government. The government there is under powerful public pressure to nationalize foreign land and other holdings, and the Rockefeller farms, among the best developed in Venezuela, are high on the list to be taken over.

Heart Goes Fast

Woman Who Worries About 'Ticker' May Be Only Imagining

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: For the past 10 years I have been plagued with a fast - beating heart. I hear it pounding and gushing in my head almost continually. Some nights it keeps me awaake.

I've had cardiograms and heart examinations and was told there is nothing organically wrong.

I am a person who worries a lot. I am single and live with my elderly parents. I am happy in my work. Is there any help for me? — Miss J. D., Buffalo, N.Y.

Answer: I suggest you send for my leaflet "Maybe Your Heart Trouble's Imaginary." Also try to get a copy of my book, "You Can Increase Your Heart Power." In it, you will find many pages devoted to palpitation, rapid heart beats and other irregularities. You will learn that many people with symptoms of heart disease still have normal hearts.

Your doctor has examined you carefully and has tried to convince you that your heart is normal. I know it's hard to believe when your pulse begins pounding, but the sooner you do, the better.

DIET PROBLEM IN ACNE

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: My 14-year-old boy has acne. Only a few pimples now and then, but because of his fears, he has become a diet fanatic. Naturally, he has been using various medications, soaps and granules — umteen times a day!

This is not so bad, but when it comes to eating, he's driving us insane! He refuses to eat almost anything, for fear the foods will increase his acne. Of course, we agree he should stay away from chocolate, nuts, excess sugars and fats. But now there is hardly anything that he will eat. He is actually starving himself!— Mrs. X. California.

Answer: I doubt that there is anything I can say which will convert your youngster into one with a normal, healthy appetite. That will come sometime later; but only by his own volition.

It seems to me that you had better stop trying the frontal attacks. Attack on the flanks. The best way to do that with a teen-ager is not to keep telling him "what's good for him." That's often the surest way to get his back up. Resolve not to mention diet. He won't starve. Within a few weeks he may be asking for his once - favorite dishes.

Dr. Steincrohn welcomes all letters, but because of the great number received, he cannot answer each one personally. However, all questions are ultimately incorporated into the column.

Dr. Steincrohn's leaflet, "When to Suspect Your Gall Bladder," will be mailed to you on receipt of a stamped, self - addressed envelope and 10 cents in coin for handling charges. Address your request to Dr. Steincrohn, c-o this newspaper.

Seeks Aid

Monroe, Louisiana

To the Editor:

Please investigate the following statements for truth and facts as given below, and print if found to be true and correct.

I am a white male, 38 years of age, married, father of four children, and life long resident of Monroe, Louisiana. I have been physically handicapped since the age of two months but was able to earn my own living until 1959. That year I lost all my central vision due to a near nervous breakdown. I am now a burden to the taxpayer, but I have tried to get help so I could help myself as well as others who are handicapped.

On or about December 18, 1960, I applied to the Bureau for the Blind and Sight Conservation for assistance in setting up a Telephone Answering Service, whereby I could earn my own living and not have to be a tax burden from the State Welfare Department. On January 1, 1961, I received a letter signed by Mr. William H. Patterson, rehabilitation counselor for the blind, advising that Mr. Jimmie T. Short would be in Monroe, Louisiana, in the month of February. I contacted Mr. Patterson on February 5, 1961, and he advised me by telephone that Mr. Short would be in Monroe, Louisiana, on February 14, 1961. After waiting until February 28, 1961, I wrote the governor requesting that he check into this matter. On March 7, 1961, I received a letter from the governor expressing his interest in the case and that I would hear from the department in the near future. On March 28, 1961, Mr. Short finally arrived at my home. On April 11, 1961, Mr. Short advised me by letter that the Bureau for the Blind and Sight Conservation was unable to help me establish this business due to the fact that there were two similar businesses operating in Monroe at the present time, and therefore, felt it was not profitable. Mr. Short is an agriculture counselor with the department, so we felt we should be given consideration by someone having business experience. On April 12, 1961, we wrote Mrs. Mary Evelyn Parker, Commissioner of Welfare, also Senator Jamar Adcock wrote Mrs. Parker, requesting that someone else besides Mr. Short be sent to Monroe to investigate this matter. Representative Lawrence Gibbs also wrote Governor Jimmie H. Davis requesting that the proper parties investigate. However, on April 26, 1961, Mr. Jimmie T. Short was sent back to investigate and after having me check on equipment and then talking to me as if I was crazy, advised that the department would help in a very small way. Also, he was advised that there would be another legally blind person which could benefit, namely Sherman A. Parker, Route 1, Box 10, Gibsland, Louisiana. All these facts were set forth in the letter to Mrs. Parker. We request that this be checked and printed and that the taxpayers put themselves in our shoes, because this could happen to them. Also, advise their senators and representatives to hold an open investigation and give a full report to the taxpayers. I am hoping to hear from you soon on this matter.

Sincerely yours

LEROY WALLACE

Ellender Comment

Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

In reference to your article, page one of last Wednesday, 26 April, where Senator Ellender told air force officials that Communist infiltration of Cuba is red "retaliation" for the United States bases surrounding Russia, he mentions, "We've been doing that to Russia for seven or eight years, haven't we?" The officials evidently did not reply.

The senator's reference to "seven or eight years" seems to imply that all that has been done to Russia has been the work of the Eisenhower administration. To this writer that is one of the greatest compliments for that administration. I had not given credit for such bravery, and must recount somewhat.

This sounds just like Washington politics, and as such, it is time that some one opened the eyes of the senator.

To begin, America has a much worse Dunkirk than England had —ours began in 1933, under the reign of the man whose greatest ambition seemed to be, "to have God move over." It began when we recognized the Red regime. It has continued from that time, through World War II, through Potsdam, Yalta, Teheran, and even to the allowing the Red army to move into Berlin first. It continued under the reign of the "yapper" who played "Missouri Waltz" for Stalin, even calling him "Good old Joe." It grew when this same person fired the one man who was capable of winning that Korean "police Action" thus keeping us from winning that dirty deal. It went on through the last administration, when Ike grew white and admitted our part in the U2 incident, a thing which seemed more like showing the "white feather" than anything else.

As long as these senators and congressmen can get by with talking, while upping their salary, travelling over the world, some of it at taxpayer's expense, and maintaining a large retinue of helpers, and remain in office indefinitely, just that long will this country be in danger.

Only when the people awaken to what is going on, get out of this lethargy, shake off our feeling of false "security" and get down and fight, can we ever expect to survive!!!

There is still a chance, if all Americans, regardless of political affiliation, will, not only "Stand up to be counted," but bend their backs to "Do something about it" and we can once more, for the first time in years, have at least one thing to be proud of.

Pro Bono Publico.

Refers To Bible

Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

Please allow me to express my views on a few things. Let me quote a few verses of the Holy Bible. "And the Lord direct your hearts into the love of God, and into the patient waiting for Christ. Now we command you, brethren, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye withdraw yourselves from every brother that walketh disorderly, and not after the tradition which he received of us." (II Thessaloanians 3:5-6). "And if any man obey not our word by this epistle, note that man, and have no company with him, that he may be ashamed." (II Thess. 3:14).

"Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils." (I Timothy 4:1).

Now how can a person submit to integration, or the doctrine of integration, and still obey the Holy Scripture? Look up the reference in the Bible and read it.

A news article in one of the top newspapers in this state said that the president's brother, Robert Kennedy, has told numerous groups and individuals recently he believed that great strides could be made in ending voter discrimination and school segregation under existing (federal) laws. The article went on to say that he (Attorney General Robert Kennedy) will continue to exert vigorous behind-the-scenes influence as he has been doing in the current Louisiana school situation to end racial discrimination in public schools.

You cannot force people to be good. If you could I would say without hesitating let's make Robert Kennedy be good. In the light of the Holy Bible, we must practice segregation and resist forced integration. If we are to retain the right to withdraw from him who has departed from the Christian faith, then what course do we take?!!

Sincerely yours,

ROBERT BUSBICE

Editor's Notebook

By JACK GATES
Executive Editor

We're attempting a new endeavor with this column this Sunday. It is the beginning of what we hope will be a weekly effort on our part.

As it now stands, we plan to make various types of comment on the many things that are happening in our area, nationally and internationally. At no time do we plan to give the impression that we are an expert — and certainly we don't want anyone taking that attitude toward us.

Many things pass across an editor's desk in the course of a week — some about happy events, others on the gloomy and dark side — while others may affect your life, your economic standing or the future of the country.

After we get started, we hope to hear from our readers — maybe many of you will have good ideas and suggestions. If so, we want you to pass them on.

Our first column will deal mostly with the recent briefing by the State Department. However before we go into that one, we'd like to comment on a couple of things nearer home.

Ouachita parish property owners will get a chance next Tuesday to really vote for a worthwhile project. That is the proposal calling for a $300,000 bond issue — carrying a half mill maintenance tax — to finance a proposed penal-type jail extension.

The project, presented by the Police Jury, is supported by a citizens committee that selected land and made recommendations concerning the proposed facilities. Such well-known and outstanding residents as Lee Vanderpool, Judge Jesse Heard, Sheriff Bailey Grant and Jury president M. W. Montgomery — just to name a few — have endorsed the proposal. Many grand juries in the past have also called for such a proposal.

We believe this is a project that is of tremendous importance to everyone. So be sure you consider carefully before you vote against such an important project.

The President And The Press

How democracy survives and grows stronger each generation in this nation long has been the cause of wonder throughout the world. Two big factors in this have been the determination of the individual in this nation to maintain the rights gained for him in the constitution (that is the constitution that existed before the present Supreme Court started tearing it apart), and a free press.

We hope we are wrong, but there seems to be a definite move by the present national administration to take a big hunk out of these rights.

From this corner, President Kennedy's recent criticism of the press as publishing information damaging to national security is about as petty as it can get. And in other ways it carries sinister implications because the President and his administration apparently are moving into a continuing drive to belittle the public's means of obtaining information whether the opportunity arises. However, the President and some of his highest administration officials should get together because right now they seem to be voicing opposite thoughts.

Some highly - placed officials who should know have hinted that the Kennedy administration soon will start a drive aimed at discrediting or hurting newspapers that oppose it.

There were some indications of this around the State Department's briefing of newspaper editors on foreign affairs in Washington a week or so ago. Actually the meeting was merely an attempt to brainwash the group. So far as anyone knows, there were no casualties. At the meeting, a high Kennedy administration official said that newspapers were in part responsible for failure of the Cuban invasion because they printed so much detail of the plans in advance, thus informing Castro.

Just about every person present knew that, under Mr. Kennedy's orders, the United States had conducted and financed every phase of the invasion. So when a high administration official accused the press of being partly responsible for the failure by publishing information about it, he was told that Castro repeatedly had broadcast the fact that invasion forces were being trained in this nation, that an invasion was imminent, and that no newspaper in this country carried a story about it — although many knew it was going on — until after the broadcasts. In view of this, how could the U. S. press have been responsible.

Has Mr. Kennedy's colossal flop in the invasion of Cuba caused him to feel that he wants a control established over publication of news, even if it is called voluntary. Does he want the press to shriek in shrill tones about how desperate the situation is so that more federal restrictions can be imposed on everyone? Does he want more secrecy to cover up government activities that should be known to the public — at a time when Washington newspapers report there never has been an administration which suppressed so much legitimate news?

Secrecy is a weapon of weaklings, dictators, the immature, and the dishonest. When governmental leaders and public officials attempt to impose this type of restriction, it is time for the people of this nation to get on guard — if they want to maintain their freedoms.

More About Washington

It should be obvious to everyone by now that the Kennedy administration intends to push integration to the fullest degree — and to force it down the throats of the South. If you're in doubt about this, take a trip to Washington; all the governmental offices there are jammed with Negroes. A walk through the halls of the State Department alone will show you to what degree integration has been instituted. At least a third of all employes are Negroes — and we've yet to see a single one of them working much. They were walking along the halls, drinking soft drinks and eating candy. Most of the work was being done by the whites . . . Although the Foreign Policy Briefings were supposed to be secret, there are reliable reports that at least one Communist country newsman was present . . . It was not known how he was accredited by the State Department or if they knew it . . . It appears the speed reading craze has hit Washington since it has become known that President Kennedy took a speed reading course and raised his reading ability to 1,200 words a minute.

Senator William A. Proxmire, Wisconsin Democrat, claims that he reads 20,000 words a minute with real comprehension; Stuart Symington, Missouri Democrat, read "Quo Vadis" in an hour, he said, and Herman Talmadge of Georgia, claims a modest 7,000 words a minute and wants to introduce speed reading in all the schools in Georgia.

One Of The Best

One of the best written stories probably that came out of World War II was the one by Staff Sergeant Vic Kalman, a Marine Corps Combat Correspondent. It didn't get very wide distribution but because of its simplicity and feeling for words, I thought I'd pass it on to you by repeating it. So here it is:

OKINAWA, Ryukyu Islands (Delayed) — "Come on, dad, strike 'em out!"

It was Shanghai, 1937. The pitcher was tall, rugged Maj. Francis I. Fenton, player-manager of the marine team, undefeated in China. He was celebrating his 45th birthday. The rooter was his 11-year-old son, Mike.

"You can do it, dad, you can do it!"

The major did. He won, 9-2, winding up a baseball career that had started at Pearl Harbor in 1917. His teams won championships at Quantico, Va.; Pearl Harbor, Guam, China.

"Nice catch, son!"

The tables had turned. Mike was playing second base for St. Joseph's academy in Baltimore. Mr. Lieutenant Colonel Fenton, on the staff of the marine schools at Quantico, had come down to watch the game.

"You're the best infielder in the world, son."

Father and son walked toward the field house.

"Dad, I'm 17 now. There's a paper that I'd like to have you sign."

"I thought you didn't want to join the corps."

"Well, I meant as a career. But there's a war on. When it's over, we'll both resign and take in all the big league games, huh?"

"Sure, Mike, if that's what you want."

"Hello, son!"

It was April, 1945. The Fentons — the colonel and the private first class — met on the bloody Okinawa battlefield. The colonel was first marine division engineer. Mike had turned down a commission, wanted to fight on the lines with the men. He was scout-sniper in the Fifth regiment.

"Need anything, Mike?"

"No, sir."

"How many socks have you?"

"Well, sir, just what I've got on."

"That's what I thought. How about blankets?"

"Oh, we wrap ourselves up in our ponchos."

"I'll send you some socks and blankets tomorrow."

"Please don't, sir. I wouldn't feel right. You know. The other guys'll think I'm pulling strings, just because my father is a colonel."

Two weeks later, on the Eve of St. Michael's, his Patron Saint, the Japs counter-attacked. Mike Fenton crouched behind a rock, tossed grenades at the enemy. Jap shells and machine gun bullets gave thunderous answer.

"This is my son," he said.

Mike, wrapped in an American flag, was buried in the ground he fought for. The Catholic chaplain intoned the final prayer. Then the colonel bowed in prayer among the other marines awaiting burial.

"The poor sons. They didn't have their fathers here," he said.

Back at his office, he wrote a letter, addressed it to Mrs. Mary F. Fenton, [illegible] Dampier street, San Diego, Calif. He pushed a lock of grey hair, straightened his broad shoulders, pointed to a map.

"We'd better double the guard around No. 7 bridge," he said. "The Nips may try to blow it up."

PRESIDENT'S REQUEST

Censorship Plan Talked, Aired

(Editor's Note: President Kennedy has made an unprecedented suggestion that newspapers, radio-television and magazines consider a form of voluntary censorship to protect the nation's security. John H. Colburn, managing editor of the Richmond Times-Dispatch, backgrounds the proposal in the following article. Colburn is chairman of the Freedom of Information Committee of the American Society of Newspaper Editors and is past president of The Associated Press Managing Editors Association.)

By JOHN H. COLBURN
(Written For The Associated Press)

Every man, woman and draft-age youth has a big stake in President Kennedy's proposal that the press consider a system of voluntary censorship.

Voluntary censorship was imposed during World War II to protect the nation's security and its military operations here and abroad. Never before has a President of the United States suggested any peacetime restrictions on the flow of information to the public.

Today, though, President Kennedy says that the Communist threat is such that "there is no escaping either the gravity or the totality of its challenge to our security and survival."

Mr. Kennedy told the nation's publishers in New York 10 days ago:

"If the press is awaiting a declaration of war before it imposes the self-discipline of combat conditions, then I can only say that no war ever posed a greater threat to our security."

Is this declaration by the President sufficient—in lieu of any expression by Congress—to justify editors to curb the flow of news and possibly imperil the public interest?

It was in Williamsburg, Va., 185 years ago that Virginia adopted a declaration of rights that in 1791 became the keystone to the American Bill of Rights. It said:

"That Freedom of the press is one of the great bulwarks of liberty and can never be restrained but by despotic government."

This concept of freedom of the press, however, was not designed to provide special privileges for newspapers of that day — or of newspapers, magazines, radio and television of today. It was designed to guarantee unrestricted information so that a democratic people could better evaluate the affairs of the day.

What Mr. Kennedy is now suggesting is that the press "and I hope every group in America—unions and businessmen and public officials at every level—"weigh its evaluation of news on this yardstick: Whether it is in the "national interest" rather than the "public interest.""

Since World War II the press and officials of both Democratic and Republican administrations in Washington have been at loggerheads over allegations of unwarranted secrecy in government. Editors and publishers have consistently maintained that they would not knowingly jeopardize national security, but that government agencies had covered up news to hide political blunders and poor performance.

"The facts of the matter are," he said, "that this nation's foes have openly boasted of acquiring through our newspapers information they would otherwise hire agents to acquire through theft, bribery or espionage; that details of this nation's covert operations to counter the enemy's covert operations have been available to every newspaper reader, friend and foe alike; that the size, the strength, the location and the nature of our forces and weapons, and our plans and strategy for their use, have all been pin-pointed in the press and other news media to a degree sufficient to satisfy any foreign power; and that, in at least one case, the publication of details concerning a secret mechanism whereby satellites were followed required its alteration at the expense of considerable time and money."

What is the other side of the story?

Rep. John Moss, a California Democrat and chairman of the House subcommittee on Government Information, said: "In almost every past instance the so-called security breach was turned out to be a carefully controlled leak of information favorable to some government official, federal agency or military service. If such information leaks damage to the national security, the perpetrators should be punished under the already adequate laws established for that purpose."

Moss also said the subcommittee "has uncovered information withheld by officials who contended the disclosure would endanger national security whereas they were merely trying to protect their own political security. We must not use the excuse of cold war dangers to weaken the critical self-appraisal which is a basic ingredient in our democratic government.

Moss had this advice for the Kennedy administration: "Because of the U2 fiasco or the Cuban foul up—we should not hide all information about our government's involvement in foreign affairs. If our intelligence system is failing, we should improve that system instead of tightening controls over information about intelligence failures."

Kennedy had sought, though, to clarify this point in these words:

"No official of my administration, whether his rank is high or low, civilian or military, should interpret my words as an excuse to censor the news, to stifle dissent, to cover up our mistakes or to withhold from the press and the public the facts they deserve to know.

"I have no intention of establishing a new Office of War Information to govern the flow of news. I am not suggesting any new forms of censorship or new types of security classification. I have no easy answer to the dilemma I have posed, and would not seek to impose it if I had one.

"Perhaps there is no answer to the dilemma faced by a free and open society in a cold and secret war. In times of peace, any discussion of this subject, and any action that results, are both painful and without precedent. But this is a time of peace and a period which knows no precedent in history."

Kennedy gave no indication of what is being done to plug security leaks cited by Moss.

Security censorship has been a hot subject in Washington since the Office of Censorship was abolished in 1945. In 1948, Defense Secretary James Forrestal proposed a "security advisory council" made up of press representatives. Nothing was done about it, but in 1951 President Harry S. Truman issued a security control order that was opposed by the press on the grounds that it promoted too much secrecy.

After the Korean War cease-fire, President Eisenhower modified the Truman order but government agencies still are able to withhold public examination of material — on alleged security grounds—by stamping it "top secret," "secret" and "confidential."

Under the Truman security order, the Pentagon stamped military weather data for "military use only." Yet the Soviet ambassador could telephone the Department of Defense, ask for Extension 79355 and listen to a recording with the latest forecast from Bolling Air Force Base. The recording ended with this announcement: "This information is for military use only and dissemination to the public is not authorized."

Ignorance Of World Threat To America

A NATION OF SHEEP. By William J. Lederer. W. W. Norton & Co. $3.75.

William J. Lederer, co-author of "The Ugly American," comes up in his new book with a deadly serious theme — that ignorance of world affairs threatens the destruction of the United States.

"The defeat of America need not be accomplished by destructive weapons and violence," he writes. "There are easier and cheaper ways of conquering a politically incompetent nation. It can be accomplished by psychological weapons, by economic strangulation, by intellectual subversion."

Lederer contends that reports of the invasion of Laos in 1959, though strongly endorsed by the United States government, constituted a fraud, compounded by misleading headlines.

"The U.S. government was in almost total ignorance of the facts," Lederer says.

He argues that the press has been derelict in reporting underlying facts from various areas, and that newspapers as a whole pay scant attention to foreign news.

Much of Lederer's over-all theme has merit, but he is inclined to take a running broad jump in trying to shore up his version of what is white and black.

Recalling the days of Sen. Joseph McCarthy, he says:

"If a prominent person says something sensational — even if untrue — the press normally will report the statement exactly as spoken. The substance of the speech will not be challenged; and no discussion of its veracity (or lack of veracity) is given to the reader."

This sweeping statement, among others in the book, will not be borne out by a study of the dispatches of reporters who try assiduously to provide balancing comment from accused persons — and did so time after time in news of McCarthy's statements.

Turning to Cuba, Lederer cites one misinformed dispatch distributed by The Associated Press on the eve of Fulgencio Batista's downfall. He fails even to mention other AP dispatches which gave an indication of the way things were going in Cuba.

Lederer formerly served as public relations officer for three U.S. commanders-in-chief in the Pacific. His first-hand knowledge of much he writes about cannot be questioned. But he seems to be getting over his depth in turning to the Middle East and Central America as well as in the Far East. It is his contention, for instance, that "only the United States stands between the people and the overthrow of a corrupt, dictatorial regime" in eight countries he classifies as oppressive oligarchies. He names these as South Viet Nam, Laos, Indonesia, Formosa, Guatemala, Jordan, Iran and Nicaragua. There is likely some merit to this contention in relation to several of these countries, but Lederer fails to discuss the possible alternatives in all of them. And there, frequently, is the rub.

"A Nation of Sheep" is calculated to make the reader think about U.S. policy and the way information is handled or mishandled, but the informed reader is apt to conclude that Lederer, like others does not have all the answers.

2 Books That Describe A Modern Theme

THE MAGIC OF THEIR SINGING. By Bernard Wolfe. Scribners. $3.95; A PASSION FOR LIFE. By Diana Chang. Random. $4.95.

Writers have explored some pretty rugged subjects in recent years, and often have spared nothing in reciting the clinical details of sex. Some readers have grown accustomed, some have not, to this range of topics.

For those who don't mind some pretty rough going, here are two novels. Wolfe's story contains some sordid people. Miss Chang's main theme is on a rather touchy subject.

In one category of rather exaggerated characters are the University types — graduate student Hoyt Fairless, Worthington Rivers the snob, an abnormal female named Penelope and Shoshana Gasharied, a Jewess from Sweden.

In another category are Marcus, a beatnik dancer who is a shoplifter, a Negro jazz musician called History Jones and some other creepy people who frequent the Village. This, however, is not the espresso coffee crowd. It's farther out in left field, like the "poet" Prosper — and his recitals. The climax of the narrative involves Penelope and the jazz band.

Wolfe's main exposition is that the characters who are Way Out really want In. Through some pseudo-intellectual talk by Miss Gasharied, he argues that the beat types realize they could not make the grade in any legitimate way, so they join the cult of disaffiliation — all the while wishing someone would invite them back.

The writing is full of "hip" talk, and the author explains that for purposes of the book he has been compelled to make the beats more articulate than they are in real life. There is a graphic impressionism in his style.

Guide To Good Reading

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian

Just three weeks from tomorrow the 13th annual summer reading club for the children of Ouachita Parish, sponsored by the Ouachita Parish Public Library will begin. Each year since 1948 the Ouachita Parish Public Library has sponsored such a club and thousands of children have earned certificates. The schools of Ouachita Parish and the City of Monroe are stressing the importance of reading and are cooperating wholeheartedly with the Ouachita Parish Public Library in the summer reading program. The theme for this summer is "The Civil War Centennial." We are getting together all of the books which we can find dealing with the Civil War and suitable for children to read. The buttons with the crossed flags of the Union and Confederate armies are most attractive. The bookmarks are beautiful and since this is the year of the Civil War Centennial, we could think of nothing more timely. Children from the 5th grade up are required to read one book dealing with the Civil War in each group of five books. If 15 books are read during the summer, a certificate will be awarded when school opens.

New books of great variety are added to the library collection each week. "A Journey to Matecumbe" is the title of a new novel by Robert Lewis Taylor. This is a big, exciting story about a young boy's wildly funny, often hair-raising flight down the Mississippi River to a precarious haven in the Florida Keys just after the Civil War. Davy Burnie, Mr. Taylor's hero and narrator is a literary cousin of Huck Finn, Tom Jones and the author's own Jaimie McPheeters. From one adventure to another, he travels with a group of colorful companions by skiff, flatboat, horseback, steamboat, stage line, schooner, railroad and Indian Canoe. With this book Mr. Taylor has introduced an ingredient long lacking in the American novel —glorious entertainment.

A book which will be widely read in this area is "The Earl of Louisiana" by A. J. Liebling. This is the story of the late Earl Long, written by an outsider who does not understand Louisiana at all. Most of us will probably disagree with a great deal of the material in the book, but it never hurts to see ourselves as others see us.

Several valuable reference books have been added to the library book collection during the past week. The Fiction catalog, 1960 edition is an invaluable tool, for it indexes the outstanding fiction according to subject. Many people in this community collect stamps and will be glad to know that we have the two latest Scott's Stamp catalogues. One is their General postage stamp catalogue for 1961 and the other is the specialized stamp catalogue of United States Stamps. Another very valuable reference tool is "A Library of Literary Criticisms of Modern American Literature" by Dorothy Nyren. This book will be most valuable to college students who are writing critical analysis of modern day material, which is not found in the Book Review Digest.

An unusual book, which will be useful to those who raise this breed of dog is "The Complete Poodle" by Lydia Hopkins. A very timely book is the account of the career of Eichmann, written by Michael A. Musmanno and called "The Eichmann Kommandos." It is a book of grusome details, but there are some who will want to read it. An interesting book of reminiscences is "My Thirty Years Backstairs at the White House" written by Lillian Rogers Parks, who served for many years as a seamstress at the White House. She gives us an inside look at the Presidents and their families and many readers will enjoy it.

There are several new titles, written especially for young adult readers. "Greek Gods and Heroes" by Robert Graves is a very fine addition to the world of mythology. "The Challenge of the Sea" by Arthur Charles Clark is an excellent book in the field of marine biology. "The man who Wouldn't Give Up" is a good biography of Henry Clay, written by Katherine Elliott Wilkie.

RUNNING THE SCALES

Rash Of Activity At Season's End

By JOHN CALE
Staff Writer

An upturn of activity at the season's end will keep northeast Louisiana concert followers busy during the first half of May.

Margaret Kalil, Monroe-born soprano who has stood the test of New York's oratorio productions, will appear on the Northeast State series Thursday evening.

As if foreseeing a possible conflict, L. V. E. Irvine, head of the Louisiana Tech Concert Association, notified members they could hear the Amsterdam Concert Gebouw symphony orchestra on Wednesday evening. Public performance of the orchestra is also slated for Thursday.

Two plays by the Dallas Theatre Center under the direction of Paul Baker will close the Northeast series on Tuesday May 16. A twin bill of one-act presentations is scheduled: "The Chairs," by Eugene Ionesco and "A Phoenix Too Frequent," by Christopher Fry.

REHEARSAL

Now in preparation for the final Little Theatre effort for the season is "The Diary of Anne Frank." Date for the performances have not been set at this writing.

Several days ago, Pericles Alexander sent up a trial balloon in his "On with the Show" column in the Shreveport Times as to the prospects of booking native artists who have made good to appear during annual Holiday in Dixie festivities.

We think that is a good idea. In fact, the appearance of Margaret Kalil on the Northeast series here this week is a realization of just that.

Miss Kalil, following her early training in Monroe, continued her studies at the Juilliard School of Music, Columbia University and in Milan, Italy. She has appeared as a soloist with the New York Philharmonic symphony orchestra in Carnegie Hall and with the Boston symphony during the Berkshire Music Festival.

Making appearances with the Twin City Symphony at 3:30 p.m. today at Sherrouse School auditorium will be four young pianists from the northeast Louisiana area.

Donna Gartman, Columbia, will play Mozart's Piano Concerto K 466; Rex Morris, Rayville, will play another Mozart Concerto, that in E Flat Major, K 271; Marie King Nelson, Monroe, Weber's Konzertstueck, and Mary Lou Holley, Pioneer, will perform the Concerto in G Minor by Saint Saens — all with the orchestra.

Proceeds from the program will be used in behalf of the symphony scholarship fund.

As for the Amsterdam orchestra scheduled to perform at Louisiana Tech this week, it is recognized as one of the three or four top orchestras in the world.

The orchestra was founded over 70 years ago. Now making its second American tour, the group will tour Japan next year.

One American-born bass violin player is among the "flying Dutchmen." Bernard Spieler originally from Brooklyn. Spieler's career spans not only two continents but two styles of bass playing — concert hall and dance band.

He started — bow in hand — as a serious musician when he won a New York Philharmonic Society grant to study with Anselme Fortier of the orchestra's bass section.

When World War II broke out he joined the Navy as a member of Artie Shaw's Navy band. When the plunking and slapping technique largely replaced the bow, he continued with Benny Goodman, Jimmy Dorsey, Glen Gray and Claude Thornhill.

Then he used his money from the GI Bill to study at the Conservatory of Music in France. About eight years ago he auditioned for the Concert Gebouw orchestra in Holland and landed a musical contract.

Now other members of the orchestra may be from Haarlem (not New York) or Zwolle (not western Louisiana), but Spieler is the only player from this side of the Atlantic.

POSITIVE PROM

A report from Crossett, Arkansas, where a fatal auto-pedestrian accident occurred five years ago after a senior dance broke up in the neighboring town of Hamburg, tells of move toward safer, saner proms.

The parents arrange for a floor show, dance — as late as the youngsters want to carry on— and a breakfast. According to the police, things are quiet on the streets and highways around Crossett following the "blowout."

Other schools throughout the country are also turning to long-range supervised activities at graduation time so that the students can blow off steam through a safety valve. It may be rough on the adults to stick around until the teenagers wear themselves down, but it pays off in safety and sanity.

Editor's Notebook

By JACK GATES
Executive Editor

We're attempting a new endeavor with this column this Sunday. It is the beginning of what we hope will be a weekly effort on our part.

As it now stands, we plan to make various types of comment on the many things that are happening in our area, nationally and internationally. At no time do we plan to give the impression that we are an expert — and certainly we don't want anyone taking that attitude toward us.

Many things pass across an editor's desk in the course of a week — some about happy events, others on the gloomy and dark side — while others may affect your life, your economic standing or the future of the country.

After we get started, we hope to hear from our readers — maybe many of you will have good ideas and suggestions. If so, we want you to pass them on.

Our first column will deal mostly with the recent briefing by the State Department. However before we go into that one, we'd like to comment on a couple of things nearer home.

Ouachita parish property owners will get a chance next Tuesday to really vote for a worthwhile project. That is the proposal calling for a $300,000 bond issue — carrying a half mill maintenance tax — to finance a proposed penal-type jail extension.

The project, presented by the Police Jury, is supported by a citizens committee that selected land and made recommendations concerning the proposed facilities. Such well-known and outstanding residents as Lee Vanderpool, Judge Jesse Heard, Sheriff Bailey Grant and Jury president M. W. Montgomery — just to name a few — have endorsed the proposal. Many grand juries in the past have also called for such a proposal.

We believe this is a project that is of tremendous importance to everyone. So be sure you consider carefully before you vote against such an important project.

The President And The Press

How democracy survives and grows stronger each generation in this nation long has been the cause of wonder throughout the world. Two big factors in this have been the determination of the individual in this nation to maintain the rights gained for him in the constitution (that is the constitution that existed before the present Supreme Court started tearing it apart), and a free press.

We hope we are wrong, but there seems to be a definite move by the present national administration to take a big hunk out of these rights.

From this corner, President Kennedy's recent criticism of the press as publishing information damaging to national security is about as petty as it it can get. And in other ways it carries sinister implications because the President and his administration apparently are moving into a continuing drive to belittle the public's means of obtaining information whether the opportunity arises. However, the President and some of his highest administration officials should get together because right now they seem to be voicing opposite thoughts.

Some highly - placed officials who should know have hinted that the Kennedy administration soon will start a drive aimed at discrediting or hurting newspapers that oppose it.

There were some indications of this around the State Department's briefing of newspaper editors on foreign affairs in Washington a week or so ago. Actually the meeting was merely an attempt to brainwash the group. So far as anyone knows, there were no casualties. At the meeting, a high Kennedy administration official said that newspapers were in part responsible for failure of the Cuban invasion because they printed so much detail of the plans in advance, thus informing Castro.

Just about every person present knew that, under Mr. Kennedy's orders, the United States had conducted and financed every phase of the invasion. So when a high administration official accused the press of being partly responsible for the failure by publishing information about it, he was told that Castro repeatedly had broadcast the fact that invasion forces were being trained in this nation, that an invasion was immiment, and that no newspaper in this country carried a story about it — although many knew it was going on — until after the broadcasts. In view of this, how could the U. S. press have been responsible.

Such actions pose some chilling questions.

Has Mr. Kennedy's colossal flop in the invasion of Cuba caused him to feel that he wants a control established over publication of news, even if it is called voluntary. Does he want the press to shriek in shrill tones about how desperate the situation is so that more federal restrictions can be imposed on everyone? Does he want more secrecy to cover up government activities that should be known to the public — at a time when Washington newspapers report there never has been an administration which suppressed so much legitimate news?

Secrecy is a weapon of weaklings, dictators, the immature, and the dishonest. When governmental leaders and public officials attempt to impose this type of restriction, it is time for the people of this nation to get on guard — if they want to maintain their freedoms.

More About Washington

It should be obvious to everyone by now that the Kennedy administration intends to push integration to the fullest degree — and to force it down the throats of the South. If you're in doubt about this, take a trip to Washington; all the governmental offices there are jammed with Negroes. A walk through the halls of the State Department alone will show you to what degree integration has been instituted. At least a third of all employes are Negroes — and we've yet to see a single one of them working much. They were walking along the halls, drinking soft drinks and eating candy. Most of the work was being done by the whites . . . Although the Foreign Policy Briefings were supposed to be secret, there are reliable reports that at least one Communist country newsman was present . . . It was not known how he was accredited by the State Department or if they knew it. . . . It appears the speed reading craze has hit Washington since it has become known that President Kennedy took a speed reading course and raised his reading ability to 1,200 words a minute.

Senator William A. Proxmire, Wisconsin Democrat, claims that he reads 20,000 words a minute with real comprehension; Stuart Symington, Missouri Democrat, read "Quo Vadis" in an hour, he said, and Herman Talmadge of Georgia, claims a modest 7,000 words a minute and wants to introduce speed reading in all the schools in Georgia.

One Of The Best

One of the best written stories probably that came out of World War II was the one by Staff Sergeant Vic Kalman, a Marine Corps Combat Correspondent. It didn't get very wide distribution but because of its simplicity and feeling for words, I thought I'd pass it on to you by reprinting it. So here it is:

OKIANWA, Ryukyu Islands (Delayed). — "Come on, dad, strike 'em out!"

It was Shanghai, 1937. The pitcher was tall, rugged Maj. Francis I. Fenton, player-manager of the marine team, undefeated in China. He was celebrating his 45th birthday. The rooter was his 11-year-old son, Mike.

"You can do it, dad, you can do it!"

The major did. He won, 9-2, winding up a baseball career that had started at Pearl Harbor in 1917. His teams won championships at Quantico, Va.; Pearl Harbor, Guam, China.

"Nice catch, son!"

The tables had turned. Mike was playing second base for St. Joseph's academy in Baltimore. Mr. Lieutenant Colonel Fenton, on the staff of the marine schools at Quantico, had come down to watch the game.

"You're the best infielder in the world, son."

Father and son walked toward the field house.

"Dad, I'm 17 now. There's a paper that I'd like to have you sign."

"I thought you didn't want to join the corps."

"Well, I meant as a career. But there's a war on. When it's over, we'll both resign and take in all the big league games, huh?"

"Sure, Mike, if that's what you want."

"Hello, son."

It was April, 1945. The Fentons — the colonel and the private first class — met on the bloody Okinawa battlefield. The colonel was first marine division engineer. Mike had turned down a commission, wanted to fight on the lines with the men. He was scout - sniper in the Fifth regiment.

"Need anything, Mike?"

"No, sir."

"How many socks have you?"

"Well, sir-uh-just what I've got on."

"That's what I thought. How about blankets?"

"Oh, we wrap ourselves up in our ponchos."

"I'll send you some socks and blankets tomorrow."

"Please don't, sir. I wouldn't feel right. You know. The other guy'll think I'm pulling strings, just because my father is a colonel."

Two weeks later, on the Eve of St. Michael's, his Patron Saint, the Japs counter - attacked. Mike Fenton crouched behind a rock, tossed grenades at the enemy. Jap shells and machine gun bullets gave thunderous answer.

The jeep pulled up at the Graves Registrant tent. Men were stretched on the ground. Colonel Fenton walked among the bodies, stopped at one.

"This is my son," he said.

Mike, wrapped in an American flag, was buried in the ground he fought for. The Catholic chaplain intoned the final prayer. Then the colonel bowed in prayer among the other marines awaiting burial.

Back at his office, he wrote a letter, addressed it to Mrs. Mary E. Fenton, 326 Juniper street, San Diego, Calif. He pushed a lock of grey hair, straightened his broad shoulders, pointed to a map.

"We'd better double the guard around No. 5 bridge," he said. "The Nips may try to blow it up."

PRESIDENT'S REQUEST

Censorship Plan Talked, Aired

(Editor's Note: President Kennedy has made an unprecedented suggestion that newspapers, radio-television and magazines consider a form of voluntary censorship to protect the nation's security. By JOHN H. COLBURN (Written For The Associated Press)

Every man, woman and draft-age youth has a big stake in President Kennedy's proposal that the press consider a system of voluntary censorship.

Voluntary censorship was imposed during World War II to protect the nation's security and its military operations here and abroad. Never before has a President of the United States suggested any peacetime restrictions on the flow of information to the public.

Today, though, President Kennedy says that the Communist threat is such that "there is no escaping either the gravity or the totality of its challenge to our security and survival."

Mr. Kennedy told the nation's publishers in New York 10 days ago:

"If the press is awaiting a declaration of war before it imposes the self-discipline of combat conditions, then I can only say that no war ever posed a greater threat to our security."

Is this declaration by the President sufficient—in lieu of any expression by Congress—to justify editors to curb the flow of news and possibly imperil the public interest?

It was in Williamsburg, Va., 185 years ago that Virginia adopted a declaration of rights that in 1791 became the keystone to the American Bill of Rights. It said:

This concept of freedom of the press, however, was not designed to provide special privileges for newspapers of that day — or of newspapers, magazines, radio and television of today. It was designed to guarantee unrestricted information so that a democratic people could better evaluate the affairs of the day.

What Mr. Kennedy is now suggesting is that the press, "and I hope every group in America—unions and businessmen and public officials at every level—"weigh its evaluation of news on this yardstick: Whether it is in the "national interest" rather than the "public interest."

Since World War II, the press and officials of both Democratic and Republican administrations in Washington have been at loggerheads over allegations of unwarranted secrecy in government. Editors and publishers have consistently maintained that they would not knowingly jeopardize national security, but that government agencies had covered up news to hide political blunders and poor performance.

"The facts of the matter are," he said, "that this nation's foes have openly boasted of acquiring through our newspapers information they would otherwise hire agents to acquire through theft, bribery or espionage; that details of this nation's covert operations to counter the enemy's covert operations have been available to every newspaper reader, friend and foe alike; that the size, the strength, the location and the nature of our forces and weapons, and our plans and strategy for their use, have all been pin-pointed in the press and other news media to a degree sufficient to satisfy any foreign power; and that, in at least one case, the publication of details concerning a secret mechanism whereby satellites were followed required its alteration at the expense of considerable time and money."

What is the other side of the story?

Rep. John Moss, a California Democrat and chairman of the House subcommittee on Government Information, said: "In almost every past instance the so-called security breach was turned out to be a carefully controlled leak of information favorable to some government official, federal agency or military service. If such information leaks damage to the national security, the perpetrators should be punished under the already adequate laws established for that purpose."

Moss also said the subcommittee "has uncovered information withheld by officials who contended the disclosure would endanger national security whereas they were merely trying to protect their own political security. We must not use the excuse of cold war dangers to weaken the critical self-appraisal which is a basic ingredient in our democratic government.

Moss had this advice for the Kennedy administration: "Because of the U2 fiasco or the Cuban foul up—we should not hide all information about our government's involvement in foreign affairs. If our intelligence system is failing, we should improve that system instead of tightening controls over information about intelligence failures."

Kennedy had sought, though, to clarify this point in these words:

"No official of my administration, whether his rank is high or low, civilian or military, should interpret my words as an excuse to censor the news, to stifle dissent, to cover up our mistakes or to withhold from the press and the public the facts they deserve to know.

"I have no intention of establishing a new Office of War Information to govern the flow of news. I am not suggesting any new forms of censorship or new types of security classification. I have no easy answer to the dilemma I have posed, and would not seek to impose it if I had one.

"Perhaps there is no answer to the dilemma faced by a free and open society in a cold and secret war. In times of peace, any discussion of this subject, and any action that results, are both painful and without precedent. But this is a time of peace and a period which knows no precedent in history."

Kennedy gave no indication of what is being done to plug security leaks cited by Moss.

Security censorship has been a hot subject in Washington since the Office of Censorship was abolished in 1945. In 1948, Defense Secretary James Forrestal proposed a "security advisory council" made up of press representatives. Nothing was done about it, but in 1951 President Harry S. Truman issued a security control order that was opposed by the press on the grounds that it promoted too much secrecy.

After the Korean War cease-fire, President Eisenhower modified the Truman order but government agencies still are able to withhold public examination of material — on alleged security grounds—by stamping it "top secret," "secret" and "confidential."

Under the Truman security order, the Pentagon stamped military weather data for "military use only." Yet the Soviet ambassador could telephone the Department of Defense, ask for Extension 79355 and listen to a recording with the latest forecast from Bolling Air Force Base. The recording ended with this announcement: "This information is for military use only and dissemination to the public is not authorized."

Ignorance Of World Threat To America

A NATION OF SHEEP. By William J. Lederer. W. W. Norton & Co. $3.75.

William J. Lederer, co - author of "The Ugly American," comes up in his new book with a deadly serious theme — that ignorance of world affairs threatens the destruction of the United States.

"The defeat of America need not be accomplished by destructive weapons and violence," he writes. "There are easier and cheaper ways of conquering a politically incompetent nation. It can be accomplished by psychological weapons, by economic strangulation, by intellectual subversion."

Lederer contends that reports of the invasion of Laos in 1959, though strongly endorsed by the United States government, constituted a fraud, compounded by misleading headlines.

"The U.S. government was in almost total ignorance of the facts," Lederer says.

He argues that the press has been derelict in reporting underlying facts from various areas, and that newspapers as a whole pay scant attention to foreign news.

Much of Lederer's over - all theme has merit, but he is inclined to take a running broad jump in trying to shore up his version of what is white and black.

Recalling the days of Sen. Joseph McCarthy, he says:

"If a prominent person says something sensational — even if untrue — the press normally will report the statement exactly as spoken. The substance of the speech will not be challenged; and no discussion of its veracity (or lack of veracity) is given to the reader."

This sweeping statement, among others in the book, will not be borne out by a study of the dispatches of reporters who try assiduously to provide balancing comment from accused persons — and did so time after time in news of McCarthy's statements.

Turning to Cuba, Lederer cites one misinformed dispatch distributed by The Associated Press on the eve of Fulgencio Batista's downfall. He fails even to mention other AP dispatches which gave an indication of the way things were going in Cuba.

Lederer formerly served as public relations officer for three U.S. commanders-in-chief in the Pacific. His first - hand knowledge of much he writes about cannot be questioned. But he seems to be getting over his depth in turning to the Middle East and Central America as well as in the Far East. It is his contention, for instance, that "only the United States stands between the people and the overthrow of a corrupt, dictatorial regime" in eight countries he classifies as oppressive oligarchies. He names these as South Viet Nam, Laos, Indonesia, Formosa, Guatemala, Jordan, Iran and Nicaragua. There is likely some merit to this contention in relation to several of these countries, but Lederer fails to discuss the possible alternatives in all of them. And there, frequently, is the rub.

"A Nation of Sheep" is calculated to make the reader think about U.S. policy and the way information is handled or mishandled, but the informed reader is apt to conclude that Lederer, like others does not have all the answers.

2 Books That Describe A Modern Theme

THE MAGIC OF THEIR SINGING. By Bernard Wolfe. Scribners. $3.95; A PASSION FOR LIFE. By Diana Chang. Random. $4.95.

Writers have explored some pretty rugged subjects in recent years, and often have spared nothing in reciting the clinical details of sex. Some readers have grown accustomed, some have not, to this range of topics.

For those who don't mind some pretty rough going, here are two novels. Wolfe's story contains some sordid people. Miss Chang's main theme is on a rather touchy subject.

In one category of rather exaggerated characters are the University types — graduate student Hoyt Fairless, Worthington Rivers the snob, an abnormal female named Penelope and Shoshana Gasharied, a Jewess from Sweden.

In another category are Marga, a beatnik dancer who is a shoplifter; a Negro jazz musician named History Jones and some other creepy people who frequent the Village. This, however, is not the espresso coffee crowd. It is further out in left field, like the "poet" Prosper — and his reefers. The climax of the narrative involves Penelope and the jazz band.

Wolfe's main exposition is that the characters who are Way Out really want In. Through some glib intellectual talk by Miss Gasharid, he argues that the beat types realize they could not make the grade in any legitimate way, so they join the cult of disaffiliation, all the while wishing someone would invite them back.

The writing is full of "hip" talk, and the author explains that for purposes of the book he has been compelled to make the beats more articulate than they are in real life. There is a graphic impressionism in his style.

Guide To Good Reading

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian

Just three weeks from tomorrow the 13th annual summer reading club for the children of Ouachita Parish, sponsored by the Ouachita Parish Public Library will begin. Each year since 1948 the Ouachita Parish Public Library has sponsored such a club and thousands of children have earned certificates. The schools of Ouachita Parish and the City of Monroe are stressing the importance of reading and are cooperating wholeheartedly with the Ouachita Parish Public Library in the summer reading program. The theme for this summer is "The Civil War Centennial." We are getting together all of the books which we can find dealing with the Civil War and suitable for children to read. The buttons with the crossed flags of the Union and Confederate armies are most attractive. The bookmarks are beautiful and since this is the year of the Civil War Centennial, we could think of nothing more timely. Children from the 5th grade up are required to read one book dealing with the Civil War in each group of five books. If 15 books are read during the summer, a certificate will be awarded when school opens.

New books of great variety are added to the library collection each week. "A Journey to Matecumbe" is the title of a new novel by Robert Lewis Taylor. This is a big, exciting story about a young boy's wildly funny, often hair - raising flight down the Mississippi River to a precarious haven in the Florida Keys just after the Civil War. Davy Burnie, Mr. Taylor's hero and narrator is a literary cousin of Huck Finn, Tom Jones and the author's own Jaimie McPheeters. From one adventure to another, he travels with a group of colorful companions by skiff, flatboat, horseback, steamboat, stage line, schooner, railroad and Indian Canoe. With this book Mr. Taylor has introduced an ingredient long lacking in the American novel —glorious entertainment.

A book which will be widely read in this area is "The Earl of Louisiana" by A. J. Liebling. This is the story of the late Earl Long, written by an outsider who does not understand Louisiana at all. Most of us will probably disagree with a great deal of the material in the book, but it never hurts to see ourselves as others see us.

Several valuable reference books have been added to the library book collection during the past week. The Fiction catalog, 1960 edition is an invaluable tool, for it indexes the outstanding fiction according to subject. Many people in this community collect stamps and will be glad to know that we have the two latest Scott's Stamp catalogues. One is their General postage stamp catalogue for 1961 and the other is the specialized stamp catalogue of United States Stamps. Another very valuable reference tool is "A Library of Literary Criticisms of Modern American Literature" by Dorothy Nyren. This book will be most valuable to college students who are writing critical analysis of modern day material, which is not found in the Book Review Digest.

An unusual book, which will be useful to those who raise this breed of dog is "The Complete Poodle", by Lydia Hopkins. A very timely book is the account of the career of Eichmann, written by Michael A Musmanno and called "The Eichmann Kommandos." It is a book of grusome details, but there are some who will want to read it. An interesting book of reminiscences is "My Thirty Years Backstairs at the White House" written by Lillian Rogers Parks, who served for many years as a seamstress at the White House. She gives us an inside look at the Presidents and their families and many readers will enjoy it.

There are several new titles, wirtten especially for young adult readers. "Greek Gods and Heroes" by Robert Graves is a very fine addition to the world of mythology. "The Challenge of the Sea" by Arthur Charles Clark is an excellent book in the field of marine biology. "The man who Wouldn't Give Up" is a good biography of Henry Clay, written by Katherine Elliott Wilkie.

RUNNING THE SCALES

Rash Of Activity At Season's End

By JOHN CALE
Staff Writer

An upturn of activity at the season's end will keep northeast Louisiana concert followers busy during the first half of May.

Margaret Kalil, Monroe - born soprano who has stood the test of New York's oratorio productions, will appear on the Northeast State series Thursday evening.

As if foreseeing a possible conflict, L. V. E. Irvine, head of the Louisiana Tech Concert Association, notified members they could hear the Amsterdam Concert Gebouw symphony orchestra on Wednesday evening. Public performance of the orchestra is also slated for Thursday.

Two plays by the Dallas Theatre Center under the direction of Paul Baker will close the Northeast series on Tuesday May 16. A twin bill of one - act presentations is schedueld :"The Chairs," by Eugene Ionesco and "A Phoenix Too Frequent," by Christopher Fry.

REHEARSAL

Now in preparation for the final Little Theatre effort for the season is "The Diary of Anne Frank." Date for the performances have not been set at this writing.

Several days ago, Pericles Alexander sent up a trial balloon in his "On with the Show" column in the Shreveport Times as to the propsects of booking native artists who have made good to appear during annual Holiday in Dixie festivities.

We think that is a good idea. In fact, the appearance of Margaret Kalil on the Northeast series here this week is a realization of just that.

Miss Kalil, following her early training in Monroe, continued her studies at the Julliard School of Music, Columbia University and in Milan, Italy. She has appeared as a soloist with the New York Philharmonic symphony orchestra in Carnegie Hall and with the Boston symphony during the Berkshire Music Festival.

Making appearances with the Twin City Symphony at 3:30 p.m. today at Sherrouse School auditorium will be four young pianists from the northeast Louisiana area.

Donna Gartman, Columbia, will play Mozart's Piano Concerto K 488; Rex Morris, Rayville, will play another Mozart Concerto, that in E Flat Major, K 271. Marie King Nelsen, Monroe, Weber's Konzertstueck, and Mary Lou Holley, Pioneer, will perform the Concerto in G Minor by Saint Saens — all with the orchestra.

Proceeds from the program will be used in behalf of the symphony scholarship fund.

As for the Amsterdam orchestra scheduled to perform at Louisiana Tech this week, it is recognized as one of the three or four top orchestras in the world.

The orchestra was founded over 70 years ago. Now making its second American tour, the group will tour Japan next year.

One American - born bass violin player is among the "flying Dutchmen," Bernard Spieler originally from Brooklyn. Spieler's career spans not only two continents but two styles of bass playing — concert hall and dance band.

He started — bow in hand — as a serious musician when he won a New York Philharmonic Society grant to study with Anselme Fortier of the orchestra's bass section.

When World War II broke out, he joined the Navy as a member of Artie Shaw's Navy band. With the plunking and slapping technique largely replacing the bow, he continued with Benny Goodman, Jimmy Dorsey, Glen Gray and Claude Thornhill.

Then he used his money from the GI Bill to study at the Conservatory of Music in France. About eight years ago he auditioned for the Concert Gebouw orchestra in Holland and landed a musical contract.

Now other members of the orchestra may be from Haarlem (not New York) or Zwolle (not western Louisiana), but Spieler is the only player from this side of the Atlantic.

POSITIVE PROM

A report from Crossett, Arkansas, where a fatal auto-pedestrian accident occurred five years ago after a senior dance broke up in the neighboring town of Hamburg, tells of move toward safer, saner proms.

The parents arrange for a floor show, dance — as late as the youngsters want to carry on—and a breakfast. According to the police, things are quiet on the streets and highways around Crossett following the "blowout."

Other schools throughout the country are also turning to long-range supervised activities at graduation time so that the students can blow off steam through a safety valve. It may be rough on the adults to stick around until the teenagers wear themselves down, but it pays off in safety and sanity.

Exaggerations In Humor Fall Short In Europe

"Audiences over there do not like the subject of death to be treated humorously," the performer says. "One of the satires in my Twain program involves a hilarious story (at home) about a man who gets woven into a rug. This does not get good response abroad.

"I think it must be because of the last war. Also it may be the lack of love for the great exaggeration so common to American humor. I note that other very exaggerated jokes do not get as big a reception overseas as they do at home."

IN STEAMY VILLAGE

'The Marauders' Filming Started

By JIM BECKER

BAMBAN, Philippines (AP) — Clustered in and around this steamy Philippine village are enough men in various soldier suits to tip the balance of power in Laos.

They are making a motion picture, "The Marauders," the story of the American force under Gen. Frank Merrill that battled through the Burma jungles in World War II.

At least three distinct groups or individuals should have no complaints about the finished product — combat soldiers, Englishmen and the author of the book from which the movie is being made.

GENUINE

The soldiers should be pleased because the producer, the director and many others connected with "The Marauders" are genuine combat veterans.

Englishmen — reported still smarting over an earlier Hollywood film effort that depicted Errol Flynn winning the war in Burma almost singlehanded in an American uniform—will be happy to learn that the script of "The Marauders" makes it clear that the Americans played only a small, if heroic, part in the mainly British Burma campaign.

The author, Charlton Ogburn, is probably happy to know that the men who are making the movie seem determined to do justice to his remarkably sensitive and highly successful book.

To do it, they have collected in addition to a cast headed by veteran film actor Jeff Chandler — a huge group consisting of members of the U.S. Army commando-like special forces, Philippine army soldiers, an assortment of civilians garbed in Japanese uniforms and U.S. Air Force volunteers.

Hiking down a jungle trail for a scene, the columns of the opposing "armies" stretch for thousands of yards. When the tanks, guns, planes and other vehicles are added, this scorching jungle area takes on the look of a major battlefield.

ONLY GAL

There is also a gal, doe-like Luz Valdez, a Philippine actress who plays the only female role in the picture, a Burmese girl who has been wounded in the fighting. She speaks not a line, but her scene with an American soldier who tends her wounds is considered a real plum.

The crew on "The Marauders" will be in the Philippines for more than two months, making the big-budget picture, under the eye of producer Mike Sperling.

Star Chandler, a giant of a man with iron white hair who plays Gen. Merrill, leader of the Marauders, says, "It will be a man's picture, but women are going to like it on the basis of that mutual respect that men have for each other in war."

Curtain Call

By BB STRON

Director Richard Clark announces the cast for the current Little Theatre Production, "The Diary of Anne Frank," as follows: Mr. Frank, Beryl Franklin; Miep, Evelyn Boggs; Mrs. Van Baan, Jo Brian; Mr. Van Baan, Garland Moore; Peter Van Baan, Billy Hardy; Mrs. Frank, Sarah Helen Griffin; Margot Frank, Marlene Browning; Anne Frank, Shirley Allen; Mr. Kraler, Bill Blythe; Mr. Dussel, V. P. Dalrmple.

This is a grand cast, and we are looking forward to their performances. Mary Lou Clay is acting as assistant to the director.

PROPERTIES

We are in need of some properties for "Diary" and perhaps some of you can look about in your storerooms and come up with them. We need an iron bedstead, an old, thoroughly used sofa, which makes into a bed by pulling the bottom drawer out, a pipe frame wash stand, an old, used chaise lounge, and a two-burner gas hot plate. All of this furniture should be old and thoroughly used. If you can supply any of these items, please call Richard Clark at FA 5-8710 or at the Strauss Playhouse, FA 3-1235.

Rehearsals are being held nightly except Saturday and Sunday at 7:30 p.m. at the Strauss Playhouse. Everyone is invited to drop by and see the cast at work.

We are still in need of workers to help out backstage with properties and in the wardrobe department. If some of you would like to assist in this phase, and have a good time besides, drop by and we will avail ourselves of your services.

See you next week.

Broadway Vet Back On Job At Age Of 85

A veteran of 60 years in various phases of show business, Hilliard is currently manager of the O'Neill Theater. Most successful of previous staging ventures was "Within Four Walls."

Another Play By Roman Set

NEW YORK (AP) — A second play by Lawrence Roman has been acquired for Broadway staging by Frederick Brisson, producer of his first script, "Under the Yum Yum Tree."

As yet untitled, the play is scheduled for exhibit next season. Roman is currently penning the screen version of his debut comedy.

Musical Needs Of Two Groups Vary Greatly

The composer of the scores of "New Girl in Town," "Take Me Along" and "Carnival" turned out a number of individual tunes including "Doggie in the Window" and "If I Knew You were Coming" before turning to Broadway work.

"With popular songs," says Merrill, "I try to think of what could be a hit. Writing for the stage is different — it takes a uniform approach and there's a definite channel, a way to go on.

"You can't start by doing musicals — you can waste years trying to get something on, and I don't think the best work comes out of an empty stomach. But after you get security, you want to do something that excites you. The theater is the challenge."

Carol Lynley In 'Return To Peyton Place'

The "Blue Denim" girl has come of age as an actress. Always a skilled and sensitive player, Carol Lynley emerges in "Return to Peyton Place," 20th Century-Fox CinemaScope DeLuxe Color sequel to the national best-seller, as a beautiful young woman of conviction and dramatic strength.

REAL LIFE

As Allison MacKenzie, the role identified in real-life with author Grace Metalious, Carol is called upon to portray the joys and penalties of the success heaped upon a young author who has stripped bare in a sensational novel, the prejudices and weaknesses of her own hometown community.

Carol interprets the part with wisdom and sensitivity, appearing in her own defense at a town meeting called to determine whether or not her controversial book should be banned.

During the course of the production, Carol was married to Michael Selsman, a New York press agent. She declares that she will retire from the screen for at least half a year. "Right now I want more than anything else to be just Mrs. Mike Selsman. I want to cook and keep house for the man I love. Later on I know I will resume the career I am interrupting."

Exaggerations In Humor Fall Short In Europe

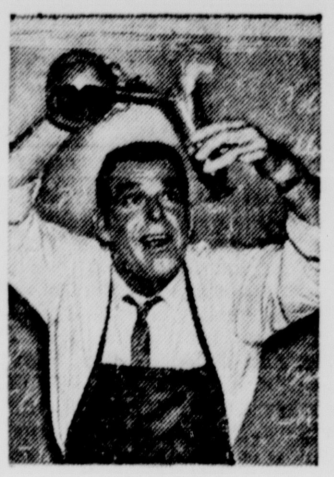
"Audiences over there do not like the subject of death to be treated humorously," the performer says. "One of the satires in my Twain program involves a hilarious story (at home) about a man who gets woven into a rug. This does not get good response abroad.

"I think it must be because of the last war. Also it may be the lack of love for the great exaggeration so common to American humorists. I note that other very exaggerated jokes do not get as big a reception overseas as they do at home."



FRED MACMURRAY as "The Absent-Minded Professor" is depicted in one of the scenes in the family movie which is now showing at the Jim Theatre. Also starring in the production are Nancy Olson and Keenan Wynn.

IN STEAMY VILLAGE

'The Marauders' Filming Started

By JIM BECKER

BAMBAN, Philippines (AP) — Clustered in and around this steamy Philippine village are enough men in various soldier suits to tip the balance of power in Laos.

They are making a motion picture, "The Marauders," the story of the American force under Gen. Frank Merrill that battled through the Burma jungles in World War II.

At least three distinct groups or individuals should have no complaints about the finished product — combat soldiers, Englishmen and the author of the book from which the movie is being made.

GENUINE

The soldiers should be pleased because the producer, the director and many others connected with "The Marauders" are genuine combat veterans.

Englishmen — reported still smarting over an earlier Hollywood film effort that depicted Errol Flynn winning the war in Burma almost singlehanded in an American uniform—will be happy to learn that the script of "The Marauders" makes it clear that the Americans played only a small, if heroic, part in the mainly British Burma campaign.

The author, Charlton Ogburn, is probably happy to know that the men who are making the movie seem determined to do justice to his remarkably sensitive and highly successful book.

To do it, they have collected in addition to a cast headed by veteran film actor Jeff Chandler — a huge group consisting of members of the U.S. Army commando-like special forces, Philippine army soldiers, an assortment of civilians garbed in Japanese uniforms and U.S. Air Force volunteers.

Hiking down a jungle trail for a scene, the columns of the opposing "armies" stretch for thousands of yards. When the tanks, guns, planes and other vehicles are added, this scorching jungle area takes on the look of a major battlefield.

ONLY GAL

There is also a gal, doe-like Luz Valdez, a Philippine actress who plays the only female role in the picture, a Burmese girl who has been wounded in the fighting. She speaks not a line, but her scene with an American soldier who tends her wounds is considered a real plum.

The crew on "The Marauders" will be in the Philippines for more than two months, making the big-budget picture, under the eye of producer Mike Sperling.

Star Chandler, a giant of a man with iron white hair who plays Gen. Merrill, leader of the Marauders, says, "It will be a man's picture, but women are going to like it on the basis of that mutual respect that men have for each other in war."

Curtain Call

By BB STRON

Director Richard Clark announces the cast for the current Little Theatre Production, "The Diary of Anne Frank," as follows: Mr. Frank, Beryl Franklin; Miep, Evelyn Boggs; Mrs. Van Baan, Jo Brian; Mr. Van Baan, Garland Moore; Peter Van Baan, Billy Hardy; Mrs. Frank, Sarah Helen Griffin; Margot Frank, Marlene Browning; Anne Frank, Shirley Allen; Mr. Kraler, Bill Blythe; Mr. Dussel, V. P. Dalrmple.

This is a grand cast, and we are looking forward to their performances. Mary Lou Clay is acting as assistant to the director.

PROPERTIES

We are in need of some properties for "Diary" and perhaps some of you can look about in your storerooms and come up with them. We need an iron bedstead, an old, thoroughly used sofa, which makes into a bed by pulling the bottom drawer out, a pipe frame wash stand, an old, used chaise lounge, and a two-burner gas hot plate. All of this furniture should be old and thoroughly used. If you can supply any of these items, please call Richard Clark at FA 5-8710 or at the Strauss Playhouse, FA 3-1235.

Rehearsals are being held nightly except Saturday and Sunday at 7:30 p.m. at the Strauss Playhouse. Everyone is invited to drop by and see the cast at work.

We are still in need of workers to help out backstage with properties and in the wardrobe department. If some of you would like to assist in this phase, and have a good time besides, drop by and we will avail ourselves of your services.

See you next week.

Broadway Vet Back On Job At Age Of 85

A veteran of 60 years in various phases of show business, Hilliard is currently manager of the O'Neill Theater. Most successful of previous staging ventures was "Within Four Walls."

Another Play By Roman Set

NEW YORK (AP) — A second play by Lawrence Roman has been acquired for Broadway staging by Frederick Brisson, producer of his first script, "Under the Yum Yum Tree."

As yet untitled, the play is scheduled for exhibit next season. Roman is currently penning the screen version of his debut comedy.

Musical Needs Of Two Groups Vary Greatly

The composer of the scores of "New Girl in Town," "Take Me Along" and "Carnival" turned out a number of individual tunes including "Doggie in the Window" and "If I Knew You were Coming" before turning to Broadway work.

"With popular songs," says Merrill, "I try to think of what could be a hit. Writing for the stage is different — it takes a uniform approach and there's a definite channel, a way to go on.

"You can't start by doing musicals — you can waste years trying to get something on, and I don't think the best work comes out of an empty stomach. But after you get security, you want to do something that excites you. The theater is the challenge."

National Guard Post Dispute Brings Charges

JACKSON, Miss. (UPI) — Adj. Gen. W. P. Wilson charged Saturday that the man Gov. Ross Barnett ordered be re-hired to a disputed National Guard post was insubordinate.

Wilson, in the latest action in a controversy between himself and Barnett, said Maj. Lloyd Satterfield was uncooperative and had a "tendency to create friction and dissension" while serving as maintenace supervisor of the Jackson Air National Guard unit.

Barnett Friday ordered Satterfield, who resigned from the job six weeks ago, be re-hired after Satterfield formally re-applied for the job.

Barnett bypassed Wilson's authority and had Assistant Adjutant General, Lt. Col. George McWilliams, sign the order rehiring Satterfield. McWilliams refused to sign at first, but did after several orders.

Wilson charged the order was "not valid" and refused to recognize it.

My Answer

By BILLY GRAHAM

QUESTION: If a Christian should find a drunk man and the man when sober is a good friend of his, do you think he should pass the man up, and not help him?

K.W.

ANSWER: Am I to assume that you were the drunk man? If so, perhaps your Christian friend thought by recognizing you in that condition it would be embarrasing to you, and that the best thing to do was to act like he didn't see you. Or, perhaps, he didn't see you at all. In that case you should be thankful, for that saved you embarrassment.

Have you ever thought of trying to help yourself? Too many alcoholics look for sympathy and in fact, many doctors dealing with alcoholics consider that self - pity or desire for attention is one of the chief motivations of over-drinking. Drinking makes you ill, and an ill person always get sympathy, even if it is caused by intemperance. Around the corner from you is a church, and although the church does not major in the rehabilitation of alcoholics, the faith they proclaim does. The alcoholic is weighed down with lack of faith — lack of faith in himself, lack of faith in God. The solution to your problem is to draw strength from God. "You can do all things through Christ." To refuse to go to Him who can give you strength is to sink deeper into self-pity.

My Answer

QUESTION: If a Christian should find a drunk man and the man when sober is a good friend of his, do you think he should pass the man up, and not help him?

K.W.

ANSWER: Am I to assume that you were the drunk man? If so, perhaps your Christian friend thought by recognizing you in that condition it would be embarrasing to you, and that the best thing to do was to act like he didn't see you. Or, perhaps, he didn't see you at all. In that case you should be thankful, for that saved you embarrassment.

Have you ever thought of trying to help yourself? Too many alcoholics look for sympathy and in fact, many doctors dealing with alcoholics consider that self - pity or desire for attention is one of the chief motivations of over-drinking. Drinking makes you ill, and an ill person always get sympathy, even if it is caused by intemperance. Around the corner from you is a church, and although the church does not major in the rehabilitation of alcoholics, the faith they proclaim does. The alcoholic is weighed down with lack of faith — lack of faith in himself, lack of faith in God. The solution to your problem is to draw strength from God. "You can do all things through Christ." To refuse to go to Him who can give you strength is to sink deeper into self-pity.

Mutual Fund Investment At All-Time High

Total net assets of the nation's mutual funds at the end of the initial 1961 quarter reached a new all-time high of $21.4 billion, up nearly 14 per cent from the 1960 close.

Market appreciation accounted for $2.2 billion of the rise, according to the Wiesenberger investment report.

Common stock purchases by the 28 large investment companies included in the Wiesenberger investment report.

Common stock purchases by the 28 large investment companies included in the Wiesenberger report amounted to $477 million a whopping 80 per cent above the preceding quarter's $264 million. Sales of $343 million were up 47 per cent from the last 1960 quarter.

A total of [illegible] individual issues were traded by the 28 funds, against [illegible] in the preceding three months.

Wiesenberger noted that oil [illegible] issues, particularly of those domestic firms with large international interests, again dominated the portfolios with purchases by the funds valued at $67 million.

The early turnabout in the auto industry precipated heavy buying of auto issues — some $34 million worth of stock. Ford and General Motors were heavily bought. [illegible] favored.

The report also showed that profit taking was evident in electrical and electronics issues, office equipment and insurance stocks. Sales exceeded purchases in each of these groups.

FOR HOME DARKROOMS

Simple Color Photo Printing Available

By IRVING DESFOR

AP Newsfeatures

A simplified and inexpensive color printing process for home darkrooms will become available nationally in about two months.

Recently, I watched a demonstration of the process by Lawrence R. Fink, head of FR Corporation, the company which will market the color kits. He made a 3½ x 5 inch color print from a Kodacolor roll film negative in which the colors became clearly visible about 20 minutes after starting. Simple equipment was used and no intricate steps or extensive experience seemed necessary.

COLOR KIT

The FR Color Kit, which will cost under $10, contains all the materials needed to make color prints from color negatives. It includes: 20 sheets of 3½ x 5 inch color paper; three color chemical solutions: developer, fixer and bleach; an ingenious exposure calculator; a filter holder and three additive color filters; a safelight filter and an infrared filter; an instruction manual.

It is assumed that the amateur has an enlarger and a working darkroom, including safelight, three trays, a timer with a second hand and running water.

Two expensive accessories, usually used in present color printing processes, are not necessary: an electric line voltage regulator and a water temperature regulator.

In order to make a color print by the FR process, the negative must be given three separate exposures through red, green and blue filters. These exposures are determined by the calculator through which a test print is made first in less than ten minutes. Corrections in color balance can subsequently be made by varying the exposure times through the three filters.

The calculator resembles a chart. Thin strips of the three filters make vertical columns. Crossing them are tiny horizontal boxes numbered from 1 to 48 seconds. When a test print is made, you look for the first visible box in each column. This is the exposure in seconds for that filter.

FILTER

The safelight filter is put into place so that some vision is possible in the first stages. If Kodacolor is to be printed, the infrared filter is put in the enlarger to offset the orange mask built into the negative. Other color negatives do not require it.

The test print is exposed through the calculator for 48 seconds and put into the first tray containing color developer. After five minutes, it is given a 30 second rinse in water and put into the second tray for a three-minute fixing. At this point the white light can be put on and the proper exposures for each of the three filters read from the chart.

The safelight is put on again and the red filter is slipped into the filter holder. The color paper is put into place and the predetermined exposure given. The other filters are then each put in place and exposed as determined by the test print.

Once again the paper goes into the developer for five minutes, is rinsed off and put into the fixer for three minutes. The white light can go on and at this point the print looks like a sepia print.

A five minute wash follows, then the print is put into a third tray containing bleach. Here the unexposed silver is dissolved and true colors emerge. After 10 minutes, the finished print is ready for a 15 minute washing and drying.

The comparative ease of the process brings the world of color a lot closer to the point of displacing black-and-white photography. Greater impetus to that movement will be gained when the new color paper becomes available in sizes larger than the first batch of 3½ x 5 inches. Who can resist a colorful big enlargement which is simple and inexpensive to make at home?

New Vaults Are Built To Repell Hydrogen Bomb

NEW YORK (UPI) — If you're worried about the possibility of a nuclear war you might try for one of the safest [illegible] in the world — as a guard in one of the several huge underground vaults business firms are renting to preserve vital records.

The vaults are safe from almost any known disaster, up to and including a 20 megaton hydrogen bomb. They are air conditioned, well lighted, and guarded by huge Diebold steel vault doors that rival and even surpass those used at Fort Knox.

These installations are in the most unusual locations. A hollowed out portion of a mountain, laced with iron ore in the Berkshire Mountains in New York, a huge salt mine three times as big as the Pentagon, 600 feet below a Kansas plain, a worked out limestone mine near Pittsburgh and beneath a green meadow on a lavish estate outside Boston.

These storage facilities are [illegible] used to protect cash, according to Raymond Koontz, president of Diebold, Inc. He added that these records literally are worth their weight in gold. They are the memories of companies, stored to assure continuance if disaster strikes.

An important factor in the survival of the nation will be the ability of banks and industry to recover quickly from the effects of an enemy blow and employ their facilities in whatever capacity the nation requires, Koontz declared.

At the heart of the protective system in all of these storage facilities stand steel vault doors weighing from 16 to 30 tons each. The doors seal the vaults against the threats of fire, flood and burglary attacks.

Within the vaults are other smaller vaults for private use by large corporations or as general filing areas.

The oldest storage center is the Iron Mountain atomic storage Corp. in Hudson, N. Y. Ready to celebrate its 10th anniversary in August, Iron Mountain today contains tons of records and irreplaceable possessions stored in private vaults ranging in size from 50 to 15,000 cubic feet.

DURING PAST WEEK

Business Given New Confidence

Confidence soared that the economy definitely was on the upgrade from what some described as the shallowest depression in the country's history.

Even as business men in many instances reported poor first-quarter earnings, they were highly optimistic about prospects for the rest of the year.

And there was much concrete evidence of better performances in many segments of business.

It included, rising automobile sales, increased steel production, a decline in unemployment, an improvement in sales of major appliances, a gain in manufacturers' new orders and sales, and an increase in instalment credit.

A survey of purchasing agents showed the biggest percentage improvement in new orders for any month since September 195[illegible]

The steel industry was scheduled for its eighth consecutive weekly increase in production. Last week, the latest for which figures were available, the output [illegible] 1.1 per cent over the previous week.

The metalworking trade publication, Iron Age, said, "The improvement, while healthy, is gradual" and "steelmen apparently feel their first real confidence."

It added that the market has come to the point where emergency orders may not be filled immediately, ending a period in which consumers could get almost immediate delivery.

Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp. put three additional furnaces into service at its Cleveland works and announced that all 10 furnaces at Aliquippa, Pa., were working.

Automobile sales picked up substantially.

Ford Motor Co. reported 100,500 of its cars were sold in April, the greatest increase in April selling rates over March since 1946.

Chrysler Corp. said its dealers sold 63,584 cars in April, more than in any month since October and a 20 per cent gain over March.

American Motors rehired 1,000 workers who had been laid off at its Kenosha and Milwaukee, Wis., plants last October.

Industrywide production jumped to the highest weekly total of the year, an estimated 126,600 compared with 114,529 last week.

The number of unemployed declined in April but the government said it was mainly seasonal. This left the number of idle at 4,962,000. Employment rose by [illegible] to 65,734,000.

The Kennedy administration won a big victory when Congress passed a compromise bill to increase the minimum wage and broaden the law's coverage.

The legislation means for the 23.9 million workers already covered by the wage-hour law an increase in the hourly minimum from $1 to $1.15 four months after the President signs it, and to $1.25 two years after that.

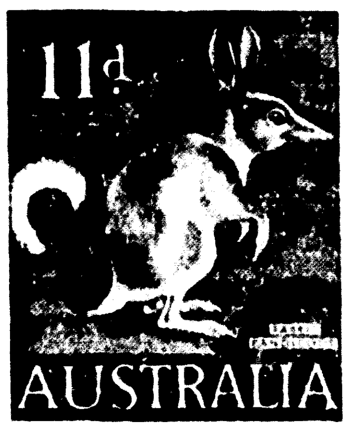
The 3.6 million additional workers to be covered will have an hourly minimum of $1 four months after the President signs the bill, $1.15 three years after that and $1.25 at the end of another year.

Washington was the source of other developments affecting business.

Feature Spot On Adhesive To Bandicoot

A rabbit bandicoot, a rabbit that looks like a small kangaroo, will be featured on a new stamp by Australia. Postmaster General Davidson announced the new 11 pence stamp was issued May 3.

This new stamp will be used for letters and items within that country's "third weight unit" for addresses in Australia and overseas where British Commonwealth rates apply. It will also cover combined charges for certified mail.



The design was the work of Miss Eileen Mayo of Neutral Bay, N. S. W., whose designs were also used for other stamps in the current fauna series.

The Australian Post Office also announced that later this year it will issue a stamp commemorating the centenary of the birth of Dame Nellie Melba, one of the world's great singers. Dame Nellie was born in Melbourne in 1861.

The United Arab Republic reports it will issue a new stamp (release date unknown) to mark the completion of the "Tower of Cairo," highest manmade structure in the Middle East. It will be a 10 millieme blue green commemorative and will feature the Tower which is on the island of Gezireh in the Nile between Cairo and Giza. The Tower was scheduled to open on April 1 but there have been many delays in the construction, claims the UAR.

The United States received several awards in the recently held stamp exhibition which took place in Barcelona, Spain. Several U.S. officials including Postmaster General J. Edward Day were on hand to receive the awards. Also recipients of special awards were His Eminence Francis Cardinal Spellman and Jacques Minkus for Minkus Publications. Minkus served as the U. S. Commissioner for the exhibition.

The superb British West Indies collection of the late T. Charlton Henry of Chestnut Hill, Pa., realized $240,240 in a seven-session auction held by Harmer, Rooke & Co. in New York City. Counting the earlier portion of this collection, the total sale was $418,240. It is interesting to note that the stamps sold in this auction sold [illegible] their catalog value. Despite the fact that the stamp material was British, the prices were higher than if they had been sold at auction in England.

The previously announced commemorative set by Vatican City honoring Pope Leo the Great will have a common design. It will feature a reproduction of a marble bas relief in St. Peter's Basilica showing St. Leo defying Attila. The values will be 15 lire, 70 lire and 300 lire.

More Stops On Overseas Air Journey

The vacationer heading overseas by air this summer can cram a lot more foreign stops into his trip than he might realize — and without adding anything to transportation costs.

For example, a person planning to jump off from New York to Rome can get a peek behind the Iron Curtain — in Prague — as well as stops in Glasgow, Copenhagen, Berlin, and Vienna, for the same price as a direct New York to Rome ticket, which, incidentally, is $620.30 round trip on a jet in economy class. That routing is via Scandinavian Airlines System (SAS).

STOP OFF

A traveler from Miami to Tel Aviv can stop off at the Bahamas, in Canada, Glasgow, Copenhagen, Warsaw, Budapest, Istanbul, Ankara and Nicosia before arriving at the Israeli city. A more conventional routing, which doesn't include so many extra stop-overs, probably would be from Miami to New York to London to Tel Aviv.

The privilege of stopping at extra cities, without having to pay any extra fare, isn't a secret in the travel industry, but still the fact that it can be done isn't known to the bulk of travelers.

It's all based on the mileage system set up by the International Air Transport Association (IATA), to which most major international air carriers belong.

IATA allows a traveler 15 per cent more mileage between two given points than the direct mileage between them. For example, the allowable mileage on a New York to Rome ticket is 4,958, while the direct routing mileage is only 4,266. That allows the stop-over in Prague and the other non-direct route cities.

New York to London, with stopovers in Glasgow and Manchester, on British Overseas Airways Corp. (BOAC). And New York to Rome via Frankfurt on the same line.

Other New York to Rome itineraries could include Paris, Bordeaux, Lyon, Marseille, Nice and Milan; or Paris, Barcelona, Nice and Milan. Either itinerary, which is via Air France, also could include a stop in London.

A New York to Tel Aviv trip allows stops in Paris, Prague, Warsaw, Budapest, Belgrade, Sophia and Athens.

Going to the other side of the world, a traveler in a hurry to get to Hong Kong might go from Seattle to Tokyo, and then directly in to Hong Kong. But one with more time and a yen to see more of the Far East could take a Northwest Airlines routing that would include both Manila and Formosa, and Okinawa as well if permission can be secured to visit that island.

ANOTHER ROUTING

Another routing to Hong Kong could include Hawaii.

For the Latin America-bound vacationer, there are numerous extra cities — many of them the little-visited places that haven't been overrun by tourists.

It's possible to include stops in Jamaica, and Barranquilla, Cartegena and Medellin, Colombia, on a New York to Bogota ticket on Avianca.

A traveler heading to Buenos Aires on Panagra can stop in Panama, Quito, Lima, Santiago and several other cities southbound, and swing back to New York via an East Coast route that could include Sao Paulo, Rio de Janeiro and Caracas.

On another airline, Varig, a vacation visit to Rio also can include stop-overs in tropical Belem and these other Brazilian cities, Sao Luiz, Fortaleza, Recife and Salvador.

And on new BOAC service to Lima, a traveler can include a vacation in the Bahamas at the same fare.

Although the above are specific examples on various airlines' routes of extra cities at the same fare as flying direct, there is an almost limitless number of combinations on any of the American-flag or foreign-flag airlines flying international routes.

With a lot of figuring, or help from a travel or airline agent, a lot more foreign stops can be included at no extra cost than a traveler realizes.

Stocks Rebound With Vigor As Market Climbs

NEW YORK (UPI)—Stocks rebounded with vigor this week following a simmering down of the adverse influences which depressed the market a week earlier.

There was renewed confidence that the worst might just be over. The second quarter looked better all round. Steel output was at an 11-month high and headed higher, auto and retail sales were up and unemployment was down slightly more than seasonal.

Friday produced the successful space shot but the effort only spurred electronic stocks, early market jubilation giving way to pre-weekend profit-taking in other segments of the list.

Many encouraging gains centered in the blue chip group and cyclical stocks which respond to swings in the economy. Most of these comprise the Dow-Jones industrial average which rose 11.96 points to close at 690.67, or about 6 points below the all-time high.

New Formula For Gas Rule In Process

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — The search for ground rules for formal hearings on the new area formula for controlling natural gas prices moves back to Washington next week.

Producers, distributors, and federal power commission staff members begin on Wednesday an informal discussion on the role producer costs should play in the determination of area price ceilings.

Only the results of the discussions will be entered into the record of a pre-hearing conference FPC examiner Edward Marsh began in Midland, Tex., March 6.

The status of producer costs dominated the three-day Midland session. Marsh ordered the recess until April 12 after FPC staff members and spokesmen for a number of large producers indicated possible areas of agreement on the development of mutually satisfactory questionnaire on producer costs.

The Midland pre-hearing conference was the first ordered by the FPC after it adopted the area price policy Sept. 18.

Producers in each of the nation's 23 major gas producing areas are vitally interested in the proceedings even though the only wellhead prices directly involved are those of the vast Permian basin area of southeastern New Mexico and West Texas.

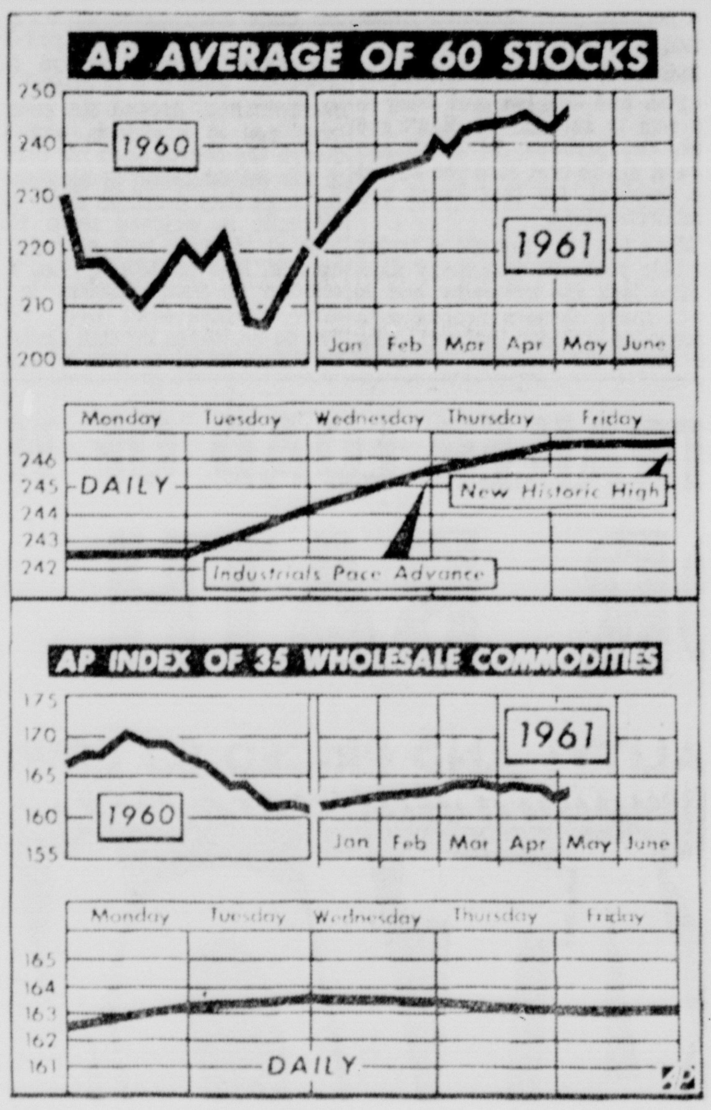
Any ground rules developed for the Permian basin, a major supply area for California and Midwest consumers, could have major impact on similar proceedings for other producing areas.

The FPC ordered the Midland conference for the specific purpose of determining the issues and types of evidence to be submitted at a formal hearing on Permian prices. Instead, the Midland proceedings began and ended with discussions of producer costs.

On Sept. 18 the FPC tossed vidual producer and set area-wide price ceilings for each of the 23 producing areas.

Just before the Midland meeting, the FPC staff mailed to producers a voluminous questionnaire for uyase in compiling cost data. Permian producers, large and small, said the staff document indicated a return to utility-rate-base controls which the FPC abandoned on Sept. 18. A group of about 50 producers, including a number of major companies, announced they were developing their own financial data questionnaires.

Marsh's objective next week will be the development of a questionnaire acceptable to all concerned.



THE ASSOCIATED PRESS average of 60 stocks advanced this week to a new historic high of 246.8 compared with 242.5 a week ago. The commodity index advanced for the first time in four weeks when it closed at 163.0 from 162.5 in the preceding period. Livestock and nonferrous metals made substantial gains. (AP Wirephoto Chart)

Area Oil Activity On Upward Trend

Oil and gas activities in the Monroe area produced ten wells and staked eight new locations during the past week.

Duncan S. Cook, manager of the 14-parish district, also reported 18 rigs active in the fields and five holes that were plugged and abandoned due to little or no oil flow.

This is the second week in a row that the drilling and exploration activities have showed an increase in the district, which is typical for this time of the year.

Mutual Fund Investment At All-Time High

Total net assets of the nation's mutual funds at the end of the initial 1961 quarter reached a new all-time high of $21.4 billion, up nearly 14 per cent from the 1960 close.

Market appreciation accounted for $2.2 billion of the rise, according to the Wiesenberger investment report.

Common stock purchases by the 28 large investment companies included in the Wiesenberger investment report.

Common stock purchases by the 28 large investment companies included in the Wiesenberger report amounted to $477 million a whopping 80 per cent above the preceding quarter's $264 million. Sales of $343 million were up 47 per cent from the last 1960 quarter.

A total of 589 individual issues were traded by the 28 funds, against 493 in the preceding three months.

Wiesenberger noted that oil equities, particularly of those domestic firms with large international interests, again dominated the pictures with purchases by the funds valued at $67 million.

The early turnabout in the auto industry precipated heavy buying of auto issues — some $34 million worth of stock. Ford and General Motors were heavily bought, bo but Chrysler was ignored.

The report also showed that profit taking was evident in electrical and electronics issues, office equipment and insurance stocks: sales exceeded purchases in each of these groups.

FOR HOME DARKROOMS

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

A simplified and inexpensive color printing process for home darkrooms will become available nationally in about two months.

Recently, I watched a demonstration of the process by Lawrence R. Fink, head of FR Corporation, the company which will market the color kits. He made a 3½ x 5 inch color print from a Kodacolor roll film negative in which the colors became clearly visible about 20 minutes after starting. Simple equipment was used and no intricate steps or extensive experience seemed necessary.

COLOR KIT

The FR Color Kit, which will cost under $10, contains all the materials needed to make color prints from color negatives. It includes: 20 sheets of 3½ x 5 inch color paper; three color chemical solutions: developer, fixer and bleach; an ingenious exposure calculator; a filter holder and three additive color filters; a safelight filter and an infrared filter; an instruction manual.

It is assumed that the amateur has an enlarger and a working darkroom, including safelight, three trays, a timer with a second hand and running water.

Two expensive accessories, usually used in present color printing processes, are not necessary: an electric line voltage regulator and a water temperature regulator.

In order to make a color print by the FR process, the negative must be given three separate exposures through red, green and blue filters. These exposures are determined by the calculator through which a test print is made first in less than ten minutes. Corrections in color balance can subsequently be made by varying the exposure times through the three filters.

The calculator resembles a chart. Thin strips of the three filters make vertical columns. Crossing them are tiny horizontal boxes numbered from 1 to 48 seconds. When a test print is made, you look for the first visible box in each column. This is the exposure in seconds for that filter.

The safelight filter is put into place so that some vision is possible in the first stages. If Kodacolor is to be printed, the infrared filter is put in the enlarger to offset the orange mask built into the negative. Other color negatives do not require it.

The test print is exposed through the calculator for 48 seconds and put into the first tray containing color developer. After five minutes, it is given a 30 second rinse in water and put into the second tray for a three-minute fixing. At this point the white light can be put on and the proper exposures for each of the three filters read from the chart.

The safelight is put on again and the red filter is slipped into the filter holder. The color paper is put into place and the predetermined exposure given. The other filters are then each put in place and exposed as determined by the test print.

Once again the paper goes into the developer for five minutes, is rinsed off and put into the fixer for three minutes. The white light can go on and at this point the print looks like a sepia print.

A five minute wash follows, then the print is put into a third tray containing bleach. Here the unexposed silver is dissolved and true colors emerge. After 10 minutes, the finished print is ready for a 15 minute washing and drying.

The comparative ease of the process brings the world of color a lot closer to the point of displacing black-and-white photography. Greater impetus to that movement will be gained when the new color paper becomes available in sizes larger than the first batch of 3½ x 5 inches. Who can resist a colorful big enlargement which is simple and inexpensive to make at home?

DURING PAST WEEK

Business Given New Confidence

Confidence soared that the economy definitely was on the upgrade from what some described as the shallowest depression in the country's history.

Even as business men in many instances reported poor first-quarter earnings, they were highly optimistic about prospects for the rest of the year.

And there was much concrete evidence of better performances in many segments of business.

It included: rising automobile sales, increased steel production, a decline in unemployment, an improvement in sales of major appliances, a gain in manufacturers' new orders and sales, and an increase in instalment credit.

A survey of purchasing agents showed the biggest percentage improvement in new orders for any month since September 195.

The steel industry was scheduled for its eighth consecutive weekly increase in production. Last week, the latest for which figures were available, the output climbed 4.1 per cent over the previous week.

The metalworking trade publication, Iron Age, said, "The improvement, while healthy, is gradual" and "Steelmen apparently feel their first real confidence."

It added that the market has come to the point where emergency orders may not be filled immediately, ending a period in which consumers could get almost immediate delivery.

Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp. put three additional furnaces into service at its Cleveland works and announced that all 10 furnaces at Aliquippa, Pa., were working.

Automobile sales picked up substantially.

Ford Motor Co. reported 109,500 of its cars were sold in April, the greatest increase in April selling rates over March since 1946.

Chrysler Corp. said its dealers sold 69,584 cars in April, more than in any month since October and a 29 per cent gain over March.

American Motors rehired 4,000 workers who had been laid off at its Kenosha and Milwaukee, Wis., plants last October.

Industrywide production jumped to the highest weekly total of the year, an estimated 126,600 compared with 114,529 last week.

The number of unemployed declined in April but the government said it was mainly seasonal. This left the number of idle at 4,962,000. Employment rose by 218,000 to 65,734,000.

The Kennedy administration won a big victory when Congress passed a compromise bill to increase the minimum wage and broaden the law's coverage.

The legislation means for the 23.9 million workers already covered by the wage-hour law an increase in the hourly minimum from $1 to $1.15 four months after the President signs it, and to $1.25 two years after that.

The 3.6 million additional workers to be covered will have an hourly minimum of $1 four months after the President signs the bill, $1.15 three years after that and $1.25 at the end of another year.

Washington was the source of other developments affecting business.

New Vaults Are Built To Repell Hydrogen Bomb

NEW YORK (UPI)—If you're worried about the possibility of a nuclear war you might try for one of the safest jobs in the world — as a guard in one of the several huge underworld vaults business firms are renting to protect vital records.

The vaults are safe from almost any known disaster, up to and including a 20- megaton hydrogen bomb. They are air conditioned, well lighted, and guarded by huge Diebold steel vault doors that rival and even surpass those used at Fort Knox.

These installations are in the most unusual locations. A hollowed out portion of a mountain, laced with iron ore in the Berkshire Mountains in New York; a huge salt mine three times as big as the Pentagon, 650 feet below a Kansas plain; a worked out limestone mine near Pittsburgh; and beneath a green meadow on a plush estate outside Boston.

These storage facilities rival any used to protect cash, according to Raymond Koontz, president of Diebold, Inc. He added that these records literally are worth their weight in gold. They are the memories of companies, stored to assure continuance if disaster strikes.

An important factor in the survival of the nation will be the ability of banks and industry to recover quickly from the effects of an enemy blow and employ their facilities in whatever capacity the nation requires, Koontz declared.

At the heart of the protective system in all of these storage facilities stand steel vault doors weighing from 16 to 30 tons each. The doors seal the vaults against the threats of fire, flood and burglary attacks.

Within the vaults are other smaller vaults for private use by large corporations or as general filing areas.

The oldest storage center is the Iron Mountain atomic storage Corp. in Hudson, N. Y. Ready to celebrate its 10th anniversary in August, Iron Mountain today contains tons of records and irreplaceable possessions stored in private vaults ranging in size from 50 to 15,000 cubic feet.

C. C. Posey, Jr.

C. C. Posey, Jr. has been appointed state manager of the special investment department of the Cosmopolitan Life Insurance Company according to an announcement last week.

Posey has been regional manager of agencies in northeast Louisiana for a predecessor company of Cosmopolitan. Posey has been a resident of Monroe for the past two years. In his previous capacity he directed the organization of a field for his company in this area.

Truman B. Flynn

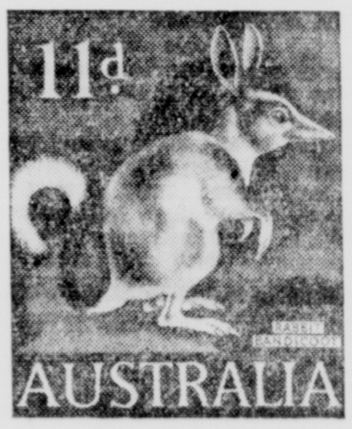
Truman B. Flynn, general agent in Monroe for the National Union Life Insurance Company went back to school for a week in a group of 36 new managers and supervisors of life insurance agencies and home office executives, to study sales management of a field life insurance agency.

This management orientation school was held at the Life Insurance Agency Management Association headquarters in Hartford, Conn., a research organization of over 400 life insurance companies.

Feature Spot On Adhesive To Bandicoot

A rabbit bandicoot, a rabbit that looks like a small kangaroo, will be featured on a new stamp by Australia. Postmaster General Davidson announced the new 11 pence stamp was issued May 3.

This new stamp will be used for letters and items within that country's "third weight unit" for addresses in Australia and overseas where British Commonwealth rates apply. It will also cover combined charges for certified mail.



The design was the work of Miss Eileen Mayo of Neutral Bay, N. S. W., whose esigns were also used for other stamps in the current fauna series.

The Australian Post Office also announced that later this year it will issue a stamp commemorating the centenary of the birth of Dame Nellie Melba, one of the world's great singers. Dame Nellie was born in Melbourne in 1861.

The United Arab Republic reports it will issue a new stamp (release date unknown) to mark the completion of the "Tower of Cairo," highest man-made structure in the Middle East. It will be a 10 millieme blue green commemorative and will feature the Tower which is on the island of Giziereh in the Nile between Cairo and Giza. The Tower was scheduled to open on April 1 but there have been many delays in the construction, claims the U.A.R.

The United States received several awards in the recently held stamp exhibition which took place in Barcelona, Spain. Several U.S. officials including Postmaster General J. Edward Day were on hand to receive the awards. Also recipients of special awards were His Eminence Francis Cardinal Spellman and Jacques Minkus for Minkus Publications. Minkus served as the U. S. Commissioner for the exhibition.

The superb British West Indies collection of the late T. Charlton Henry of Chestnut Hill, Pa., realized $231,249 in a seven-session auction held by Harmer, Rooke & Co. in New York City. Counting the earlier portion of this collection, the total sale was $418,249. It is interesting to note that the stamps sold in this auction sold as their catalog value. Despite the fact that the stamp material was British, the prices were higher than if they had been sold at auction in England.

The previously announced commemorative set by Vatican City honoring Pope Leo the Great will have a common design. It will feature a reproduction of a marble bas relief in St. Peter's Basilica showing St. Leo defying Attila. The values will be 15 lire, 70 lire and 300 lire.

More Stops On Overseas Air Journey

The vacationer heading overseas by air this summer can cram a lot more foreign stops into his trip than he might realize — and without adding anything to transportation costs.

For example, a person planning to jump off from New York to Rome can get a peek behind the Iron Curtain — in Prague — as well as stops in Glasgow, Copenhagen, Berlin, and Vienna, for the same price as a direct New York to Rome ticket, which, incidentally, is $620.30 round trip on a jet in economy class. That routing is via Scandinavian Airlines System (SAS).

STOP OFF

A traveler from Miami to Tel Aviv can stop off at the Bahamas, in Canada, Glasgow, Copenhagen, Warsaw, Budapest, Istanbul, Ankara and Nicosia before arriving at the Israeli city. A more conventional routing, which doesn't include so many extra stop - overs, probably would be from Miami to New York to London to Tel Aviv.

The privilege of stopping at extra cities, without having to pay any extra fare, isn't a secret in the travel industry, but still the fact that it can be done isn't known to the bulk of travelers.

It's all based on the mileage system set up by the International Air Transport Association (IATA), to which most major international air carriers belong.

IATA allows a traveler 15 per cent more mileage between two given points than the direct mileage between them. For example, the allowable mileage on a New York to Rome ticket is 4,958, while the direct routing mileage is only 4,266. That allows the stop - over in Prague and the other non - direct route cities.

New York to London, with stopovers in Glasgow and Manchester, on British Overseas Airways Corp. (BOAC). And New York to Rome via Frankfurt on the same line.

Other New York to Rome itineraries could include Paris, Bordeaux, Lyon, Marseille, Nice and Milan; or Paris, Barcelona, Nice and Milan. Either itinerary, which is via Air France, also could include a stop in London.

A New York to Tel Aviv trip allows stops in Paris, Prague, Warsaw, Budapest; Belgrade, Sophia and Athens.

Going to the other side of the world, a traveler in a hurry to get to Hong Kong might go from Seattle to Tokyo, and then directly in to Hong Kong. But one with more time and a yen to see more of the Far East could take a Northwest Airlines routing that would include both Manila and Formosa, and Okinawa as well if permission can be secured to visit that island.

ANOTHER ROUTING

Another routing to Hong Kong could include Hawaii.

For the Latin America - bound vacationer, there are numerous extra cities — many of them the little - visited places that haven't been overrun by tourists.

It's possible to include stops in Jamaica, and Barranquilla, Cartegena and Medellin, Colombia, on a New York to Bogota ticket on Avianca.

A traveler heading to Buenos Aires on Panagra can stop in Panama, Quito, Lima, Sanitiago and several other cities southbound, and swing back to New York via an East Coast route that could include Sao Paulo, Rio de Janeiro and Caracas.

On another airline, Varig, a vacation visit to Rio also can include stop - overs in tropcial Belem and these other Brazilian cities, Sao Luiz, Fortaleza, Recife and Salvador.

And on new BOAC service to Lima, a traveler can include a vacation in the Bahamas at the same fare.

Although the above are specific examples on various airlines' routes of extra cities at the same fare as flying direct, there is an infinite number of combinations on any of the American - flag or foreign - flag airlines flying international routes.

With a bit of figuring, or help from a travel or airline agent, a lot more foreign stops can be included at no extra cost than a traveler realizes.

Stocks Rebound With Vigor As Market Climbs

NEW YORK (UPI)—Stocks rebounded with vigor this week following a simmering down of the adverse influences which depressed the market a week earlier.

There was renewed confidence that the worst might just be over. The second quarter looked better all round: Steel output was at an 11-month high and headed higher, auto and retail sales were up and unemployment was down slightly more than seasonal.

Friday produced the successful space shot but the effort only spurred electronic stocks, early market jubilation giving way to pre-weekend profit-taking in other segments of the list.

Many encouraging gains centered in the blue chip group and cyclical stocks which respond to swings in the economy. Most of these comprise the Dow-Jones industrial average which rose 11.96 points to close at 690.67, or about 6 points below the all-time high.

PAUL MARTIN LOOKS 'EM OVER

Gulf States Conference Meets Here

Northeast Louisiana State rolls out the welcome carport for the Gulf States Conference in four days of activity that will cap a school year of athletic conquests with track and field, golf and tennis championships high on the list.

The program opens Wednesday but the spectator part of the week's activity doesn't get going until Thursday when the tennis and golf tournaments begin. Track occupies the spotlight Saturday, and a special program is being prepared for presentation of conference championship trophies for winners in all Gulf States sports.

The golf and tennis championships will be determined in two days of play, Thursday and Friday, and even the coaches and conference officials get into the act with an 18-hole golf tournament all their own Friday.

Track and field events, plus a general conference meeting, feature Saturday's program. There will be morning and night sessions for the spikemen with presentation of the year's athletic team awards figuring in the night's track program.

Ed Whatley, Northeast, president of the Gulf States Conference, and Rank Rolufs, secretary and treasurer, will handle presentation of awards on the Saturday night show.

About half the award winners are already known—like Louisiana Tech and Southeastern as co-champions in football. Northeast State as 'cross country ruler; McNeese State as king of basketball; and the "coach of the year" awards that go to Stanley Galloway, Southeastern, for football, and Ralph Ward, McNeese, for basketball.

Team championships awaiting decision are in golf, tennis, baseball, and track. The coach of the year in baseball and track also await determination, plus the recepient of the All-Sports Trophy.

The beautiful plaque to the All-Sports winner goes to the school compiling the most points in team championship scoring.

With the points tallied so far coming only from football, cross country, and basketball, McNeese has a slight lead for the All-Sports award with 14½ points. Louisiana Tech and Northeast State are close with 12½ and 11 respectively.

Southwestern and Southeastern show nine and a half points each, and Northwestern has tallied seven. So, with points yet to be distributed according to the finish in golf, track, baseball, and tennis, this coveted plaque still could be claimed by just about any of them.

Bayou DeSiard Country Club will be the scene of the golf tournament with Coach Joe Aillet's fine array of Louisiana Tech linksmen as defending champions.

McNeese is defending its tennis throne on the Northeast courts, and the tennis Cowboys, like the golfing Bulldogs, are favored to repeat in defense of their crown.

The special awards program at Brown Field Saturday night will come between the finals in the field events and the finals in the track events. The "Quaens of the Gulff States Conference" will also be presented in this special show.

The conference program:

WEDNESDAY

7 p.m. — Dinner meeting tennis and golf for coaches; seeding and flight arrangement of tournaments. Paragon Club.

THURSDAY

8 a.m. — Tennis tournament opens, Northeast courts.

9 a.m. — Golf tournament begins at Bayou DeSiard Country Club.

FRIDAY

9 a.m. — Tennis tourney continues, Northeast courts; golf tourney progresses at BDCC.

1:30 p.m. — GSC coaches and officials 18-hole Callaway handicap golf tournament, BDCC.

Wayne Corkran To Newellton

If you were feeling sorry for Newellton when the Bears lost Coach Emory Pickett to Rayville's Hornets, you may feel a little better to learn Newellton High School has hired "a winner" from Arkansas.

E. A. "Jack" Poe, our Newellton correspondent, informs Principal Wallace Prather has reported Wayne Corkran, graduate of Northeast Louisiana State, has accepted the position vacated by Pickett's acceptance of the Rayville High job.

Corkran, who will coach football and track at the Tensas parish school, will leave Barton, Ark., where his teams have ruled the district 6-B conference by winning district titles in 1959 and again in 1960, his school becoming the first ever to win the district two consecutive years. Corkran was named "coach of the year" in Arkansas high schools last year, and was also named head coach of the East All-Stars for the annual Arkansas All-Star game.

Merle S. Webb, principal of Barton High School, declared, "Barton is losing a very fine coach. He not only teaches the basic fundamentals of football, but also instilled in our boys the idea that desire to play the game is just as important as the size of the players."

Coach Corkran graduated from Northeast State in 1955. He played football for Coach James L. Malove at Northeast in 1950-51-52, receiving "lineman of the year" awards for his performances with the Indians in '51 and '52.

He is married to the former Marvel Cheatham of Oak Grove. They have two children, Michael Wayne, age 5, and Iris Elizabeth, 4.

The Rebel Boys, their team personnel determined at their draft only the past week, are beginning club workouts now and it will be the first week of June before league play begins.

Angels Trip Yankees 5-3 On Homers

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Leon Wagner belted two homers and a run-scoring triple Saturday night as the Los Angeles Angels defeated the New York Yankees 5-3 and knocked them out of first place in the American League.

Albie Pearson also hit a homer for the Angels and the Yanks' Roger Maris hit the 100th of his major league career.

Twenty-one home runs have been hit in the last five games at Wrigley Field.

A crowd of 19,865, largest the Angels have drawn at home, watched former Yankee righthander Eli Grba go the distance for Los Angeles and pick up his second victory in four decisions. Grba allowed only six hits.

Art Ditmar went six innings for New York and gave up all five Angel runs, two of them unearned.

This was Wagner's second big game against Ditmar. In seven at bats against the Yankee righthander, Wagner has hit 3 home runs, 1 triple and 2 singles.

The Yanks picked up a run in the first inning on consecutive singles by Tony Kubek, Hector Lopez and Maris. But the Angels scored twice in the same inning with the help of Wagner's triple and an error by first baseman Bill Skowron.

Two walks and a single by Skowron put the Yanks ahead 2-1 in the third, but Pearson and Wagner both homered in the same inning. Wagner got his second homer three innings later.

The Yankees had won four straight and were in a first-place tie with the Detroit Tigers, who defeated Chicago earlier in the day.

BLOCKED PUNTS TELL TALE

Gold Beats Purple 6-2 In LSU Intra-Squad Tiff

By BOB ANDERSON

BATON ROUGE, La. (Special)—LSU Tiger gridders scored twice in their spring practice battle here Saturday night and both times they did it when the other side had the ball. The underdog Gold team got the most points from its defensive efforts and upset the Purple club, loaded with probable first stringers, 6-2.

STATISTICS

	Purple	Gold
First downs	11	10
Yards rushing Yards	131	[illegible]
Yards passing	19	43
Passes	5-16	5-12
Passes Int. by	[illegible]	2
Fumbles lost	[illegible]	[illegible]
Punting	7-39.9	6-35.3
Penalties	2-20	1-34

Blocked punts provided both scores. Sophomore back Ruffin Rodrigue barreled through to block a Jerry Stovall punt in the second period, picked up the bounding ball and ran 25 yards for the Gold touchdown. In the last minute of the first half, Tulane end Jerry Young blocked a Danny Neumann boot on the three. The ball bounced out of the end zone just ahead of pursuing Purple guard Malcolm Hodnett and went as a safety.

Viewed by an estimated 10,000 fans, the game's second half was simply more defense. The Goldsters threatened in the third, going to the Purple 14 but a field goal try by Tommy Neck was wild. The Purple squad ground as far as the Gold 12 early in the fourth period before Larose sophomore Ronald Pere intercepted a Jimmy Field pass at the two to end the threat. The Purple made it to the Gold 29 later in the game but Field was thrown for an 11-yard loss trying to pass and the drive rallied.

If defense dominated the game, it wasn't because the Tigers didn't go for broke often enough. The teams ran 29 plays in the first quarter and passed on 10 of them. The Golds ended up throwing 14 times and the Purples, 15.

The losing Purple team ended up with a slight statistical advantage, picking up 11 first downs to 10 for the Gold and gaining 200 yards to 155 for the winners.

The Bengals, who closed the 1960 season with four straight victories, unveiled several promising newcomers. Sophomore guard Robbie Hucklebridge of the Golds, the former Bossier fullback and tackle, was a defensive standout all night while another former Bossier star, Johnny Mercer, was the top ground gainer of the evening for the Purple squad with 34 yards. Former Tallulah all-stater Danny Neumann averaged 42.4 yards on five punts. He and old standby Jerry Stovall, who averaged 42.3 yards on three boots, will give LSU Coach Paul Dietzel the pleasant problem of choosing between two great punters next fall.

Stovall aggravated a bruised leg suffered in practice earlier last week and saw action only in the first half. He carried the ball three times for 10 yards.

Homer flash Ray Wilkins was the Gold team's top ground gainer with 35 yards. Dwight Robinson, a Ponchatoula Red-shirt, passed 12 times for the Golds for 4 connections and 26 yards. Jimmy Field, who began the 1960 season as the No. 1 Tiger quarterback, passed 14 times for the white-clad Purples and hit on five for 56 yards. Stovall threw once for 13 yards.

Neither team got out of its own territory until late in the first period when ex-Thibodaux fullback Ruffin Rodrigue intercepted a pass by Purple quarterback Jimmy Field at the Purple 47. Ray Wilkins powered the Gold offense with several good gains, reeling off 12 yards on one end sweep.

Wilkins gained five to the 12 on the second play of the second quarter and then Charles Cranford bulled to the 11 and Dwight Robinson passed to Tommy Neck for five yards to the six. But Robinson was rushed badly while trying to pass on the next play, fumbled and recovered himself back on the 17. With fourth and 16 at that point, Neck tried and missed a field goal.

Midway of the second, the Purples stalled at their 29 and Stovall put a foot to a 42-yard beauty that Thomas returned to the Gold 44. The Golds were offside, however, and the Purple aggregation made the unwise decision to take the penalty and punt over.

Rodrigue barreled through, blocked the punt, picked the bouncing ball on the 25 and sped unharried into the end zone to give the underdog Golds a 6-0 lead with 8:04 left in the half.

Two plays later, the Golds were banging on the door again as Danny Neumann recovered a fumble by Johnny Mercer on the Purple 28.

Robinson threw a jump toss to Neumann for 12 yards on the next play. Derwood Thomas and Earl Gros moved the ball to the 7 from where Thomas went wide right for a first down on the six. But Stovall, who had been in on the previous three tackles, intercepted Robinson's jump pass on the three and returned to the nine to save the purples from further embarassment.

Stovall blasted a beautiful 54-yard punt late in the half which, combined with a 15-yard clipping RP, set the Golds back to their 13. Two plays later Neumann dropped back to punt from the three. Young charged in to block the kick and give the Purple lads their two points.

Taking over on their 30, the Purple squad, thanks to some artful bootlegging by Field, threatened in the fourth.

Field gained 14 yards and then 12 on bootleg plays, then passed 13 yards to Gene Sykes on another key play. The pass to Sykes put the ball on the 20 and Mercer bursts off tackle to the 12 before Pere picked off Field's pass on the 2 to end it. Nobody came close in the remaining minutes.

Bulldogs Sweep Pair From Pokes

LAKE CHARLES, La. (Special) Bulldogs added plenty of strength to their Gulf States Conference baseball lead yesterday sweeping past McNeese State in a doubleheader.

The Bulldogs won the first game 5-3 with a rally in the fifth and sixth innings, and eased to a 7-0 decision in the nitecap.

Tech went into the first game one tilt ahead of McNeese in the GSC race. The Bulldogs had a 13-3 mark and the Cowboys stood 10-6.

Tommy Mixon, Cowboy hurler in the opener held Tech hitless for the first three innings but got three men in the fifth inning.

Ron McNabb led off for Tech in the sixth inning with a solid hit to left field. Mixon walked George Garrett and Kelton Bacon drove in a run with a single. Jim Whitworth came in to pitch for McNeese at this point and Max Lewis pounded a run producing double off him.

Wendell Lorio then singled in two runs for Tech in a pinch hitter's role.

The Bulldogs bunched their runs in the second game with Ron McNabb, who got five hits all day, blasting three for three to lead the way. Fuller pitched a good game for Tech in the nitecap, hurling the shutout on a six-hitter.

Tigers Nearing Title In SWAC Baseball Race

GRAMBLING, La. (Special) — The Grambling Tigers moved a step nearer to the SWAC baseball crown Saturday with twin victories over the Texas College Steers.

Grambling clubbed the visitors, 8-0, and 7-4, and came out of the series snorting at loop foes in disdain with a 15-2 conference record.

The Tigers befuddled the Texans, 17-1 Friday.

President - coach W. E. Jones tried to dispel optimism late Saturday by pointing out the ghoulish quality of his injury riddled squad, but any way the subject was approached by fans, the same answer cropped up — Grambling looks like a lead-pipe cinch to grab the SWAC title.

The team closes out its season here Wednesday and Thursday in a three-game series with Texas Southern University.

Second-place Southern University ended loop play Saturday with 10-0 and 8-2 victories over Wiley in Baton Rouge.

The Jaguars boast a 15-5 record and nobody but the coach and president fears Grambling has anything to fear of consequence.

Mermaid Winner

TEL AVIV, Israel, (AP)—Chris Von Saltza, the United States Olympic mermaid from Saratoga, Calif., easily won the women's 200-meter freestyle swim at the Hapoel Games Saturday. She was timed in 2 minutes, 25.5 seconds.

Comes From 11th Spot To Triumph

By JOHN F. CHANDLER

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Carrry Back, the little Florida-bred colt they said didn't have bloodlines to travel a mile and one quarter and win the Kentucky Derby, won the $163,000 Derby Saturday before a roaring crowd at ancient Churchill Downs.

With Johnny Sellers, the nation's leading rider in the saddle, Carry Back charged from 11th place after the first half mile, poured on the pressure in the last 80 yards and drew away to beat Fred W. Hooper's Crozier.

Mrs. Vera E. Smith's Bass Clef roared from last place in the field of fifteen 3-year-olds—the cream of the country's sophomore crop—to snatch third place.

Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs' Dr. Miller, another come from behind horse, raced up to get fourth money.

Carry Back, sporting the blue and silver hoops and sleeves of Mrs. Katherine Price of Miami, became the first favorite to win the great run for the roses since Needles, another Florida - bred colt, came from 16th place to capture the 1956 Derby.

The time on a track labeled "good" after Friday's all - day and all-night rain was 2:04 flat. This was considered a fair clocking since the track, which was drying out all day under a strong wind and partial sunshine, was on the sticky side.

It was the slowest time since Calumet Farm's Tim Tam required 2:05 on a muddy strip in winning the 1958 Derby.

Carry Back, in scoring by 1¼ lengths, did just as his owner had been telling the Louisville people and anyone else who would listen as he came home to capture first prize of $120,000 in the 87th running of the classic.

Crozier finished two lengths ahead of Bass Clef while Dr. Miller was another length behind.

The winner, a brown son of Saggy-Joppy, by Star Blen, returned $7 as the lukewarm favorite of the crowd estimated at the usual 100,000. He paid $4.20 to place and $3.20 to show.

Crozier, who was trying to win a second Derby for Hooper, of Coral Gables, Fla., was ridden by Braulio Baeza, and paid $4.60 and $4.20.

Bass Clef, with Ronnie Baldwin up, returned $5.60 to show for betting purposes. He was coupled in the field with Ronnie's Ace and Jay Fox which meant a bet on any of the three paid off.

The critics had been saying Carry Back was unfashionably bred principally because of his sire, Saggy. In 1948, Saggy upset Citation for his only defeat in 20 starts, but a few days later was humbled by the great Calumet triple crown champion in the Chesapeake Stakes at the old Havre DeGrace track in Maryland.

The field broke from the gate at the head of the long Churchill Downs stretch at 4:31 p.m., EST, with the Alberta Ranches Four-and-Twenty, ridden by Johnny Longden, sprinting into the lead.

Leonard P. Sasso's Globemaster raced right behind him and by the time they got to the finish line after a quarter-mile run, had taken over the lead.

As they dashed under the wire the first time, Four-and-Twenty, one of the two Canadian horses entered by Alberta Ranches, was running second, with Crozier third.

Emil A. Dietl's Dearborn was fourth, Jacnot Stable's Light Talk fifth and Robert Lehman's Ambiopoise was next while Sellers was biding his time with Carry Back.

The leaders dashed around the clubhouse turn much in this order with the crowd screaming in excitement.

Globemaster, who had led all the way in the Wood Memorial at Aqueduct April 22 in upsetting Carry Back, still paced the field as they swung into the back stretch with three-quarters of a mile to go. Carry Back had moved up only to 10th place.

Four-and-Twenty and Crozier were applying pressure on the leader.

Globemaster, ridden by Johnny Rotz, began to tire as he raced into the far turn with less than one-half mile to go, and Longden sent Four-and-Twenty around him to grab the lead. At this point Carry Back also was charging up on the outside.

By the time they hit the top of the stretch, where the race began, and with a mile run off, Four-and-Twenty had his head in front of Globemaster. It was three more lengths back to Crozier; and Carry Back, who was running sixth—about 14 lengths behind the leader.

As they straightened for home, Crozier assumed the lead with Four-and-Twenty in the runner-up spot and Bass Clef a surprise third. But Carry Back was rolling now.

He beat Crozier by a head in the Flamingo at Hialeah and the Florida Derby at Gulfstream but he didn't cut it quite so thin this time.

Sherluck, owned by Jacob Sher, was fifth, followed by Globemaster, and Four-and-Twenty. Flutterby, the other part of the Alberta Ranches entry, Eastwood Stable's Loyal Son; J. Graham Brown's On His Metal; Light Talk Ambiopoise; Clark and Radkovich's Ronnie's Ace; Dearborn and the Bra Burn Farm's Jay Fox were in that order at the finish.

The colts each carried 126 pounds.

The first quarter mile was run in :23 4-5; the half in :47 3-5; three-quarters in 1:11 2-5 and the mile in 1:36 1-5.

"They had me worried for a while," said the 24-year-old Sellers, who was born in Los Angeles and made his first appearance at Churchill Downs in 1955. In his only other Derby ride he finished sixth aboard Cuvier Relic in 1959.

New Mark Set In Governors

BOSTON (AP)—Dare Do Well, in a surprising front-running score set a track record in the $10,000-added Governor's Handicap at Suffolk Downs Saturday.

He raced 1 mile and 70 yards in 1:40 2-5, erasing Hi Delight's standard of 1:40 4-5 set April 22 this year.

Dare Do Well, a son of Prince Dare owned by Irving Sax of Brookline, Mass., finished a length ahead of Joe Cavegnano's King of Kentucky, who in turn held a three-quarter length advantage over the fast-closing Orleans Doge.

Gulf States Conference Meets Here

Northeast Louisiana State rolls out the welcome carport for the Gulf States Conference in four days of activity that will cap a school year of athletic conquests with track and field, golf and tennis championships high on the list.

The program opens Wednesday but the spectator part of the week's activity doesn't get going until Thursday when the tennis and golf tournaments begin. Track occupies the spotlight Saturday, and a special program is being prepared for presentation of conference championship trophies for winners in all Gulf States sports.

The golf and tennis championships will be determined in two days of play, Thursday and Friday, and even the coaches and conference officials get into the act with an 18-hole golf tournament all their own Friday.

Track and field events, plus a general conference meeting, feature Saturday's program. There will be morning and night sessions for the spikemen with presentation of the year's athletic team awards figuring in the night's track program.

Ed Whatley, Northeast, president of the Gulf States Conference, and Rank Rolufs, secretary and treasurer, will handle presentation of awards on the Uaturday night show.

About half the award winners are already known—like Louisiana Tech and Southeastern as co-champions in football, Northeast State as cross country ruler; McNeese State as king of basketball; and the "coach of the year" awards that go to Stanley Galloway, Southeastern, for football, and Ralph Ward, McNeese, for basketball.

Team championships awaiting decision are in golf, tennis, baseball, and track. The coach of the year in baseball and track also await determination, plus the recepient of the All-Sports Trophy.

The beautiful plaque to the All-Sports winner goes to the school compiling the most points in team championship scoring.

With the points tallied so far coming only from football, cross country, and basketball, McNeese has a slight lead for the All-Sports award with 13½ points. Louisiana Tech and Northeast State are close with 12½ and 11 respectively.

Southwestern and Southeastern show nine and a half points each, and Northwestern has tallied seven. So, with points yet to be distributed according to the finish in golf, track, baseball, and tennis, this coveted plaque still could be claimed by just about any of them.

Bayou DeSiard Country Club will be the scene of the golf tournament with Coach Joe Aillet's fine array of Louisiana Tech linksmen as defending champions.

McNeese is defending its tennis throne on the Northeast courts, and the tennis Cowboys, like the golfing Bulldogs, are favored to repeat in defense of their crown.

The special awards program at Brown Field Saturday night will come between the finals in the field events and the finals in the track events. The "Quaens of the Gulf States Conference" will also be presented in this special show.

The conference program:

WEDNESDAY

7 p.m. — Dinner meeting tennis and golf for coaches; seeding and flight arrangement of tournaments, Paragon Club.

THURSDAY

8 a.m. — Tennis tournament opens, Northeast courts.

9 a.m. — Golf tournament begins at Bayou DeSiard Country Club.

FRIDAY

Wayne Corkran To Newellton

If you were feeling sorry for Newellton when the Bears lost Coach Embry Pickett to Rayville's Hornets, you may feel a little better to learn Newellton High School has lured "a winner" from Arkansas.

E. A. "Jack" Poe, our Newellton correspondent, informs Principal Wallace Prather has reported Wayne Corkran, graduate of Northeast Louisiana State, has accepted the position vacated by Pickett's acceptance of the Rayville High job.

Corkran, who will coach football and track at the Tensas parish school, will leave Barton, Ark., where his teams have ruled the district 6-B conference by winning district titles in 1959 and again in 1960, his school becoming the first ever to win the district two consecutive years. Corkran was named "coach of the year" in Arkansas high schools last year, and was also named head coach of the East All-Stars for the annual Arkansas All-Star game.

Merle S. Webb, principal of Barton High School, declared, "Barton is losing a very fine coach. He not only teaches the basic fundamentals of football, but also instilled in our boys the idea that desire to play the game is just as important as the size of the players."

Coach Corkran graduated from Northeast State in 1955. He played football for Coach James L. Malone at Northeast in 1950-51-52, receiving "lineman of the year" awards for his performances with the Indians in '51 and '52.

He is married to the former Marvel Cheatham of Oak Grove. They have two children, Michael Wayne, age 5, and Iris Elizabeth, 4.

Boys' Baseball Programs

The baseball season is a week old for Little Boys of West Monroe, the Little Leagues and Dixie Leagues of Monroe begin official play within the week, and the Rebel Boys League.

Jack Hesketh, secretary of Monroe Little League, Inc., yesterday announced openers in the Monroe program. Tuesday will be Northside Dixie League; Thursday, it's Southside Dixie and Southside Little League; Friday, the new Eastside Little League goes into action; and Saturday the Northside Little League starts a fresh season.

Northside and Southside Little Boys Leagues of West Monroe have been playing for a week, and will have a two-week start on the new Westside League of West Monroe when it starts play Tuesday, May 16.

West Monroe will have its new Little Boys field ready for service next Saturday night when a special "park opening" is planned. All teams currently are playing on the North Seventh Street diamond. The new Westside League will play on both the North Seventh diamond and the new one in southern West Monroe as soon as it is ready.

The Rebel Boys, their team personnel determined at their draft only the past week, are beginning club workouts now and it will be the first week of June before league play begins.

Angels Trip Yankees 5-3 On Homers

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Leon Wagner belted two homers and a run-scoring triple Saturday night as the Los Angeles Angels defeated the New York Yankees 5-3 and knocked them out of first place in the American League.

Albie Pearson also hit a homer for the Angels and the Yanks' Roger Maris hit the 100th of his major league career.

Twenty-one home runs have been hit in the last five games at Wrigley Field.

A crowd of 19,865, largest the Angels have drawn at home, watched former Yankee righthander Eli Grba go the distance for Los Angeles and pick up his second victory in four decisions. Grba allowed only six hits.

Art Ditmar went six innings for New York and gave up all five Angel runs, two of them unearned.

This was Wagner's second big game against Ditmar. In seven at bats against the Yankee righthander, Wagner has hit 3 home runs, 1 triple and 2 singles.

The Yanks picked up a run in the first inning on consecutive singles by Tony Kubek, Hector Lopez and Maris. But the Angels scored twice in the same inning with the help of Wagner's triple and an error by first baseman Bill Skowron.

Two walks and a single by Skowron put the Yanks ahead 2-1 in the third, but Pearson and Wagner both homered in the same inning. Wagner got his second homer three innings later.

The Yankees had won four straight and were in a first-place tie with the Detroit Tigers, who defeated Chicago earlier in the day.

BLOCKED PUNTS TELL TALE

Gold Beats Purple 6-2 In LSU Intra-Squad Tiff

By BOB ANDERSON

BATON ROUGE, La. (Special)—LSU Tiger gridders scored twice in their spring practice battle here Saturday night and both times they did it when the other side had the ball. The underdog Gold team got the most points from its defensive efforts and upset the Purple club, loaded with probable first stringers, 6-2.

STATISTICS

	Purple	Gold
First downs	11	10
Yards rushink Yards	131
Yards passing	69	43
Passes	15-6	14-5
Passes Int. by	2	3
Fumbles lost	2	1
Punting	7-30.9	6-35.3
Penalties	2-20	4-34

Blocked punts provided both scores, sophomore back Ruffin Rodrigue barreled through to block a Jerry Stovall punt in the second period, picked up the bounding ball and ran 25 yards for the Gold touchdown. In the last minute of the first half, Urile end Jerry Young blocked a Danny Neumann boot on the three. The ball bounced out of the end zone just ahead of pursuing Purple guard Malcolm Hodnett and went as a safety.

Viewed by an estimated 10,000 fans, the game's second half was simply more defense. The Goldsters threatened in the third, going to the Purple 14 but a field goal try by Tommy Neck was wild. The Purple squad ground as far as the Gold 12 early in the fourth period before Larose sophomore Ronald Pere intercepted a Jimmy Field pass at the two to end the threat. The Purple made it to the Gold 29 later in the game but Field was thrown for an 11-yard loss trying to pass and the drive rallied.

If defense dominated the game, it wasn't because the Tigers didn't go for broke often enough. The teams ran 29 plays in the first quarter and passed on 10 of them. The Golds ended up throwing 14 times and the Purples, 15.

The losing Purple team ended up with a slight statistical advantage, picking up 11 first downs to 10 for the Gold and gaining 200 yards to 155 for the winners.

The Bengals, who closed the 1960 season with four straight victories, unveiled several promising newcomers. Sophomore guard Robbie Hucklebridge of the Golds, the former Bossier fullback and tackle, was a defensive standout all night while another former Bossier star, Johnny Mercer, was the top ground gainer of the evening for the Purple squad with 34 yards. Former Tallulah all-stater Danny Neumann averaged 42.4 yards on five punts. He and old standby Jerry Stovall, who averaged 42.3 yards on three boots, will give LSU Coach Paul Dietzel the pleasant problem of choosing between two great punters next fall.

Stovall aggravated a bruised leg suffered in practice earlier last week and saw action only in the first half. He carried the ball three times for 10 yards.

Homer flash Ray Wilkins was the Gold team's top ground gainer with 35 yards. Dwight Robinson, a Ponchatoula Redshirt, passed 12 times for the Golds for 4 connections and 26 yards. Jimmy Field, who began the 1960 season as the No. 1 Tiger quarterback, passed 14 times for the white-clad Purples and hit on five for 56 yards. Stovall threw once for 13 yards.

Neither team got out of its own territory until late in the first period when ex-Thibodaux fullback Ruffin Rodrigue intercepted a pass by Purple quarterback Jimmy Field at the Purple 47. Ray Wilkins powered the Gold offense with several good gains, reeling off 12 yards on one end sweep.

Wilkins gained five to the 12 on the second play of the second quarter and then Charles Cranford bulled to the 11 and Dwight Robinson passed to Tommy Neck for five yards to the six. But Robinson was rushed badly while trying to pass on the next play, fumbled and recovered himself back on the 17. With fourth and 16 at that point, Neck tried and missed a field goal.

Midway of the second, the Purples stalled at their 29 and Stovall put a foot to a 42-yard beauty that Thomas returned to the Gold 44. The Golds were offside, however, and the Purple aggregation made the unwise decision to take the penalty and punt over.

Rodrigue barreled through, blocked the punt, picked the bouncing ball on the 25 and sped unharried into the end zone to give the underdog Golds a 6-0 lead with 8:04 left in the half.

Two plays later, the Golds were banging on the door again as Danny Neumann recovered a fumble by Johnny Mercer on the Purple 28.

Robinson threw a jump toss to Neumann for 12 yards on the next play. Derwood Thomas and Earl Gros moved the ball to the 7 from where Thomas went wide right for a first down on the six. But Stovall, who had been in on the previous three tackles, intercepted Robinson's jump pass on the three and returned to the nine to save the purples from further embarassment.

Stovall blasted a beautiful 54-yard punt late in the half which, combined with a 15-yard clipoing RP, set the Golds back to their 13. Two plays later Neumann dropped back to punt from the three. Young charged in to block the kick and give the Purple lads their two points.

Taking over on their 30, the Purple squad, thanks to some artful bootlegging by Field, threatened in the fourth.

Field gained 14 yards and then 12 on bootleg plays, then passed 13 yards to Gene Sykes on another key play. The pass to Sykes put the ball on the 20 and Mercer burts off tackle to the 12 before Pere picked off Field's pass on the 2 to end it. Nobody came close in the remaining minutes.

Bulldogs Sweep Pair From Pokes

LAKE CHARLES, La. (Special) Bulldogs added plenty of strength to their Gulf States Conference baseball lead yesterday sweeping past McNeese State in a double-header.

The Bulldogs won the first game 5-3 with a rally in the fifth and sixth innings, and eased to a 7-0 decision in the nitecap.

Tech went into the first game one tilt ahead of McNeese in the GSC race. The Bulldogs had a 13-3 mark and the Cowboys stood 10-6.

Tommy Mixon, Cowboy hurler in the opener held Tech hitless for the first three innings but got three men in the fifth inning.

Ron McNabb led off for Tech in the sixth inning with a solid hit to left field, Mixon walked George Garrett and Kelton Bacon drove in a run with a single. Jim Whitworth came in to pitch for McNeese at this point and Max Lewis pounded a run producing double off him.

Wendell Lorio then singled in two runs for Tech in a pinch hitter's role.

The Bulldogs bunched their runs in the second game with Ron McNabb, who got five hits all day, blasting three for three to lead the way. Fuller pitched a good game for Tech in the nitecap, getting the shutout on a six-hitter.

Tigers Nearing Title In SWAC Baseball Race

GRAMBLING, La. (Special) — The Grambling Tigers moved a step nearer to the SWAC baseball crown Saturday with twin victories over the Texas College Steers.

Grambling clubbed the visitors, 8-0, and 7-4, and came out of the series snorting at loop foes in disdain with a 15-2 conference record.

The Tigers befuddled the Texans, 17-1 Friday.

President - coach W. E. Jones tried to dispel optimism late Saturday by pointing out the ghoulish quality of his injury riddled squad, but any way the subject was approached by fans, the same answer cropped up — Grambling looks like a lead-pipe cinch to grab the SWAC title.

The team closes out its season here Wednesday and Thursday in a three-game series with Texas Southern University.

Second-place Southern University ended loop play Saturday with 10-0 and 8-2 victories over Wiley in Baton Rouge.

The Jaguars boast a 15-5 record and nobody but the coach and president fears Grambling has anything to fear of consequence.

Mermaid Winner

TEL AVIV, Israel, (AP)—Chris Von Saltza, the United States Olympic mermaid from Saratoga, Calif., easily won the women's 200-meter freestyle swim at the Hapoel Games Saturday. She was timed in 2 minutes, 25.5 seconds.

Carry Back Captures Derby

Comes From 11th Spot To Triumph

By JOHN F. CHANDLER

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Carrry Back, the little Florida-bred colt they said didn't have bloodlines to travel a mile and one quarter and win the Kentucky Derby, won the $163,000 Derby Saturday before a roaring crowd at ancient Churchill Downs.

With Johnny Sellers, the nation's leading rider in the saddle, Carry Back charged from 11th place after the first half mile, poured on the pressure in the last 80 yards and drew away to beat Fred W. Hooper's Crozier.

Mrs. Vera E. Smith's Bass Clef roared from last place in the field of fifteen 3-year-olds—the cream of the country's sophomore crop—to snatch third place.

Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs' Dr. Miller, another come from behind horse, raced up to get fourth money.

Carry Back, sporting the blue and silver hoops and sleeves of Mrs. Katherine Price of Miami, became the first favorite to win the great run for the roses since Needles, another Florida-bred colt, came from 16th place to capture the 1956 Derby.

The time on a track labeled "good" after Friday's all-day and all-night rain was 2:04 flat. This was considered a fair clocking since the track, which was drying out all day under a strong wind and partial sunshine, was on the sticky side.

It was the slowest time since Calumet Farm's Tim Tam required 2:05 on a muddy strip in winning the 1958 Derby.

Carry Back, in scoring by 1¾ lengths, did just as his owner had been telling the Louisville people and anyone else who would listen as he came home to capture first prize of $120,000 in the 87th running of the classic.

Crozier finished two lengths ahead of Bass Clef while Dr. Miller was another length behind.

The winner, a brown son of Saggy-Joppy, by Star Blen, returned $7 as the lukewarm favorite of the crowd estimated at the usual 100,000. He paid $4.20 to place and $3.20 to show.

Crozier, who was trying to win a second Derby for Hooper, of Coral Gables, Fla., was ridden by Braulio Baeza, and paid $4.60 and $4.20.

Bass Clef, with Ronnie Baldwin up, returned $5.60 to show for betting purposes. He was coupled in the field with Ronnie's Ace and Jay Fox which meant a bet on any of the three paid off.

The critics had been saying Carry Back was unfashionably bred principally because of his sire, Saggy. In 1948, Saggy upset Citation for his only defeat in 20 starts, but a few days later was humbled by the great Calumet triple crown champion in the Chesapeake Stakes at the old Havre DeGrace track in Maryland.

The field broke from the gate at the head of the long Churchill Downs stretch at 4:31 p.m., EST, with the Alberta Ranches Four-and-Twenty, ridden by Johnny Longden, sprinting into the lead.

Leonard P. Sasso's Globemaster raced right behind him and by the time they got to the finish line after a quarter-mile run, had taken over the lead.

As they dashed under the wire the first time, Four-and-Twenty, one of the two Canadian horses entered by Alberta Ranches, was running second, with Crozier third.

Emil A. Dust's Dearborn was fourth, Jacnot Stable's Light Talk fifth and Robert Lehman's Ambiopoise was next while Sellers was biding his time with Carry Back.

The leaders dashed around the clubhouse turn much in this order with the crowd screaming in excitement.

Globemaster, who had led all the way in the Wood Memorial at Aqueduct April 22 in upsetting Carry Back, still paced the field as they swung into the back stretch with three-quarters of a mile to go. Carry Back had moved up only to 10th place.

Four-and-Twenty and Crozier were applying pressure on the leader.

Globemaster, ridden by Johnny Rotz, began to tire as he raced into the far turn with less than one-half mile to go, and Longden sent Four-and-Twenty around him to grab the lead. At this point Carry Back also was charging up on the outside.

By the time they hit the top of the stretch, where the race began, and with a mile run off, Four-and-Twenty had his head in front of Globemaster. It was three more lengths back to Crozier; and Carry Back, who was running sixth—about 14 lengths behind the leader.

As they straightened for home, Crozier assumed the lead with Four-and-Twenty in the runner-up spot and Bass Clef a surprise third. But Carry Back was rolling now.

He beat Crozier by a head in the Flamingo at Hialeah and the Florida Derby at Gulfstream but he didn't cut it quite so thin this time.

Sherluck, owned by Jacob Sher, was fifth, followed by Globemaster, and Four-and-Twenty. Flutterby, the other part of the Alberta Ranches entry, Eastwood Stable's Loyal Son; J. Graham Brown's On His Metal; Light Talk Ambiopoise; Clark and Radkovich's Ronnie's Ace; Dearborn and the Bra Burn Farm's Jay Fox were in that order at the finish.

The colts each carried 126 pounds.

The first quarter mile was run in :23 4-5; the half in :47 3-5; three-quarters in 1:11 2-5 and the mile in 1:36 1-5.

"They had me worried for a while," said the 24-year-old Sellers, who was born in Los Angeles and made his first appearance at Churchill Downs in 1955. In his only other Derby ride he finished sixth aboard Cuvier Relic in 1959.

New Mark Set In Governors

BOSTON (AP)—Dare Do Well, in a surprising front-running score set a track record in the $10,000-added Governor's Handicap at Suffolk Downs Saturday.

He raced 1 mile and 70 yards in 1:40 2-5, erasing Hi Delight's standard of 1:40 4-5 set April 22 this year.

Dare Do Well, a son of Prince Dare owned by Irving Sax of Brookline, Mass., finished a length ahead of Joe Cavegnano's King of Kentucky, who in turn held a three-quarter length advantage over the fast-closing Orleans Doge.

Earnest Ladd Accepts Offer For Star Tilt

GRAMBLING, La. (Special) — Earnest Ladd, 285-pound Grambling College tackle, has accepted an invitation to join the All-Star Football squad for the annual tilt against the National Football League champions in Chicago Aug. 4.

Ladd, a 6-9 giant, is a star defensive man who would be conspicuous even if he weren't one of the country's finest linemen.

Fast and nimble for his bulk, the Orange, Texas native specializes in knocking blockers into the laps of men they are assigned to protect.

He was named to numerous all-American teams last fall and later received a bonus in excess of $2,500 and a no-cut two-year contract assuring him five-figure salaries with the San Diego Chargers of the American Football league.

The College All-Stars will be coached by Otto Graham, former Cleveland Brown quarterback.

New Scout

CHICAGO (AP) — Les Moss, for 12 years an American League catcher and this spring a coach in the Chicago White Sox major and minor league camps in Florida, Saturday was signed as a scout for the club. At present he will work out of Chicago, covering colleges and high schools in the midwest.

Angela Wins

LONDON (AP) — Angela Mortimer won another British hard court tennis trophy Saturday defeating Christine Truman 6-2, [illegible] in the final of the London championships.

Northeast To Have Morrow For Banquet

The banquet, honoring the track, golf, tennis, and baseball teams, is scheduled for 7 p.m. in Gunby Hall on campus.

Morrow, the conqueror of virtually every major sprint title in existence, won three gold medals in the 1956 Olympics in Melbourne, Australia.

On June 15, 1957, Morrow clocked a non-wind-aided 9.3 at the NCAA championship preliminaries in Austin, Tex., for an official share of the world's 100-yard dash record. As a college freshman, he turned in a wind-aided 9.1 100-yard dash.

Morrow also holds the world's record of 20.6 for the 200 meter dash around one curve, giving him a share of five world standards.

Morrow's college career at Abilene Christian College was climaxed by winning 11 national sprint championships. His coach at Abilene Christian, Oliver Jackson, says, "His success came from the inherited power in his legs combined with a desire to win, power to concentrate and the ability to relax."

Morrow, somewhat of an inventor, has made a "kick-gauge" which tells the athlete how much power he gets off his back leg and he has invented a wind-track meter to measure the wind behind the runners.

Tiger Spring Grid Shorts

TIGER STADIUM, BATON ROUGE, La. — Top defender for the winning Gold team in Saturday night's LSU spring football game was soph guard Robbie Hucklebridge, credited with five unassisted tackles and six assists. Fullback Steve Ward was high for the Purple team with six tackles and four assists.

Ex-Neville prep all-America lineman, Mickey Cox, kicked off for the Purple team to start the game and was in on three tackles. Another former Neville player, Lucian Branch, also saw action for the Purple club. Branch, an all-State center at Neville, has been switched to fullback here.

West Monroe's all-America candidate, Jerry Stovall, turned in his usual excellent game, both on offense and defense. He was in on four tackles and picked up one interception.

Tallulah's Danny Neumann, in addition to his fine punting, picked up nine yards in four carries for the Golds. Neumann was redshirted last fall. His brother, Tommy Neumann, was manager of the Purple squad.

LSU's star quarterback, Lynn Amedee, did not participate in the spring game. Amedee is a member of the LSU baseball team, champions of the Southeastern conference's western division, along with star guard Roy Winston and center Lester Mitas.

Halfback Wendall Harris sat out the spring game with injuries along with soph center Remi Prudhomme. Halfback Bo Campbell, former Byrd speedster, is with the Bengal track team and did not participate in the grid drills.

Lions Take Two From Demons

HAMMOND, La. (AP)—Southeastern Louisiana backed tight pitching with lusty batting support and swept a Gulf States Conference twin bill from Northwestern State 7-3 and 13-0 Saturday.

The double victory set a school record for season victories for SLC, now 21-12 this year. The former mark of 20 was set in 1957 and 1958. SLC, third in the conference, now has a 12-6 GSC mark.

Roland Oubre pitched 3-hit ball in the nightcap and C. J. Payne hurled a 5-hitter in the opener. Oubre had a no-hitter going until the sixth. SLC batters collected a total of 19 hits in the games.

EAGLES HERE WEDNESDAY

Neville To Face Menard Monday

Charles Brown's Neville Tigers, after sewing up their bi-district title with a hard earned win over Minden Wednesday, journey to Alexandria tomorrow to begin a best-of-three state semifinal series with powerful Menard, last year's state king.

The Eagles, who had won nine straight state playoff games over the past two seasons before Opelousas upset the wagon in the second game of their playoff series, have what they believe is a real fireballer in pitcher Jerry Merritt.

Menard whipped Opelousas, 5-0 in the first game of their series, then fell by 7-3 to the Tigers, and won the final tilt that put them into the semifinals by dumping the Tigs, 8-6.

Menard supporters believe Merritt is doing a good job of filling the vacant shoes of last year's great Bob Rachal and the Eagle hurler had racked up a total of 40 scoreless innings against opponents' bats after the first game with Opelousas.

Neville thrives on power hitting and good pitching. The Tigers can call upon almost any player on the team in the clutch and the curve balling of Herschel Walker or the fast balling of Neal Gunn to make a hard-earned victory stick.

Probable starters for Neville in Alexandria tomorrow are Sperry Brown at first base, Joey McGinn at second, Robert Payne at third, Joe Canal at shortstop, Randy Fallin in left field, Ralph Roberts in center and Herschel Walker in right. Neal Gunn will probably start on the hill.

Both the Tigers and the Menard Eagles can thank clutch hits for their spots in semifinal action. Neville's Robert Payne socked a home run that beat Minden, 1-0 in their final game, tripled in the winning runs in their game with Opelousas.

Following the game in Alexandria today Menard will invade Neville's field Wednesday at 12:15 for the one or two games needed to decide the semifinal series. The Eagles insisted on the early 12:15 game time Wednesday because they are having their athletic banquet and junior-senior prom that night. Slugging Eddie Kincaid leads the Tiger hitters with a .388 average, followed by Joey McGinn with .365, Sperry Brown with .357, and Robert Payne with .352.

Braves-Reds To Make-Up Called Game Today

MILWAUKEE (AP)—The game between the Cincinnati Reds and the Milwaukee Braves was postponed Saturday because of rain. The Braves immediately rescheduled the rainout as part of a doubleheader Sunday.

Managers Charlie Dressen of Milwaukee and Fred Hutchinson of Cincinnati decided to go along with their original pitching plans. Warren Spahn and Don Nottebart will hurl for the Braves and Jim O'Toole and Ken Hunt for the Reds.

TRIBE SPLITS

Rachal Hurls No-Hitter Against Southwestern 6-1

LAFAYETTE, La. (Special) Northeast's Bob Rachel, a freshman righthander from Alexandria, soared to dizzy heights on the mound here yesterday as he pitched the Indians past Southwestern University on a 6-1 no-hitter in the first game of a doubleheader.

Southwestern turned it into a day of sparkling pitching to win the nightcap on the three-hit work of Larry Bacque 6-2.

So thoroughly did Rachal thwart the Bulldogs in the opener that only five men got on base and four of these came in the sixth inning when his chance for a shutout was ruined on a balk with the bases loaded.

The split left Southwestern holding a 11-20 season record and 6-10 against conference opponents, ranking fifth in current standards.

Northeast remained one notch ahead, in fourth place with a 7-9 mark. Season-wise they are 9-13.

Batting laurels in the lid-litter went to Indian first sacker George Bryant who belted a two-run homer in the first inning. He returned in the third with a single to plate Rachal, who reached base on a one-bagger.

Bacque handcuffed Northeast in the second game, after allowing left fielder Donnie Brunson to homer in the fourth with no one on and catcher Bo-Dick Smith to score in the fifth. Smith came across on a fielding error after doubling.

Canine rightfielder J. Y. Mula paced a nine-hit assault on two Redskin twirlers. Mula connected for a double and single and scored once.

First sacker Pat Richard slashed out a two-run homer in the second that put USL in front to stay.

Bobby Caldwell started for the Indians only to be relieved by Bobby Lockwood after three and one-third innings. He gave up five runs on an equal number of hits.

Bobby Lockwood came on then and successfully curbed the fire, allowing five more hits in the remaining frames but only one more run.

LIONS, REBS CLOSE

Fair Park Wins Dubach Tourney

In the quarterfinals Dubach edged Ouachita, 4-3. The host team jumped into a 3-1 lead on the Lions in the first inning, Ouachita pulled to within 4-3 after two and couldn't catch up. Brown and Davis were the battery for Dubach, while Ramsey Causey handled Ouachita's pitching and Cowboy Warner was the catcher.

West Monroe, with Butch McMillan hurling a sparkling no-hitter, blasted Lisbon, 8-0, yesterday before falling to Fair Park 6-0 in the last game.

Earnest Ladd Accepts Offer For Star Tilt

GRAMBLING, La. (Special) — Earnest Ladd, 285-pound Grambling College tackle, has accepted an invitation to join the All-Star Football squad for the annual tiff against the National Football League champions in Chicago Aug. 4.

Fast and nimble for his bulk, the Orange, Texas native specializes in knocking blockers into the laps of men they are assigned to protect.

He was named to numerous all- American teams last fall and later received a bonus in excess of $2,500 and a no-cut two-year contract assuring him five-figure salaries with the San Diego Chargers of the American Football league.

The College All-Stars will be coached by Otto Graham, former Cleveland Brown quarterback.

New Scout

CHICAGO (AP)—Les Moss, for 12 years an American League catcher and this spring a coach in the Chicago White Sox major and minor league camps in Florida, Saturday was signed as a scout for the club. At present he will work out of Chicago, covering colleges and high schools in the midwest.

Angela Wins

LONDON (AP) — Angela Mortimer won another British hard court tennis trophy Saturday defeating Christine Truman 6-2, 7-5 in the final of the London championships.

Northeast To Have Morrow For Banquet

The banquet, honoring the track, golf, tennis and baseball teams, is scheduled for 7 p.m. in Gunby Hall on campus.

Morrow, the conqueror of virtually every major sprint title in existence, won three gold medals in the 1956 Olympics in Melbourne Australia.

On June 15, 1957, Morrow clocked a non-wind-aided 9.3 at the NCAA championship preliminaries in Austin, Tex., for an official share of the world's 100-yard dash record. As a college freshman, he turned in a wind-aided 9.1 100-yard dash.

Morrow also holds the world's record of 20.6 for the 200 meter dash around one curve, giving him a share of five world standards.

Morrow's college career at Abilene Christian College was highlighted by winning 14 national sprint championships. His coach at Abilene Christian, Oliver Jackson, says, "His success came from the inherited power in his legs combined with a desire to win, power to concentrate and the ability to relax."

Morrow, somewhat of an inventor, has made a "kick-gauge" which tells the athlete how much power he gets off his back leg and he has invented a "wind-track meets to measure the wind behind the runners.

Tiger Spring Grid Shorts

Ex-Neville prep all - America lineman, Mickey Cox, kicked off for the Purple team to start the game and was in on three tackles. Another former Neville player, Lucian Branch, also saw action for the Purple club. Branch, as all-State center at Neville, has benn switched to fullback here.

West Monroe's all-America candidate, Jerry Stovall, turned in his usual excellent game, both on offense and defense. He was in on four tackles and picked up one interception.

Tallulah's Danny Neumann, in addition to his fine punting, picked up nine yards in four carries for the Golds. Neumann was redshirted last fall. His brother, Tommy Neumann, was manager of the Purple squad.

LSU's star quarterback, Lynn Amedee, did not participate in the spring game. Amedee is a member of the LSU baseball team, champions of the Southeastern conference's western division, along with star guard Roy Winston and center Lester Mitts.

Halfback Wendall Harris sat out the spring game with injuries along with soph center Remi Prudhomme. Halfback Bo Campbell, former Byrd speedster, is with the Bengal track team and did not participate in the grid drills.

EAGLES HERE WEDNESDAY

Neville To Face Menard Monday

Charles Brown's Neville Tigers, after sewing up their bi-district title with a hard - earned win over Minden Wednesday, journey to Alexandria tomorrow to begin a best-of-three state semifinal series with powerful Menard, last year's state king.

The Eagles, who had won nine straight state playoff games over the past two seasons before Opelousas upset the wagon in the second game of their playoff series, have what they believe is a real fireballer in pitcher Jerry Merritt.

Menard whipped Opelousas, 5-0 in the first game of their series, then fell by 7-3 to the Tigers, and won the final tilt that put them into the semifinals by dumping the Tigs, 8-6.

Menard supporters believe Merritt is doing a good job of filling the vacant shoes of last year's great Bob Rachal and the Eagle hurler had racked up a total of 40 scoreless innings against opponents' bats after the first game with Opelousas.

Neville thrives on power hitting and good pitching. The Tigers can call upon almost any player on the team in the clutch and the curve balling of Herschel Walker or the fast balling of Neal Gunn to make a hard - earned victory stick.

Probable starters for Neville in Alexandria tomorrow are Sperry Brown at first base, Joey McGinn at second; Robert Payne at third, Joe Canal at shortstop, Randy Fallin in left field, Ralph Roberts in center and Herschel Walker in right. Neal Gunn will probably start on the hill.

Both the Tigers and the Menard Eagles can thank clutch hits for their spots in semifinal action. Neville's Robert Payne socked a home run that beat Minden, 1-0 in their final game, tripled in the winning runs in their game with Opelousas.

Following the game in Alexandria today Menard will invade Neville's field Wednesday at 12:15 for the one or two games needed to decide the semifinal series. The Eagles insisted on the early 12:15 game time Wednesday because they are having their athletic banquet and junior - senior prom that night. Slugging Eddie Kincaid leads the Tiger hitters with a .388 average, followed by Joey McGinn with .365, Sperry Brown with .357, and Robert Payne with .352.

TRIBE SPLITS

Rachal Hurls No-Hitter Against Southwestern 6-1

LAFAYETTE, La. (Special) Northeast's Bob Rachel, a freshman righthander from Alexandria, soared to dizzy heights on the mound here yesterday as he pitched the Indians past Southwestern University on a 6-1 no-hitter in the first game of a doubleheader.

Southwestern turned it into a day of sparkling pitching to win the nightcap on the three - hit work of Larry Bacque 6-2.

So thoroughly did Rachal thwart the Bulldogs in the opener that only five men got on base and four of these came in the sixth inning when his chance for a shutout was ruined on a balk with the bases loaded.

The split left Southwestern holding a 11-20 season record and 6-10 against conference opponents, ranking fifth in current standards.

Northeast remained one notch ahead, in fourth place with a 7-9 mark. Season-wise they are 9-13.

Batting laurels in the lid-lifter went to Indian first sacker George Bryant who belted a two-run homer in the first inning. He returned in the third with a single to plate Rachal, who reached base on a one-bagger.

Bacque handcuffed Northeast in the second game, after allowing left fielder Donnie Brunson to homer in the fourth with no one on and catcher Bo-Dick Smith to score in the fifth. Smith came across on a fielding error after doubling.

Canine rightfielder J. Y. Mula paced a nine-hit assault on two Redskin twirlers. Mula connected for a double and single and scored once.

Bobby Caldwell started for the Indians only to be relieved by Bobby Lockwood after three and one-third innings. He gave up five runs on an equal number of hits.

Bobby Lockwood came on then and successfully curbed the fire, allowing five more hits in the remaining frames but only one more run.

LIONS, REBS CLOSE

Fair Park Wins Dubach Tourney

In the quarterfinals Dubach edged Ouachita, 4-3. The host team jumped into a 3-1 lead on the Lions in the first inning, Ouachita pulled to within 4-3 after two and couldn't catch up. Brown and Davis were the battery for Dubach, while Ramsey Causey handled Ouachita's pitching and Cowboy Warner was the catcher.

West Monroe, with Butch McMillan hurling a sparkling no-hitter, blasted Lisbon, 8-0, yesterday before falling to Fair Park 6-0 in the last game.

Tigers Outslug White Sox 11-8

CHICAGO (AP) — The Detroit Tigers, struggling from behind after blowing a five-run first inning lead, collected five of their 17 hits for three runs in the ninth Saturday to hand the Chicago White Sox their fifth straight loss, 11-8.

The front-running Tigers pecked away at seven Sox pitchers, disposing of starter Billy Pierce in the first inning after he had served consecutive singles and forced in two runs with three straight walks.

Detroit greeted Russ Kemmerer, Pierce's replacement, with a sacrifice fly and two singles as 10 Tigers went to bat in the five-run first.

The Sox came back in the first for four runs, led by rookie J.C. Martin's two-run homer, then went ahead 6-5 on Jim Landis' two-run blast in the third.

Chicago added another run in the sixth as Luis Aparicio doubled and scored on Chico Fernandez' bobble of Frank Baumann's grounder.

The Tigers, stretching a winning streak through three games, again took the lead, 8-7, with three runs in the eighth with the help of pinch hitter Bubba Morton's double, singles by Jake Wood and Rocky Colavito and a two-base throwing error by Martin.

Tiger Manager Bob Scheffing was ejected in the seven inning after Jim Landis made a backward, one-hand catch of Steve Boros' towering smash over the 415-foot marker on the center field bullpen fence.

Landis slid down to a sitting position with the ball in the webbing of his glove. Norm Cash, who had singled before Boros came up, was out at second when umpire Cal Rummond ruled he had failed to tag-up after the catch.

Tag-Teamers In Spotlight At Roll-Arena

Jim Quinn and Marco Polo team up tonight at Roll-Arena for a main event tag-team battle against Prince Omar and Tony Neopolitan.

Neopolitan and Ramsey didn't fare too well in the opener last week, however, as they tried in vain to gain some sort of victory over undefeated Victor, the 310-pound Canadian Black Bear.

Marco Polo and Prince Omar already have a score to settle in their part of the tag-team match tonight. Last week Polo was awarded a controversial decision over Omar.

In tonight's semifinal match Gene Bowman and Rod Rivera will meet in a two falls to win, hour time limit match. Bowman, a colorful wrestler, makes his return to Monroe after a leave of about six weeks.

In the 15-minute opener Quinn and Omar will warm up for their share of the main event.

Card's Rally In 6th Tops Chicago 6-1

ST. LOUIS (AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals scored four times in a sixth-inning uprising Saturday and trounced the Chicago Cubs 6-1 behind the 5-hit pitching of left-hander Ray Sadecki.

Aided by three double plays, Sadecki was credited with his second victory against one defeat. Jim Brewer, making his first start, was the loser. Brewer and Sadecki engaged in a tight pitching battle until the Cardinals found the batting range in the sixth.

Brewer was chased in that uprising, as was Joe Schaffernoth, his replacement.

Daryl Spencer singled and Charley James doubled for his third straight hit of the game to open the big inning. Don Taussig singled and Spencer scored but James was thrown out at home. Sadecki doubled off Schaffernoth, scoring Taussig, and rode himself on Julian Javier's single.

Mel Wright replaced Schaffernoth but yielded a run-scoring single to Don Landrum before the Cardinals were retired.

The 13-hit Cardinal attack was spearheaded by James' pair of doubles and single. Javier and Taussig also had three hits each.

The final run came in the eighth off Bob Anderson on a single by Taussig, a sacrifice and Javier's double.

Sadecki gave up only six walks in all but three of them came in a row in the fourth inning with only one out and the score tied at 1-1. Javier who topped the Cards' flawless defense, pulled him out of that jam by starting a snappy double play.

FIVE-RUN FIRST

Pirates Squash Los Angeles 9-5

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Pirates turned five hits and two Los Angeles errors into five runs in the first inning and coasted to a 9-5 triumph Saturday over the Dodgers.

Southpaw Joe Gibbon failed again in his quest to pitch his first complete major league game needing help from bullpen ace Elroy Face to quell a three-run Dodger rally in the eighth.

Gibbon, who beat the Dodgers earlier at Los Angeles, had struck out five and scattered four hits over seven innings until he ran into trouble in the eighth.

Wally Moon drove in four Dodger runs with a two-run homer in the fourth and a double in the eighth. The poke into the upper right field deck, his ninth, followed a triple by Maury Wills. It was Moon's first homer outside the Coliseum in Los Angeles.

Billy Virdon led the Pirates 13-hit attack with a triple and two singles.

Roberto Clemente and Billy Virdon got seven of the Pirates 13 hits between them. Clemente got three singles and a triple and Virdon pitched in with a triple and two singles.

Birds Shutout Kansas City Athletics 6-0

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Baltimore's Steve Barber, a young southpaw whose specialty is beating the Athletics, struck out 10 and pitched a five-hitter as the Orioles thumped Kansas City 6-0.

Jackie Brandt, who returned to the lineup after being out since April 25 with a leg injury, hit a lead-off home run in the first inning as the Orioles jumped on Ken Johnson for three runs.

Jim Archer closed out the inning and limited the Orioles to one run and three hits over the next six and a third innings. Ron Hansen doubled home the final two runs against Norm Bass in the eighth.

Barber, starting his second season in the majors, registered his fifth career victory over the Athletics who have never defeated him. The shutout was his second of the season, his first coming against the Minnesota Twins.

The Athletics advanced only one runner as far as third and never raised a strong scoring threat.

CHAMPIONS TOURNEY

Snead Gets Lead In Third Round

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Sam Snead took the lead in the $52,000 Tournament of Champions Saturday, capping the third round of the desert golf show with a spectacular 50-foot putt for a birdie on the 18th green.

It gave the 48-year-old slammer from West Virginia a 3-under-par 69, a 54-hole score of 204 and a fat lead of five strokes going into the final round Sunday.

Misfortune struck on several fronts. Most notably hit was popular Jay Heberg, the leader through the first two rounds. He took a 78 and dropped into a tie for sixth place.

Stan Leonard and Doug Ford, each with a 74, were deadlocked at 210. At 211 were Hebert and Billy Casper Jr.

A happy Snead trudged off the 18th green as the crowd, estimated at more than 11,000, gave him a rousing cheer after his sensational putt. For Sam, a big bust in three earlier appearances in this tournament, the putt was the big stroke of the bright afternoon.

Hebert wound up with a seven on the par 4 18th. The 32-year-old Lafayette, La., professional penalized himself when he banged his club to the ground in a trap in a fit of fury. It was a sad finale to two earlier sub-par performances.

Player, the Masters champion, started the day with a brilliant eagle three on the first hole, gained when he chipped a shot in from 30 yards out. But he closed out the round with a double bogey 6 on the 18th. His drive hit a bridge over the water hazard and sailed into the pond.

Another victim of lady luck's bad graces was U.S. Open champion Arnold Palmer. He had a fairly respectable 73 for 21 but on the 15th hole took an unbelievable nine, 4-over-par. His second shot went into a bunker to the left of the green and buried itself in the tall grass.

Palmer said with a sheepish grin:

"I just chopped and chopped until I got it out. Then I one-putted the green."

Workout Slated For Sports Here This Afternoon

Manager Vivian Pettit of the Monroe Sports has called a workout for his La-Ark Baseball League club here this afternoon at 3 o'clock on the Ouachita Parish High School diamond.

Squad turnouts have been light recently as Pettit awaits college talent that will bolster the team before the June season opener.

"College boys will help a lot when they get through with their college play and come home for the summer," Pettit said.

Tigers Outslug White Sox 11-8

CHICAGO (AP) — The Detroit Tigers, struggling from behind after blowing a five-run first inning lead, collected five of their 17 hits for three runs in the ninth Saturday to hand the Chicago White Sox their fifth straight loss, 11-8.

The front-running Tigers pecked away at seven Sox pitchers, disposing of starter Billy Pierce in the first inning after he had served consecutive singles and forced in two runs with three straight walks.

Detroit greeted Russ Kemmerer, Pierce's replacement, with a sacrifice fly and two singles as 10 Tigers went to bat in the five-run first.

The Sox came back in the first for four runs, led by rookie J.C. Martin's two-run homer, then went ahead 6-5 on Jim Landis' two-run blast in the third.

Chicago added another run in the sixth as Luis Aparicio doubled and scored on Chico Fernandez' bobble of Frank Baumann's grounder.

The Tigers, stretching a winning streak through three games, again took the lead, 8-7, with three runs in the eighth with the help of pinch hitter Bubba Morton's double, singles by Jake Wood and Rocky Colavito and a two-base throwing error by Martin.

Tiger Manager Bob Scheffing was ejected in the seven inning after Jim Landis made a backward, one-hand catch of Steve Boros' towering smash over the 415-foot marker on the center field bullpen fence.

Landis slid down to a sitting position with the ball in the webbing of his glove. Norm Cash, who had singled before Boros came up, was out at second when umpire Cal Rummond ruled he had failed to tag-up after the catch.

Tag-Teamers In Spotlight At Roll-Arena

Jim Quinn and Marco Polo team up tonight at Roll-Arena for a main event tag-team battle against Prince Omar and Tony Neopolitan.

Neopolitan and Ramsey didn't fare too well in the opener last week, however, as they tried in vain to gain some sort of victory over undefeated Victor, the 310-pound Canadian Black Bear.

Marco Polo and Prince Omar already have a score to settle in their part of the tag-team match tonight. Last week Polo was awarded a controversial decision over Omar.

In tonight's semifinal match Gene Bowman and Rod Rivera will meet in a two falls to win, hour time limit match. Bowman, a colorful wrestler, makes his return to Monroe after a leave of about six weeks.

In the 15-minute opener Quinn and Omar will warm up for their share of the main event.

Card's Rally In 6th Tops Chicago 6-1

ST. LOUIS (AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals scored four times in a sixth-inning uprising Saturday and trounced the Chicago Cubs 6-1 behind the 5-hit pitching of left-hander Ray Sadecki.

Aided by three double plays, Sadecki was credited with his second victory against one defeat. Jim Brewer, making his first start, was the loser. Brewer and Sadecki engaged in a tight pitching battle until the Cardinals found the batting range in the sixth.

Brewer was chased in that uprising, as was Joe Schaffernoth, his replacement.

Daryl Spencer singled and Charley James doubled for his third straight hit of the game to open the big inning. Don Taussig singled and Spencer scored but James was thrown out at home. Sadecki doubled off Schaffernoth, scoring Taussig, and rode himself on Julian Javier's single.

Mel Wright replaced Schaffernoth but yielded a run-scoring single to Don Landrum before the Cardinals were retired.

The 13-hit Cardinal attack was spearheaded by James' pair of doubles and single. Javier and Taussig also had three hits each.

The final run came in the eighth off Bob Anderson on a single by Taussig, a sacrifice and Javier's double.

Sadecki gave up only six walks in all but three of them came in a row in the fourth inning with only one out and the score tied at 1-1. Javier who topped the Cards' flawless defense, pulled him out of that jam by starting a snappy double play.

FIVE-RUN FIRST

Pirates Squash Los Angeles 9-5

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Pirates turned five hits and two Los Angeles errors into five runs in the first inning and coasted to a 9-5 triumph Saturday over the Dodgers.

Southpaw Joe Gibbon failed again in his quest to pitch his first complete major league game needing help from bullpen ace Elroy Face to quell a three-run Dodger rally in the ehghth.

Gibbon, who beat the Dodgers earlier at Los Angeles, had struck out five and scattered four hits over seven innings until he ran into trouble in the eighth.

Wally Moon drove in four Dodger runs with a two-run homer in the fourth and a double in the eighth. The poke into the upper right field deck, his ninth, followed a triple by Maury Wills. It was Moon's first homer outside the Coliseum in Los Angeles.

Billy Virdon led the Pirates 13-hit attack with a triple and two singles.

Roberto Clemente and Billy Virdon got seven of the Pirates 13 hits between them. Clemente got three singles and a triple and Virdon pitched in with a triple and two singles.

Birds Shutout Kansas City Athletics 6-0

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Baltimore's Steve Barber, a young southpaw whose specialty is beating the Athletics, struck out 10 and pitched a five-hitter as the Orioles thumped Kansas City 6-0.

Jackie Brandt, who returned to the lineup after being out since April 25 with a leg injury, hit a lead-off home run in the first inning as the Orioles jumped on Ken Johnson for three runs.

Jim Archer closed out the inning and limited the Orioles to one run and three hits over the next six and a third innings. Ron Hansen doubled home the final two runs against Norm Bass in the eighth.

Barber, starting his second season in the majors, registered his fifth career victory over the Athletics who have never defeated him. The shutout was his second of the season, his first coming against the Minnesota Twins.

The Athletics advanced only one runner as far as third and never raised a strong scoring threat.

CHAMPIONS TOURNEY

Snead Gets Lead In Third Round

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Sam Snead took the lead in the $52,000 Tournament of Champions Saturday, capping the third round of the desert golf show with a spectacular 50-foot putt for a birdie on the 18th green.

It gave the 48-year-old slammer from West Virginia a 3-under-par 69, a 54-hole score of 204 and a fat lead of five strokes going into the final round Sunday.

Misfortune struck on several fronts. Most notably hit was popular Jay Heberg, the leader through the first two rounds. He took a 78 and dropped into a tie for sixth place.

Stan Leonard and Doug Ford, each with a 74, were deadlocked at 210. At 211 were Hebert and Billy Casper Jr.

A happy Snead trudged off the 18th green as the crowd, estimated at more than 11,000, gave him a rousing cheer after his sensational putt. For Sam, a big bust in three earlier appearances in this tournament, the putt was the big stroke of the bright afternoon.

Hebert wound up with a seven on the par 4 18th. The 32-year-old Lafayette, La., professional penalized himself when he banged his club to the ground in a trap in a fit of fury. It was a sad finale to two earlier sub-par performances.

Player, the Masters champion, started the day with a brilliant eagle three on the first hole, gained when he chipped a shot in from 30 yards out. But he closed out the round with a double bogey 6 on the 18th. His drive hit a bridge over the water hazard and sailed into the pond.

Another victim of lady luck's bad graces was U.S. Open champion Arnold Palmer. He had a fairly respectable 73 for 21 but on the 15th hole took an unbelievable nine, 4-over-par. His second shot went into a bunker to the left of the green and buried itself in the tall grass.

Palmer said with a sheepish grin:

"I just chopped and chopped until I got it out. Then I one-putted the green."

Workout Slated For Sports Here This Afternoon

Manager Vivian Pettit of the Monroe Sports has called a workout for his La-Ark Baseball League club here this afternoon at 3 o'clock on the Ouachita Parish High School diamond.

The Sports are still conducting tryouts for prospects who are invited to the workouts.

Squad turnouts have been light recently as Pettit awaits college talent that will bolster the team before the June season opener.

"College boys will help a lot when they get through with their college play and come home for the summer," Pettit said.

Tigers Win SEC Western Title

BATON ROUGE (AP) —Louisiana State won the Southeastern Conference western division baseball title Saturday with a 5-3 victory over Tulane here.

LSU plays eastern division champion Auburn a best-of-3 series that begins next week at a site to be chosen.

LSU bunched four hits in the third and fourth and took a 4-0 lead. The big blow was a solo homer in the third by Marv Summers.

Allen Smith held Tulane scoreless through six innings, but a 3-hit rally nicked him for two runs in the third. Gus Wenzell led off with a round tripper in the 8th.

LSU finished with a 11-4 conference mark and an 18-5 overall record. Tulane was 2-11 in the SEC and 4-14 overall.

Cub Scouting Official To Speak Here

O. W. (Bud) Bennett, national director of Cub Scouting services, will be the guest of the Ouachita Valley Council, Boy Scouts of America, here May 11 and 12 for a series of meeting planned to give aid in the training and promotion of the Cub Scout program, it was announced yesterday.

Going into session with Ouachita Valley Council staff members shortly after his arrival next Thursday, from 9 a.m. until noon in the conference room at local offices, Bennett then will meet with Key Scouters for luncheon at the Saddle and Spur.

COFFEE

From 1:30 until 3 p.m. Cub Mothers and Den Mothers will assemble at a coffee in the Cameo Room of the Virginia Hotel to hear Bennett, and a general meeting there with all Cub Scout leaders will follow at 7:30 p.m.

Friday's program will include a trip to Ruston with Ouachita Valley Council executive Jack Pankey to meet more Den Mothers and Cub Mothers for tea at Trinity Methodist Church.

A "get - acquainted" luncheon with other Cub Scout leaders also in Ruston, will round out Bennett's schedule here and he departs for national offices in New Brunswick, N.J., shortly thereafter.

Bennett is a native of Redfield, S.D., and a veteran of 14 years in advertising and sales promotion, prior to his decision to make Scouting his profession. His formal education includes attendance at the University of Minnesota and the Minneapolis Advertising and Display School.

A graduate of the national training school for professional scouting leaders, his subsequent career has involved service as field executive and then assistant executive at Toledo, Ohio; scout executive at Middletown, Ohio, from 1944 until 1947 when he joined the national staff as assistant to the national director of Scouting Services.

O. W. BENNETT

Soviet Message Congratulates U.S. Spaceman

MOSCOW (AP) — Premier Khrushchev Saturday messaged congratulations to President Kennedy on the space flight of Cmdr. Alan B. Shepard Jr.

Tass news agency said the telegram offered Khrushchev's congratulations in the name of the people of the Soviet Union.

"The latest outstanding achievement in man's conquest of the cosmos opens up unlimited possibilities for the study of nature in the name of progress," Khrushchev said.

"Please convey my cordial congratulations to the flier, Shepard."

Earlier, in a speech in Armenia, the premier appeared to belittle the feat. He noted that Soviet astronaut Yuri Gagarin "was the first man to penetrate the cosmos . . . in a triumphal flight of man in a cosmic ship all the way around the earth, and not just in one way."

A Soviet commentator conceded that the flight of Shepard is "an undeniable achievement of the American space exploration program."

The words of praise came from an unnamed scientific correspondent of Tass, the official Soviet news agency. It was broadcast by Moscow radio.

Most of the article, however, was devoted to explaining that Shepard's space flight was "of less technical complexity and scientific value than the flight of Yuri Gagarin in the spaceship Vostok around the earth."

You want traction that keeps your car firmly attached to the road all the time—around corners, through mudholes, everywhere. You want superlatively balanced braking. You want an amiably smooth, supple ride—like Corvair's full independent suspension gives you.

As you might have guessed, you simply can't get these happy advantages in any other U.S. car. Only Corvair. Anything that gives you less is just another social climber.

Social activity during the past week has centered about out-of-town visitors. Monroe is famous for its hospitality, and residents delight in "putting the big pot in the little ones" whenever guests come to town.

DOT and BOB BERRY were here from San Antonio last Friday through Monday as guests of JACKIE and HAROLD WOODS, JR. Bob and his host were friends in school.

On their first evening in town, the visitors were honored at a party at Woods camp. Jackie and Harold invited a group of friends to supper to meet the Berrys. Dot chose to wear a white sharkskin [illegible] with overblouse of printed silk.

The dining table was covered with a cloth of golden brown burlap. Bird of Paradise blooms and anthurium in a brass bowl composed the centerpiece, which was flanked with brass candlesticks holding burning tapers. Guests were served crab meat appetizer, followed by roast beef, barbecued ham, [illegible] green salad, and [illegible] pecan pies.

On Saturday [illegible] ANNA GRAY and JAMES A. NOE entertained the Berrys at brunch. Assorted homemade rolls and jellies were served with [illegible] biscuit.

Sunday afternoon Dot and Bob were treated to a [illegible] on our beautiful Ouachita. Monday they returned home to San Antonio.

Spring flowers were everywhere in evidence Sunday afternoon when LOUISE and TOM LEIGH entertained. A small group of friends were invited to meet JUDGE and MRS. E. L. On Dit'

by Denise

Social activity during the past week has centered about out-of-town visitors. Monroe is famous for its hospitality, and residents delight in "putting the big pot in the little ones" whenever guests come to town.

DOT and BOB BERRY were here from San Antonio last Friday through Monday as guests of JACKIE and HAROLD WOODS, JR. Bob and his host were friends in school.

On their first evening in town, the visitors were honored at a party at Woods camp. Jackie and Harold invited a group of friends to supper to meet the Berrys. Dot chose to wear a white sharkskin skirt with overblouse of printed silk.

The dining table was covered with a cloth of golden brown burlap. Bird of Paradise blooms and anthurium in a brass bowl comprised the centerpiece, which was flanked with brass candlesticks holding burning tapers. Guests were served crab meat appetizer, followed by roast beef, barbecued ham, grits au gratin, green salad, and individual pecan pies.

On Saturday morning, ANNA GRAY and JAMES A NOE entertained the Berrys at brunch. Eight guests were seated at a table set with pink dinnerware and centered with a green lotus bowl in which floated rose pansies. On the menu were chicken livers in wine, omelet, hash brown potatoes, and a platter of cottage cheese wreathed with fresh fruit and mint. Assorted homemade jams and jellies were served with yeast biscuits.

Sunday afternoon, Dot and Bob were treated to a ride on our beautiful Ouachita. Monday they returned home to San Antonio.

Spring flowers were everywhere in evidence Sunday afternoon when LOUISE and TOM LEIGH entertained. A small group of friends were invited to meet JUDGE and MRS. E. L. GLADNEY of Bastrop and JUDGE and MRS. WALTER HANLIN of New Orleans. Several arrangements of pink roses were placed in the living room, and a breathtaking bouquet of sweet peas on the piano. Shasta daisies decorated the porch, and white roses centered the dining room table. The buffet included ham stuffed and "iced" with a cracker crumb dressing; shrimp salad in pepper shells; and a variety of "finger foods."

Monday Mrs. Harter was honored at a luncheon given by JEAN GENTRY in her home. White roses were used on the table, where twelve guests were seated. Jean served a salad plate, with German chocolate pie for dessert.

Luncheon on the patio was the treat when ROSEMARY BRISBIN and JANET CASH entertained for MRS. O. H. JUNOT, of New Iberia who has been visiting her daughter, JEAN DIXON. A shrimp salad plate was served, with luscious chocolate chiffon pie with whipped cream and nuts for dessert. Magnolias and spring roses in bloom enhanced the beauty of the outdoor setting. Two tables played bridge after lunch, with Jean winning high with TEE-DEE DIXON, second.

Sunday afternoon the DAVID KAPLAN home was the scene of a lovely spring party hosted by the Kaplans, her mother, MRS. CHARLES SNYDER of Bastrop; the LOUIS SMITHS. As she greeted the guests, Mrs. Kaplan was wearing a blue and green printed silk model. Mrs. Snyder chose blue silk with lace insertions; and Charlene, black organza with white organdy bertha collar.

Pink and white flowers were used throughout the reception suite. An arrangement of pink roses stood on a marble pedastal in the hall. On the living room coffee table were pink and white carnations.

The dining table, which was covered with a cutwork cloth, was centered with a silver epergne holding white stock and pink carnations. Platters of turkey and roast beef were served, along with shrimp cocktail, creamed mushrooms, and a delicious liver pate. Chocolate cake and petit fours were served with coffee in the library.

Home again after a four-day whirl last weekend in New York City are MARIE LOUISE and GEORGE SNELLINGS, JR. "Twas like old home week, what with having tea with HILLYER SPEED LAMKIN at his apartment, and dinner with MRS. AUGUSTA DINWIDDIE. They saw four shows: "Camelot," "Sound of Music," "The Best Man" and "Unsinkable Molly Brown."

Marie Louise got back to town in time to be co-hostess with NODIE THATCHER Monday at a luncheon at the Thatcher residence. Palest pink roses in a crystal container decorated the living room, with roses of a deeper shade on the dining table. Guests, who were members of the hostesses" book club, served themselves and then were seated on the patio behind the dining room. The buffet included chicken breasts in mushroom sauce, marinated tongue, and a fresh fruit bowl with crispy rolls and rye bread. For dessert, applesauce cake and coffee were served along with a large silver bowl of fresh strawberries for "dunking" in powdered sugar.

That favorite summer party, the boatride, is appearing oftener and oftener on the calendar as warmer weather is with us. This week JOAN and FRED KING and RITA and MORRIS BLUMENTHAL entertained with this type of frolic. Chicken spaghetti supper, with assorted cakes for dessert, was served going upriver. Guests played cards and danced on the upper deck.

Members of the kindergarten set were invited for a picnic honoring DENISE DOWNING on her fifth birthday Saturday. Party games were played, with MOLLY M'DONALD, JERELYN RYAN, and MARY JO JAGODITSCH winning prizes. Sack lunches containing peanut butter sandwiches, potato chips, and cupcakes were served to twenty-five little girls who attended.

A unique party was held in Mer Rouge last Sunday, when the grandchildren of MRS. SHELBY WHITE presented a family art show. Exhibits, submitted by young people aged two to twelve years, were shown in Mrs. White's studio. Types of art work included charcoals, water color, crayons, pencil sketches, and oils.

Artists and their prizes were: DOUGLAS M'DUFF, first place for artists under five years; SUSAN CARTER, drawing; RIVES WHITE, pastel composition and sculpture; BECKY WHITE, charicature; GIL WHITE, texture presentation; SHELBY DEAN M'DUFF, three - dimensional presentation; JIMMIE WHITE, oil painting; DONNA MARGARET WHITE, still life; JO LYNN WHITE, abstract in oil; JOE WHITE, scene from every day life; MARGARET McGLAUFLIN, line drawing; MAXIE BRODNAX, story book illustration; JOHN CARTER, abstract in water colors; SHELBY WHITE, small drawing.

Speaking of children, aren't we proud of our Children of the American Revolution? The local Lt. Joseph Bowmar chapter brought home the gold cup of the outstanding chapter in the nation — no small feat when one considers that there are 800 units. Congratulations to the members and their sponsor, Ben M'LEAN.

No more than season, sun or tide,
No more than breath and blood,
Can joy be always at the full
Or laughter at the flood.
Always a pause, a mood, a hush,
Must somewhere intervene
To mark the subtle turn of tide,
The quiet change of scene;
So melancholy to the heart
Comes by ancient right,
The winter of our confidence,
The dusk of our delight.

A VISIT TO MONROE by Mr. and Mrs. Bob Berry of San Antonio, Texas, provided inspiration for a number of informal parties during the past weekend. The Berrys were houseguests of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Woods Jr., on Deborah Drive.

Methodist Church Scene Of Brown-Pratt Nuptials

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank O. Pratt of Bastrop and Mr. Brown is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Norton Brown Alexandria.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white cloud silk taffeta, fashioned on princess lines with long pointed sleeves. Appliques of Alencon lace outlined the Sabrina neckline and lace motifs also accented the empire waistline and followed two diagonal lines to the bottom of the court train. Her fingertip veil of illusion was attached to a pearl ornamented headdress and her bouquet, centered with a white orchid, featured garlands of stephanotis in a cascade arrangement.

Miss Lynda Carpenter of Shreveport, was maid of honor, and wore a frock of light blue silk organza over taffeta, styled with fitted bodice and full skirt. A wide taffeta sash which formed a bow in back marked the waistline and her headdress was a matching flat organza and taffeta bow with tulle attached. Bridesmaids, who were dressed identically to the honor attendant, in lighter shades of blue were Miss Betty Lou Arnett, Miss Diane Caldwell, Miss Judy Godwin, Miss Ann Shirley of Bastrop, Miss Peggy Stephens, Shreveport and Miss Mary Ann Wilkins, El Dorado, Ark. The attendants all wore strands of pearls and short white gloves and carried bouquets of pink glamelias, flourets of gladioli and garlands of ivy.

Miss Cynthia Lynn Pratt, Mobile, Ala., niece of the bride, served as flower girl. She wore a dress and headpiece identical to the bridesmaids and carried a basket of pink rose petals.

Mr. Brown attended his son as best man and groomsmen-ushers were Warren Broussard, Shreveport; David Crockett Jr., cousin of the bridegroom, Alexandria; Eddie Hislop, West Monroe; Robert Luckett, cousin of the bridegroom, Waco, Texas; Dickey Priest, Bastrop and John Trigg, Ruston.

For the occasion the bride's mother wore a mauve lace dress with a white corsage. The bridegroom's mother selected a green lace dress with pink rosebud corsage.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the church parlor. Arrangements of white flowers and greenery decorated the reception room. The wedding cake and punch bowl were at either end of the bride's table which was centered with a bouquet of white chrysanthemums daisies and gladioli in a footed crystal container. White candles in crystal holders completed the decor. Mrs. David Crockett, aunt of the bridegroom served the cake, assisted by Mrs. E. Murray Caldwell. Presiding at the punch bowl was Mrs. N. B. Area Nuptials Are Announced

Weddings and engagements of area interest are being announced this week end.

CAMERON-TULLOS

Miss Patricia Tullos of Ferriday, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Coy Tullos, became the bride of Carman Cameron of Natchez, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carman Cameron Sr., of Natchez, on April 25. The ceremony was performed in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Garth Randall with Rev. M. H. Fields, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Ferriday, officiating.

Miss Jo Jo Saxton served as maid of honor and James Goddard of Baton Rouge, was best man.

A reception was held in the home and after a brief wedding trip the couple is now at home in Ferriday.

GREEN - BEASLEY

Vows uniting Miss Charlene Beasley, [illegible] Mrs. Walter [illegible] Green, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Green Sr., all of Ferriday, were solemnized April 30 at the Waterproof Baptist Church.

Rev. Charles Gaston performed the ceremony in the presence of family members and close friends. Mrs. Dave McCain, sister of the bride, was her only attendant and Mr. Green attended his son as best man.

PENNINGTON-HOLLAND

The wedding will be solemnized Sunday, May 21 at 3 p.m. in the Vidalia Pentecostal Church.

Miss Holland is the daughter of the late Rev. and Mrs. Hiram S. Holland of Vicksburg, Miss. and Mr. Pennington is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pennington of Natchez.

The bride - elect is a graduate of Vidalia High School and is now attending Concordia Parish Trade School in Ferriday. Mr. Pennington is a graduate of Natchez High School.

Bride's Gifts To Attendants Require Thought

Busy days lie ahead for spring brides-to-be. In addition to the absorbing details of the wedding, the trousseau, the pre - nuptial parties, there are the 'Thank you' notes and the gifts to select for the attendants.

Such gifts deserve careful thought and should be chosen for their usefulness as well as for the affection they represent from the bride to her best friends.

It's a thoughtful bride who selects gifts that will last through the years, serving as reminders to the friends who were with her during one of the happiest times of her life.

As the gift selection is one that the bride herself must make it would be a good idea for her to take quiet stock of what her attendants-to-be may lack in the way of useful accessories.

If they have charm bracelets perhaps a charm indicative of the wedding with the date and the bride's initials on it might be the choice. Another suggestion is a silver picture frame with the bride's initials and date and a picture in her wedding gown. Particularly useful would be one of the cartridge - type fountain pens designed solely for feminine use. These glamourized writing instruments are decorative enough to rate a place in an evening bag.

If it happens that the attendants are married or are engaged then something for the home might be a good selection — perhaps a bowl for flowers or fruit or an hors d'oeuvres plate.

New Church Construction Is Launched

Construction of the first unit of the Westminster Presbyterian Church building, Selman Drive and Blanks Street, is under way, the Rev. W. W. Hatcher, pastor reported.

The first unit of 6,400 square feet will include a sanctuary-fellowship hall, kitchen, and six church school rooms.

Worship services and Sunday School will continue to be held in the Brown Hall at Northeast Louisiana State College until completion of the new building.

BISHOP A. WALTON

Bishop Sets Appearances Around Area

Bishop Aubrey G. Walton, resident bishop of the Louisiana Area of The Methodist Church, will preach at the First Methodist Church in Monroe on Mother's Day, May 14, at 10:50 a.m.

He will make another appearance in this area that evening. He will appear at the Rayville Methodist Church at 7:30 p.m., and will dedicate several memorials to the church at the close of the service.

Bishop Walton was born in Clarksdale, Miss. He was graduated from Hendrix College in Conway, Ark., received his bachelor of divinity degree from Duke University, and the honorary doctor of divinity from Hendrix. After serving several pastorates in Arkansas, he was appointed to First Methodist Church, Texarkana, and then to First Methodist Church in Little Rock, where he served for 10 years as a leader of Methodism.

MEMBER

Bishop Walton is a member of the World Methodist Council and was a delegate to the Ecumenical Conferences of The Methodist Church held in Springfield, Mass., in 1947, in Oxford, England, in 1951, and Lake Junaluska in 1956.

He served as a delegate to the 1952 and 1956 General Conferences of Methodism, and to the South Central Jurisdictional Conferences of 1948, 1952, 1956, 1960. He was the chairman of the Jurisdictional Council of the South Central Jurisdiction during the quadrennium 1956-1960.

Discussions Set On Family Life At Local Church

On Wednesday at 7:15 p.m., Dr. and Mrs. G. W. Pomeroy of the First Methodist Church will speak to "men only" on the subject, "Living with Your Wife." At that same period Dr. and Mrs. Ben Oliphint, St. Paul's Methodist Church, will speak to the women on "Living with Your Husband."

Friday at 6:30 p.m. Dr. W. H. McFadden, pastor of the host church, will speak to family groups on the subject, "Living with Yourself as Part of Your Family."

All of the Family Week services will be held at the church's new building, North 11th and Stubbs, Monroe, and will be open to the public.

Revival To Open At Church Here

A revival series will get under way today at the Faith Baptist Church, corner of Orange and Jackson streets, and continue through May 14. It was announced by the Rev. Willie Woodard, pastor.

EVANGELIST Serl Watson, formerly of St. Louis, Mo., will be featured in a nightly series of gospel meetings starting today at the Church of Christ on White's Ferry Road at the corner of North 7th and Greenwood in West Monroe. Services will start at 7:30 p.m.

DR. LAKE OXFORD

Special Course For Parents Of Teenagers Set

A special course for parents of teenagers, "Understanding Youth," will be taught by Dr. Lake Oxford this evening and on May 11 at 6 p.m. at the First Methodist Church of West Monroe.

It will be a feature of Christian Family Week, May 7-14, at the church.

Dr. Oxford, [illegible] of Northeast State College, is a former principal of West Monroe Junior High School, and holds a Ph. D. from the University of Maryland.

MEETING PLACE

The class will meet in the Social Hall. The children of the church will present a program, "The Earth is the Lord's," at the 9 a.m. services today to mark Children's Day and Loyalty Sunday.

The Family Life Committee in charge of activities this week includes Willis Ward, chairman, Charles Chisholm, and Earl Hamm. They stressed the purpose of the week as planned to [illegible] emphasis on the religious heritage of the family to renew its strength in a complex world.

A special "parents' coffee period" will be held Friday at 10 a.m. in the Education Building, with Mrs. George Pomeroy of Monroe as guest speaker.

There will be a special broadcast by the church this morning at 7 a.m. It will be presented over the West Monroe radio station.

The May 14 morning sermon will be "The Priesthood of Parents." The Rev. Earl Emmerich is pastor of the church.

Churches Join In Stewardship Program Events

Area church, civic and business groups will join with others throughout the nation in the observance of Soil Stewardship Week, which starts today and extends through May 14.

Purpose of the observation, he said, will be to afford an opportunity to review with thanksgiving the rewards of good stewardship in caring for soil, water and related natural resources.

The goals of Soil Stewardship Week are related to those of the Rogation Days which first were observed in France during the fifth century and now are on the calendar of many churches as an occasion of giving thanks to God for His bounty and asking His continued blessings.

The annual observance now known as Soil Stewardship Week began about 15 weeks ago as Soil Stewardship Sunday.

REV. R. T. WATSON

First Sermon In New Post Is Scheduled

The Rev. R. T. Watson, pastor of the Broadmoor Christian Church in Shreveport for the past three years, and a pioneer in Monroe religious circles, will deliver his first sermon as pastor of St. John's Christian Church here this morning.

His sermon, "Making A Dream Come True," will be delivered at 10:45 a.m.

The Rev. and Mrs. Watson moved to Monroe May 1.

LOCATION

St. John's Christian Church, which is located at Westminster and Forsythe avenues, was organized and commissioned while the Watsons were here previously. Rev. Watson commissioned the members of the church and delivered the first sermon for the new congregation.

While Rev. Watson was in Shreveport, the membership of the church there doubled and the first unit of the building setup was erected on a five-acre tract at the southeast edge of the city.

Open House Set At New Temple

There will be an open house today at the new Temple B'Nai Israel, 2300 Orell Place at Park Avenue on the north side of Monroe from 3:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m.

At this time the facilities of the new structure will be open for viewing by the general public.

The facilities were dedicated last Friday evening. The sermon of dedication was delivered by Rabbi Julian Feibelman of Temple Sinai, New Orleans.

At 6:30 p.m. today the Rev. A. D. Davies of the Grace Episcopal Church will speak to parents on the subject, "Living with Teenagers." At that same hour, Dr. Edward G. Long, psychiatrist, will speak to teenagers on the matter of living with parents.

On Wednesday at 7:15 p.m., Dr. and Mrs. G. W. Pomeroy of the First Methodist Church will speak to "men only" on the subject, "Living with Your Wife." At that same period, Dr. and Mrs. Ben Oliphint, St. Paul's Methodist Church, will speak to the women on "Living with Your Husband."

Friday at 6:30 p.m., Dr. W. H. McFadden, pastor of the host church, will speak to family groups on the subject, "Living with Yourself as Part of Your Family."

All of the Family Week services will be held at the church's new building, North 14th and Stubbs, Monroe, and will be open to the public.

Revival To Open At Church Here

A revival series will get under way today at the Faith Baptist Church, corner of Orange and Jackson streets, and continue through May 14, it was announced by the Rev. Willie Woodard, pastor.

Evangelist will be the Rev. Bert E. Riddle Jr., pastor of Lakeside Baptist Church, Pineville, La. Morning services will be held at 1, and evening services daily at 7:30.

New Church Construction Is Launched

Construction of the first unit of the Westminster Presbyterian Church building, Selman Drive and Blanks Street, is under way, the Rev. W. W. Hatcher, pastor reported.

The first unit of 6,690 square feet will include a sanctuary-fellowship hall, kitchen, and six church school rooms.

The completion of the project, being built by W. B. Sanders, general contractor, is scheduled for October.

Worship services and Sunday School will continue to be held in the Brown Hall at Northeast Louisiana State College until completion of the new building.

DR. LAKE OXFORD

Special Course For Parents Of Teenagers Set

A special course for parents of teenagers, "Understanding Youth" will be taught by Dr. Lake Oxford this evening and on May 14 at 6 p.m. at the First Methodist Church of West Monroe.

It will be a feature of Christian Family Week, May 7-14, at the church.

Dr. Oxford, now registrar at Northeast State College, is a former principal of West Monroe Junior High School, and holds a Ph. D. from the University of Maryland.

MEETING PLACE

The class will meet in the Social Hall. The children of the church will present a program, "The Earth is the Lord's," at the 7 p.m. services today to mark Children's Day and Loyalty Sunday.

The Family Life Committee in charge of activities this week includes Willis Ward, chairman; Charles Chisholm, and Earl Hamm. They stressed the purpose of the week as placing special emphasis on the religious heritage of the family to renew its strength in a complex world.

A special parents' coffee period will be held Friday at 10 a.m. in the Education Building, with Mrs. George Pomeroy of Monroe as guest speaker.

There will be a special broadcast by the church this morning at 7:30. It will be presented over the West Monroe radio station.

The May 14 morning sermon will be "The Priesthood of Parents." The Rev. Earl Emmerich is pastor of the church.

Churches Join In Stewardship Program Events

Area church, civic and business groups will join with others throughout the nation in the observance of Soil Stewardship Week, which starts today and extends through May 14.

Purpose of the observation, he said, will be to afford an opportunity to review with thanksgiving the rewards of good stewardship in caring for soil, water and related natural resources.

The goals of Soil Stewardship Week are related to those of the Rogation Days which first were observed in France during the fifth century and now are on the calendar of many churches as an occasion of giving thanks to God for His bounty and asking His continued blessings.

The annual observance now known as Soil Stewardship Week began about 15 weeks ago as Soil Stewardship Sunday.

EVANGELIST Serl Watson, formerly of St. Louis, Mo., will be featured in a nightly series of gospel meetings starting today at the Church of Christ on White's Ferry Road at the corner of North 7th and Greenwood in West Monroe. Services will start at 7:30 p.m.

REV. R. T. WATSON

First Sermon In New Post Is Scheduled

The Rev. R. T. Watson, pastor of the Broadmoor Christian Church in Shreveport for the past three years, and a pioneer in Monroe religious circles, will deliver his first sermon as pastor of St. John's Christian Church here this morning.

His sermon, "Making A Dream Come True," will be delivered at 10.45 a.m.

The Rev. and Mrs. Watson moved to Monroe, May 1.

LOCATION

St. John's Christian Church, which is located at Westminster and Forsythe avenues, was organized and commissioned while the Watsons were here previously. Rev. Watson commissioned the nucleus of the church and delivered the first sermon for the new congregation.

While Rev. Watson was in Shreveport, the membership of the church there doubled and the first unit of the building setup was erected on a five-acre tract at the southeast edge of the city.

Open House Set At New Temple

There will be an open house today at the new Temple B'Nai Israel, 2400 Orell Place at Park Avenue on the north side of Monroe from 3:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m.

At this time the facilities of the new structure will be open for viewing by the general public.

The facilities were dedicated last Friday evening. The sermon of dedication was delivered by Rabbi Julian Feibelman of Temple Sinai, New Orleans.

THE HOME SHIFT

Violet Club Progresses

By MILDRED SWIFT

It's amazing what strides the La Violette Club members have made in a year. Their show last week was beautiful, not only the violets, but the manner in which they were displayed. And can you imagine, perfectly exquisite African violet arrangements, even to the one on the tea table!

For the benefit of new growers I'm giving you the following information compiled and given out by the Louisiana Violette Club members.

AFRICAN VIOLETS

"The African Violet has become extremely popular because it can be grown satisfactorily in the average home by almost anyone. The large variety of colors in the flowers, the beauty of the foliage and the almost constant production of flowers throughout the year have made it a universal favorite.

SOIL, FERTILIZER

"African violets have fine roots and grow best in somewhat coarse soils which drain well. A soil mixture of one part peat moss, one part perlite and one teaspoon lime per quart of mix (this is to keep soil from becoming too acid) will grow good violets. After your violets have time to get established, they will need fertilizing. A weak solution of liquid fertilizer (ra-pid-gro) is safe and very effective if applied about once a month. Follow the directions of the fertilizer manufacturer.

TEMPERATURE, HUMIDITY

"These two factors go hand and hand in growing African violets. The best temperatures for African violets are 65 degrees at night, and 75 degrees during the day. Since the humidity in the average home is usually not very high, it is desirable that you grow violets on wet sand or pebbles. Moisture evaporating from the pebbles will help maintain a higher humidity for your violet plants.

LIGHT

"You can get an approximate idea of light intensity by holding your hand four to six inches above the plant. If a light shadow is cast, the light is adequate; if no shadow is cast, it is too dark. Direct sun light is not desirable. Good foliage and no flowers is usually due to lack of light.

WATERING

"Plants should be watered only when the soil feels slightly moist. When watering, give them a good soaking to wet the entire pot. Do not water again until the soil is almost dry. Too frequent watering will cause the pots to become waterlogged and encourages crown rot. Plants should be watered with warm water to prevent ring spots on the leaves. The water should be about 10 degrees above the room temperature.

TROUBLES

"Leaf Bleaching — this may be due to too much light or lack of fertility in the soil.

"Bud drop - This may be caused by various conditions. The effects of gas fumes, too dry atmosphere, too much fertilizer, over watering, extreme changes of temperature.

"Stem rot - This is caused by fungi which enter the tissue and cause death of the cell. There is no control for such except the sterilization of soil. Over watering or waterlogging is the main reason for such troubles.

"Nematodes — these are tiny worms known as eel worms, which attack the roots and cause swellings known as knots. The best remedy is a preventive one, soil sterilization. Plants badly infested should be discarded.

MAY GARDENING

The bearded iris have been beautiful. Just after they finish blooming, they can be transplanted if they are too thick. This iris multiplies so rapidly that after about three years the rhizomes become interlocked and they don't bloom well.

Spade the bed where you plan to plant these iris, pulverizing the soil and working in bone meal. (Allow one handful for each plant). Divide the iris, pulling the rooted plants from the large mother ryzomes. Discard this fleshy part as it will not bloom again. If the plants are over eight or ten inches high, trim the top. This is to keep them from falling over. Bearded iris must be planted very shallow.

This iris will stand a light mulch, but heavy mulches will cause rhizome rot. Keep dead bloom stalks cut.

The native Louisiana iris has really been beautiful. Those growing in water reflect their blooms and you get a double picture. The tall yellow is not a true native. All these require so little attention. They'll grow in water or dry soil. They like an acid soil. As they cease blooming, cut the bloom stalks unless you're saving seed. These, as in many plants, seem to sap some of the vitality from the plant itself.

Chrysanthemums can still be set out in May. These should have some sun.

PEPPER PLANTS

Peperomias are handsome foliage plants of small size. Classed as tropical, they are members of the pepper family. They're easy to grow and are popular as house plants or for a sheltered porch. They can be moved outdoors in spring and summer provided they are in a shaded or sheltered place.

The egg shaped leaves, which are thick and fleshy are usually seen in a dark green color or in a variegated pattern. The variegated is in most demand. It has creamy colored leaves. Often with an irregular stripe of green down the center. Another type has emerald green leaves which appear to be quilted. All types are easily to propagate by cuttings, almost any time. Take a stem containing at least two leaf nodes, dip the cut portion in a harmone powder before putting it in sand to root.

The usual potting mixture is used for planting peperomias. I don't know of any diseases or insects that work on this house plant. The variegated variety is very popular for flower arrangements.

FRAGRANCE

Did you know that men buy more perfume for women than women buy for them selves? So, we should take that as an ultimatum to surround ourselves with fragrance. However, the best way to get the right perfume, one that becomes a part of you, is to buy it yourself. Buying perfume is like getting a new hair do, it gives you a lift.

Every one of us has a different skin.

When buying perfumes or toilet waters, put your faith in the name of a reputable maker. Buy one that gives you pleasure. Opening a bottle and sniffing is the wrong way to select perfume. All you get this way are the alcohol fumes rising from the bottle. Apply a drop to your wrist. Give it time to dry. Now you'll discover what you and those near you will enjoy when you wear it.

The old fashioned idea that a dab of perfume behind each ear will suffice is wrong. Apply with a tuft of cotton to your inner wrists, your temples, the base of your neck, the crook of each elbow, the hair, and a dab behind each knee. Then take this scented cotton wisp and tuck inside, close to you. Experts tell us the average lastingness for most perfumes is about four hours. So carry a little purse flacon filled with your perfume. Your fragrance should be touched up every bit as frequently as your make up.

Never apply perfumes directly to fabric or fur.

GARDEN CENTER NOTES

Farmerville Club Shows

By MARY JARDINE

Farmerville Garden Club members staged a most beautiful flower show at the Garden Center, featuring garden grown spring flowers.

The following splendid horticulture specimens were on display: Flowering pomegranate by Mrs. N. B. James; pink Anthony waterer spiraea, Mrs. G. M. Edwards; pink California poppy, and red California poppy and white American beauty rose by Mrs. Clea Aulds.

COLOR HARMONY

In the arrangement section, Mrs. Fred Preaus and Mrs. Ingram Ballard, combined talents in creating a symmetrical mass design. A round crystal bowl was selected for a container in which the symmetrical triangle design was made of light green dock, followed by placements of yellow (variegated) honeysuckle. The line was filled in with masses of bright yellow daylilies, fresh, crisp and colorful.

A color harmony of red-violet into pink was the theme of the mass oval design by Mrs. Jess Roan. The container was a green compote set on a small black base. Sweet peas shading from red - violet to pink formed the outline of the design with roses of a deep red - violet massed in the center of the design. The color harmony was most appealing.

Mrs. G. M. Edwards and Mrs. Frank Goss designed an asymmetrical triangle. Using a brass cylinder set on a carved black base they placed green dock in an asymmetrical line followed by marguerite daisies. Massed low and following the pattern were yellow floribunda roses. The essence of spring time.

Mrs. Guy Ladwig and Mrs. Layton Hester created a design of great elegance and distinction using a classic black urn trimmed with gold. This was placed on a polished black base. The design was vertical in pattern and the line formed with light green dock, followed by secondary placements of white larkspur. A diagonal line of white American Beauty Roses and buds was introduced in the front of the primary placements.

It was a lovely design suitable for a formal living room.

IRIS, AMARYLLIS

It's iris and amaryllis time in this section. Time to visit local gardens and select varieties you would like to add to your collection. Both of these flowers are best selected while in bloom so you can see the color, form and texture of the various varieties. Iris do well when transplanted just after blooming, and amaryllis too. They should be fertilized well and watered throughout the summer to produce blooms for next year.

DAYLILIES

The next few weeks will usher in the daylily season. A few are already blooming in north Louisiana. Region 13 of the American Hemerocallis Society invites you to its annual meeting in Baton Rouge on May 20 and 21. Headquarters for the meeting will be the Bellemont Motor Hotel, 7370 Airline Highday.

The program will consist of the following Garden Tours on Saturday morning. Lunch in the garden of Dr. and Mrs. T. N. Farris at noon. Garden tours on Saturday afternoon, business meeting and banquet Saturday night. Sam Caldwell (The Old Dirt Dauber) will be guest speaker. This alone will be worth making the trip. There will be garden tours on Sunday morning.

Registration fee is $8.50 per person. Send reservations to Mrs. Willie H. Davis, 3633 Winnebago, Baton Rouge, Louisiana. Make hotel reservations direct. The daylily variety "Fairy Wings" (Lester) was winner of the 1960 Stout Medal, and number one on the 1960 Popularity Poll. This is a wide open pale yellow with pink flash. It has lovely lacy looking flowers and beautiful form. We have many fine hybridizers in Louisiana. Be sure to visit the daylily gardens when they are in bloom.

SOUTHERN GARDENER

Tree Peony Blossoming

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

Another year has rolled around, and those gardeners who ordered and planted some of the astonishingly beautiful tree peonies are now enjoying their first blossoms from young plants.

The very, very cold weather we have had has not damaged the foliage or the buds of the tree peonies, for these plants are extremely hardy to cold — both in foliage and in bud.

POSSIBILITY

It may turn out that your columnist really did get some of the so-called "winter - blooming" tree peonies from Japan a few years ago as reported in a column last year.

A plant lover never forgets anything he reads about truly rare or unusual flowers, and so I never quite forgot an old catalogue from a Japanese nursery of long ago that mentioned the "winter - flowering peonies." Consequently, when I had a chance to import 12 of these wonders, I fell for it "hook line and sinker" . . . at scandalous prices. I probably made the same mistake everybody does in not daring to plant them a good six inches deep above the crown, so I lost three plants. However, something strange indeed happened last fall: after the foliage had all but died down with frosts, one of the peonies sent out a new set of beautiful light green foliage. I dispaired of the whole plant when this appeared, as it looked as if I would have to put a little greenhouse over it to save the plant. Not so! The very coldest winter freezes did not destroy this tender looking foliage! Along toward spring — if we can call it that this year — more new tender leaves arose, and now this tree peony looks as normal as all the rest which have fine foliage. A gorgeous pink one and a beautiful white one with crepy petals with purple longish markings at the bases of the petals are in flower.

A search through literature about tree peonies has revealed that the Japanese did not mean by "winter - flowering" that these plants bloomed in late winter or early spring, but that they bloomed again in the fall or early winter. Oh, to have a tree peony season in late November!

REASON

The first column we published about tree peonies brought so many, many letters that we simply could not cope with them. Most of them asked why they had failed with these wonderfully beautiful plants. Your columnist's calculated guess is that you all planted them too shallow. Peony lovers all know that the ordinary perennial peonies must not have more than two inches of soil above the crowns if they are to flower. Perhaps we have learned this lesson too well for tree peonies have really got to have six inches of dirt above the crowns. Without this, the grafted plants we buy today rarely survive. If you will plant them properly, however, the variety you bought will develop its own roots above the common kind on which it was grafted and grow into a tremendous shrub with hundreds of flowers every year.

Da Costa Called Perfectionist In Casting Routine

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Director Morton Da Costa is a perfectionist when it comes to casting.

The man who came to Hollywood from Broadway to produce and direct "Music Man," says.

"If my own mother were starving and a bit part would keep her alive, I wouldn't give it to her unless she was right for it."

His strict attitude has paid off. On Broadway he directed "Auntie Mame," "No Time For Sergeants" and "Music Man," three smashes in as many years.

Third Broadway Entry Of Vidal About Romulus

NEW YORK (AP) —Playwright Gore Vidal is doing an adaptation of Friedrich Durrenmatt's "Romulus the Great" as his third Broadway entry. He previously authored two hit originals, "Visit to a Small Planet" and "The Best Man."

Play Heads Off Broadway, Goal Is 'White Way'

NEW YORK (AP) — A new play, "A Fig Leaf in Her Bonnet," is heading for off - Broadway but already has sights set on Main Stem display.

Cut Flowers For Summer

By AUDREY DAWSON

Gladiolus make a nice cut flower for use during the summer months and if you have a place in your garden, yours truly recommends that you plant a few corms. In order to have a succession of flowers, it is best to make plantings at intervals of two weeks until July. These will provide flowers during July, August, and September. The best depth to plant is determined by kind of soil and size of corms. Large corms should be planted six to seven inches deep in sandy loam and about four inches deep in heavy soil. Smaller sizes may be planted shallower. Gladiolus do best when grown in a well drained soil and supplied with lots of water. Use fertilizer sparingly on gladiolus at planting or during the growing season.

When planting for cut flowers, plant corms either in rows or beds. If you want them for garden decoration they are effective in sunny places either in groups or singly among other flowering plants.

After the plants are up be sure to dust weekly with 5 per cent DDT for thrips.

WEIGHT CONTROL

A basic and practical guide to weight control for people who want to lose, gain, or maintain their weight has just been issued by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. The guide "Food and Your Weight" stresses need for a varied and balanced diet of regular foods for healthful and lasting weight control. This leaflet provides up - to - date facts available on calories and energy needs and lists suggestions for people who wish to lose, gain or maintain weight. This bulletin also shows how to figure the number of calories needed every day to maintain desirable weight.

This bulletin advises people on reducing diets to lose no more than one or two pounds a week.

You may have a copy of this bulletin "Food and Your Weight" by calling my office FA 3-2251. This bulletin was prepared by nutritionists of U.S.D.A. Agriculture Research Service.

OUT OF PARISH

Your home demonstration agent will be in our capital city on the campus of LSU to attend the annual State Home Demonstration Council May 9-10-11th. Mrs. L. J. Bower, president of the parish council and the following delegates will attend the event: Mrs. C. D. Henderson, Mrs. Cleburne White. Mrs. Henderson is on the state Executive Board and will attend as the District Counselor.

It's getting time for homemakers to clean and store winter blankets. Our specialist, Mrs. Verna Guillory, offers a few suggestions to keep your balnkets soft and colorful as new. First remove loose dirt by shaking, brushing or vacuuming. Then pretreat dirty spots or stains. Use a mild soap and lukewarm water. Hot water and strong soap will cause blankets to shrink. Rinse the blanket well in lukewarm water two or three times is usually necessary. Gently press or squeeze as much water from the blanket as possible but no wringing or twisting. Follow the manufacturer's directions for drying your blankets in a dryer. If you hang them, use a double parallel lines. This allows better circulation for faster drying. Shape the blanket on the line by squaring the corners. Dry in the shade.

WASH AND WEAR

One of the main things consumers should learn about easy care fabrics is when to remove garments from a dryer. There is a critical point in the drying process when a garment should be removed from the tumble dryer. Research has shown that fabrics should be removed from the dryer while they are still slightly damp and before the tumbling action has stopped. Garments should be immediately hung on a hanger before placing in the closet.

Garments treated with the Ban-care or Belfast process can go through the spin cycle of a washer and then be line dried. However, there are still some treated fabrics on the market that either should be removed from the machine before the spin cycle or rewet after spinning. When garments do need a touch up, it's best to press with a steam iron rather than sprinkling the garments and using a dry iron.

THE HOME SHIFT

By MILDRED SWIFT

It's amazing what strides the La Violette Club members have made in a year. Their show last week was beautiful, not only the violets, but the manner in which they were displayed. And can you imagine, perfectly exquisite African violet arrangements, even to the one on the tea table!

For the benefit of new growers I'm giving you the following information compiled and given out by the Louisiana Violette Club members.

AFRICAN VIOLETS

"The African Violet has become extremely popular because it can be grown satisfactorily in the average home by almost anyone. The large variety of colors in the flowers, the beauty of the foliage and the almost constant production of flowers throughout the year have made it a universal favorite.

SOIL, FERTILIZER

"African violets have fine roots and grow best in somewhat coarse soils which drain well. A soil mixture of one part peat moss, one part perlite and one teaspoon lime per quart of mix (this is to keep soil from becoming too acid) will grow good violets. TEMPERATURE, HUMIDITY

Too frequent watering will cause the pots to become waterlogged and encourages crown rot. Plants should be watered with warm water to prevent ring spots on the leaves. TROUBLES

"Leaf Bleaching — this may be due to too much light or lack of fertility in the soil.

"Bud drop - This may be caused by various conditions. The effects of gas fumes, too dry atmosphere, too much fertilizer, over watering, extreme changes of temperature.

I probably made the same mistake everybody does in not daring to plant them a good six inches deep above the crown, so I lost three plants. However, something strange indeed happened last fall: after the foliage had all but died down with frosts, one of the peonies sent out a new set of beautiful light green foliage. I dispaired of the whole plant when this appeared, as it looked as if I would have to put a little greenhouse over it to save the plant. Not so! The very coldest winter freezes did not destroy this tender looking foliage! Along toward spring — if we can call it that this year — more new tender leaves arose, and now this tree peony looks as normal as all the rest which have fine foliage. A gorgeous pink one and a beautiful white one with crepy petals with purple longish markings at the bases of the petals are in flower.

A search through literature about tree peonies has revealed that the Japanese did not mean by "winter - flowering" that these plants bloomed in late winter or early spring, but that they bloomed again in the fall or early winter. Oh, to have a tree peony season in late November!

REASON

The first column we published about tree peonies brought so many, many letters that we simply could not cope with them. Most of them asked why they had failed with these wonderfully beautiful plants. Your columnist's calculated guess is that you all planted them too shallow. Peony lovers all know that the ordinary perennial peonies must not have more than two inches of soil above the crowns if they are to flower. Perhaps we have learned this lesson too well for tree peonies have really got to have six inches of dirt above the crowns. Without this, the grafted plants we buy today rarely survive. If you will plant them properly, however, the variety you bought will develop its own roots above the common kind on which it was grafted and grow into a tremendous shrub with hundreds of flowers every year.

Da Costa Called Perfectionist In Casting Routine

The man who came to Hollywood from Broadway to produce and direct "Music Man," says:

"If my own mother were starving and a bit part would keep her alive, I wouldn't give it to her unless she was right for it."

His strict attitude has paid off. On Broadway he directed "Auntie Mame," "No Time For Sergeants" and "Music Man," three smashes in as many years.

Third Broadway Entry Of Vidal About Romulus

NEW YORK (AP) —Playwright Gore Vidal is doing an adaptation of Friedrich Durrenmatt's "Romulus the Great" as his third Broadway entry. He previously authored two hit originals, "Visit to a Small Planet" and "The Best Man."

NEW YORK (AP) — A new play, "A Fig Leaf in Her Bonnet," is heading for off - Broadway but already has sights set on Main Stem display.

Sponsors of the project have worked out a special financing agreement that calls for transfer of assets to a new Broadway partnership if the show clicks.

Cut Flowers For Summer

By AUDREY DAWSON

Gladiolus make a nice cut flower for use during the summer months and if you have a place in your garden, yours truly recommends that you plant a few corms. In order to have a succession of flowers, it is best to make plantings at intervals of two weeks until July. These will provide flowers during July, August, and September. The best depth to plant is determined by kind of soil and size of corms. Large corms should be planted six to seven inches deep in sandy loam and about four inches deep in heavy soil. Smaller sizes may be planted shallower. Gladiolus do best when grown in a well drained soil and supplied with lots of water. Use fertilizer sparingly on gladiolus at planting or during the growing season.

When planting for cut flowers, plant corms either in rows or beds. If you want them for garden decoration they are effective in sunny places either in groups or singly among other flowering plants.

After the plants are up be sure to dust weekly with 5 per cent DDT for thrips.

WEIGHT CONTROL

A basic and practical guide to weight control for people who want to lose, gain, or maintain their weight has just been issued by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. The guide "Food and Your Weight" stresses need for a varied and balanced diet of regular foods for healthful and lasting weight control. This leaflet provides up - to - date facts available on calories and energy needs and lists suggestions for people who wish to lose, gain or maintain weight. This bulletin also shows how to figure the number of calories needed every day to maintain desirable weight.

This bulletin advises people on reducing diets to lose no more than one or two pounds a week.

You may have a copy of this bulletin "Food and Your Weight" by calling my office FA 3-2251. This bulletin was prepared by nutritionists of U.S.D.A. Agriculture Research Service.

OUT OF PARISH

Your home demonstration agent will be in our capital city on the campus of LSU to attend the annual State Home Demonstration Council May 9-10-11th. Mrs. L. J. Bower, president of the parish council and the following delegates will attend the event: Mrs. C. D. Henderson, Mrs. Cleburne White. Mrs. Henderson is on the state Executive Board and will attend as the District Counselor.

It's getting time for homemakers to clean and store winter blankets. Our specialist, Mrs. Verna Guillory, offers a few suggestions to keep your balnkets soft and colorful as new. First remove loose dirt by shaking, brushing or vacuuming. Then pretreat dirty spots or stains. Use a mild soap and lukewarm water. Hot water and strong soap will cause blankets to shrink. Rinse the blanket well in lukewarm water two or three times is usually necessary. Gently press or squeeze as much water from the blanket as possible but no wringing or twisting. Follow the manufacturer's directions for drying your blankets in a dryer. If you hang them, use a double parallel lines. This allows better circulation for faster drying. Shape the blanket on the line by squaring the corners. Dry in the shade.

WASH AND WEAR

One of the main things consumers should learn about easy care fabrics is when to remove garments from a dryer. There is a critical point in the drying process when a garment should be removed from the tumble dryer. Research has shown that fabrics should be removed from the dryer while they are still slightly damp and before the tumbling action has stopped. Garments should be immediately hung on a hanger before placing in the closet.

Garments treated with the Baucare or Belfast process can go through the spin cycle of a washer and then be line dried. However, there are still some treated fabrics on the market that either should be removed from the machine before the spin cycle or rewet after spinning. When garments do need a touch up, it's best to press with a steam iron rather than sprinkling the garments and using a dry iron.

SEW SIMPLE

By Eunice Farmer

"Can a dress be made sleeveless by omitting the sleeves? Also, is there a special way of cutting the sleeveless armseye to look like Jackie Kennedy's — hers has that finished look, in winter or summer? I certainly will appreciate your help."

Mrs. S.S.

Dear Mrs. S.S.:

Any dress may be made sleeveless if you have made a slight alteration, as illustrated. Add [illegible] more fabric to the dress or blouse at the underarm and taper to nothing at the notch in front and back of armhole.

The "finished look" you are referring to, is obtained by cutting a facing for the armhole instead of binding it or hemming by hand. Use the armhole itself as a guide for cutting the facing, making a separate facing for the back and front. The facing should be about 2" wide when cut. After stitching the facing to the armhole, be sure to clip the seam allowance to the stitching line so the facing will lie flat and smooth next to the garment.

DEEP HEM ADDS APPEAL

Dear Eunice:

"Is it proper to make a wide hem on a sheer cotton dress? I have [illegible] made [illegible] but when I have done the same thing, my friend [illegible] I [illegible] cut the hem."

Mrs. J. C. H.

Dear Mrs. J. C. H.:

It is not only proper to have a very wide hem on sheer cotton dresses, but you usually see them only on expensive clothes. There is something very feminine about a full skirted, sheer dress; the deep hem only adds to its appeal. These hems can be 10" or 12" deep.

Your friends, who usually don't sew themselves, are the first to be critical of the clothes you make. If they are made well, fit well, and attractive in design and fabric, wear them with authority and confidence — you will get more compliments [illegible].

LINING FOR SHORTS

Dear Eunice:

Why are some shorts lined and others not lined? Is lining really necessary? If you do line them, how do you suggest doing this?"

Mrs. L. L. M.

Dear Mrs. L. L. M.:

The type of fabric the shorts are made of is usually the factor which determines whether or not they should be lined.

You may see silk shorts that are lined because of the weight of the fabric. They will also hold their shape a little better if they are lined. Most sport-weight cottons and linens are usually lined in a light weight washable fabric, in your more expensive ready-to-wear.

If you are lining shorts, cut the lining the same as the shorts themselves. Baste the lining fabric to the wrong side of your shorts fabric, also baste through the center of the darts, and then proceed to make them as if they were one piece of fabric.

YOUR SEWING GLOSSARY: Pin basting — Pin basting is an efficient and accurate way to hold two pieces of fabric together before machine stitching. Pins are placed at right angles to the edge of fabric. Place pins under seam line as illustrated, so the machine needle will be stitching over the fabric and not at the pins.

Please send all suggestions and questions to Sew Simple in care of Monroe Morning World.

Sherrouse PTA Installs Officers At Final Meet

Final meeting of the current school year was held by Sherrouse Parent - Teacher Association Monday morning, May 1. Mrs. J. G. Caldwell, first vice president, conducted the business session, during which Mrs. W. T. Lee gave a report of the state convention.

Mrs. W. W. Hathorn announced that the topic for the study-discussion group on May 10 will be "Are We Rushing Children into the Social Whirl?"

W. S. Gannaway of the school board discussed the school bond election on May 16 and urged all property owners to vote.

In an impressive ceremony, new officers for 1961-62 were installed by Mrs. J. M. McIlwain, past president of the P.-T. A. Corsages in the various hues of jewels were presented to Mrs. W. T. Lee, president; Mrs. W. L. Davis, first vice - president; Mrs. J. P. Greene, second vice president; Mrs. E. W. Miller, secretary; and Mrs. T. A. Morgan, treasurer.

A May Day program was presented for the parents by all the students of Sherrouse following the P.-T. A. meeting.

Review Club Concludes Season At May Day Fete

An age-old custom of May Day festivity was noted at the YWCA home on Jackson Street Monday afternoon for the annual meeting of the Review Club. Hostesses for the occasion were Mrs. E. P. Cudd, Mrs. L. N. Waddell, Mrs. C. B. Braun, Mrs. Robert Lewis and Mrs. W. M. Inabnet.

A May basket massed with Dorothy Perkins roses was placed on a table in the entrance and focal point in the library was a tall arrangement of Etoile de Holland roses.

The group assembled in the club room where the mantel was enhanced with an asymmetrical arrangement of Picture pink roses reflected in a columned mirror. Centering a polished round oak table was a ribbon covered May Pole surrounded by tiny figurines holding pastel ribbon streamers. Clusters of sweetheart roses completed the setting.

Mrs. W. M. Inabnet, president, welcomed guests to the final program meeting of the club's year of activities. She also introduced Mrs. N. R. Spencer, chairman of the advisory board, who was responsible for the afternoon's program. Mrs. Spencer's introduction of the guest speaker, Mrs. William H. McKelvey Jr., revealed that she was born in Wellington, New Zealand. At the age of six she moved to Durban in the Union of South Africa, where her parents still reside. She was educated in schools of South Africa and England. In 1953 Mrs. McKelvey received her doctorate degree from the University of London and for several years she was head mistress of a parochial school of the Church of England in South Africa for retarded children. For the past three years Mrs. McKelvey and her immediate family have resided in Monroe.

For the occasion the guest speaker was wearing a shirtwaist dress of blue and white print and a corsage of sweetheart rosebuds. Mrs. McKelvey's informative and entertaining talk included a contrast in culture, economic and social life of the many African tribes with that of the white population in South Africa. In conclusion she gave her views of current governmental affairs of the country which was followed by a question and answer period. On behalf of the club, Mrs. Spencer presented Mrs. McKelvey with an anthology of American Poetry.

During the social hour refreshments were served in the dining room, where the table, covered with green damask cloth had as a centerpiece a May pole on a white plaque, based with English ivy. Delicate blossoms of yellow and shades of purple carried out the color scheme of the May pole, completed with matching ribbon streamers. On the buffet a single hurricane candle was opposite a cone-shaped arrangement of flowers accenting the table's color motif.

Mrs. Inabnet and Mrs. J. C. Loftin, president - elect wore corsages complimentary to their afternoon dresses. They alternated at the crystal punch bowl which was centered with an iced mold of fresh fruit. Mrs. Waddell and Mrs. Lewis served trays of sandwiches and confections.

Members and guests present included Mrs. W. E. Bennett Jr., Mrs. Thomas C. Dansby, Mrs. W. L. Alexander, Mrs. Ruth Hundley, Mrs. Herschel A. Gentry, Mrs. McKelvey, Mrs. Robert Lewis, Mrs. W. M. Inabnet, Mrs. Fred Huenefeld, Miss Bess Sharp, Mrs. D. Ross Coates, Mrs. L. G. Buchanan, Mrs. W. B. Inabnet, Mrs. W. T. Davis, Mrs. H. M. Walters, Mrs. Tripp Faulk, Mrs. Sam Smith, Mrs. C. B. Braun, Mrs. J. C. Loftin, Mrs. L. N. Waddell, Mrs. Paul J. Newman, Mrs. Claude Smith, Mrs. A. T. Givens, Mrs. N. R. Spencer and Mrs. George Walker.

Band Concerts, Sight Reading Ends Festival

RUSTON (Special) — Band Concerts and sight reading events Saturday ended the three - day state music festival conducted at Louisiana Tech.

More than 2,600 pupils, who previously had won superior ratings in choral and band performances in district meets throughout Louisiana, participated in the programs here, according to L. V. E. Irvine, head of the Tech Music Department. Tech and the Louisiana Music Educators' Association collaborated in staging the contests here.

Don Steen of Lake Charles High School and Ronnie Boyd of Istrouma Senior High school, Baton Rouge, received superior ratings as student conductors here Saturday.

Results of the last of the band programs, with ratings for concert and sight reading, were as follows:

State Hospital Board Control Plan Discussed

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The States - Item said Saturday a proposal to place all hospitals, both public and private, under control of the state hospital board has alarmed hospital representatives.

The newspaper said 50 representatives of various hospitals met in Baton Rouge Friday in an attempt to tone down the proposal designed to put the hospital board in control of all phases of hospital operations.

It would affect all of the state's 125 hospitals the story said, and is scheduled for introduction at the fiscal session of the legislature beginning Monday.

It enacted, the newspaper said, it would mean the hospital board would control site, construction, staff, diet and all other phases of hospital operation.

The story said R. B. Walden, general council of the state department of hospitals, described the proposal as a state hospital licensing law. He said Louisiana is the only state that does not have such a law.

Area Officers Start Course In Traffic

Louisiana state, parish and local law enforcement officers will begin a five-day traffic school, under the direction of the Louisiana State University General Extension Division in Monroe tomorrow.

Traffic school sessions will meet at the State Police troop headquarters beginning at 8 a.m. May 8 through 12.

Classes are open to all officers of duly constituted law enforcement agencies in Louisiana. Operated on a non-fee basis, the school is conducted as a part of the LSU In-Service Law Enforcement Training Program.

Certificates will be issued to officers completing the course.

Louisiana State Police personnel taking part in the school will be Maj. M. J. Kavanaugh, Ruston; Capt. E. C. Lyles, Alexandria; Capt. M. E. Kidd, Monroe; and Captains H. Lee Arledge and David J. Keyser of Baton Rouge.

Ferguson, LSU, and Julian A. Martin of the LSU law enforcement training program.

Established in 1953, the LSU Law Enforcement Training Program is unique because it takes instruction to the officers at locations near their homes.

In the northern part of the state, training programs are coordinated by D. Farris Jones. Edward T. Mungovan is coordinator of programs in south Louisiana. Specialized training which includes the Monroe traffic school is coordinated by Martin.

Sponsored by the Law Enforcement Associations of Louisiana, the program is conducted in cooperation with the Federal Bureau of Investigation. According to Martin, the program is enthusiastically received by law enforcement personnel of the state.

Plan Opposed By Katangan

ELISABETHVILLE, The Congo (UPI)—Katanga Province Interior Minister Godefroid Munungo said Saturday Katanga would "fight to the last man" before submitting to the Central government's "blackmail" demands for a unified Congo.

He warned the United Nations that any attempt to force his mineral-rich secessionist province to accept the Central Government's demands could lead to "useless massacres and vain sacrifices."

Beauty Show Rehearsals To Start Monday

Steady rehearsals will begin tomorrow at 7 p.m. for the thirteen contestants in the Miss Northeast Pageant, scheduled Friday at 8:15 p.m. in Brown Auditorium on campus, Mrs. Clarice Brown Fluitt announced.

This year's winner of the beauty and talent contest will succeed Miss Northeast of 1960-61, Kirby Mooney, and represent Northeast Louisiana State College at the Miss Louisiana Pageant in Lake Providence.

Vying for the Miss Northeast title are Merilyn Burson of West Monroe; Bonnie Corder, Monroe; Bettie Gibbs, West Monroe; Toma Gross, Pioneer; Mary Ann McGee, Columbia; Kati McKenzie, Shreveport; Norma Jean Magee, Monroe; Sherry Sims, Rayville; Diana Smith, Oak Ridge; Sandra Stancil, Monroe; Tommie Jean Stockstill, St. Joseph; Judy Willis, Ferriday; and Rebecca Zwahlen, El Dorado, Ark.

A tea will honor the contestants Thursday from 4 to 6 p.m. in the home of President and Mrs. George T. Walker. Following this affair will be a dinner at the Paragon Club for contestants, judges, pageant committee members and special guests.

The two social occasions will give opportunity for judges to interview the coeds, the pageant directors explained.

Miss Northeast Saturday will make her first formal appearance on campus in her new role as she appears at the Gulf States Conference track meet. She will be honored again that night at the annual Dixie Ball, which is being sponsored by the Student Council.

Judges for the pageant will be Mrs. Estelle Sanders, prominent in music circles and civic organizations; Arthur Stone of the Louisiana Politechnic Institute faculty; Jim Williams, Monroe Chamber of Commerce director; and Leroy Anspach, well known in the field of music.

The Northeast Jazz Ensemble will provide musical background for the contest. Del Sawyer, assistant professor of music, will direct the 18-piece group.

Comprising the Miss Northeast committee are Dr. Fred Vogel, dean of student services; Miss Alma Lufcy, counselor to women; Miss Frances Baldwin, assistant professor of chemistry; Thomas McCann, associate professor of economics; Capt. Earl Trabue, assistant professor of military science; Mrs. Era Davis, assistant professor of home economics; J. O. Lancaster, supervisor of student scholarships and placement; and Mrs. Annie Lee West Stahl, associate professor of journalism.

Booster Singing Group To Meet This Afternoon

A number of song directors and special groups from several states are expected to take part in the program.

Singers will include Curtis Doss and the Wonder State Quartet, Crossett, Ark.; Barnett Quartet, Crossett; Herman McPhail, Houston, Tex.; The Tonette's, Quitman, La.; Rhymarie's Quartet, Chordsmen Quartet, of the Twin Cities, and others.

Last month's Booster session was not held, because of the Tri-State Singing Convention in Shreveport.

Plan Opposed By Katangan

ELISABETHVILLE, The Congo (UPI)—Katanga Province Interior Minister Godefroid Munungo said Saturday Katanga would "fight to the last man" before submitting to the Central government's "blackmail" demands for a unified Congo.

He warned the United Nations that any attempt to force his mineral-rich secessionist province to accept the Central Government's demands could lead to "useless massacres and vain sacrifices."
